This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE for 1886 was intended as the first volume of a yearly series which should complete the system of trade bibliography connected with the office of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, and it gave for the first time in continuous annual form the full information as to all the books entered by that journal during the year. Its success, though moderate, was sufficient to justify the continuation of the enterprise, and the ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE for 1887 is accordingly presented herewith. It follows the same general plan as the preceding volume—a plan which is more nearly complete and we trust more satisfactory than that of any Annual Catalogue issued in any other country or previously in our own.

The Catalogue of last year was, however, made by a photographic process, which had certain advantages, but also certain defects. This year an experiment has been made of electrotyping the title of each book as it was recorded in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and preserving these in individual electrotype plates. At the end of the year, these tiny plates were alphabeted and tacked upon wooden blocks, and the present Catalogue is printed, not from process plates, but from actual electrotypes. This is practically the development of a plan originally suggested by Professor Jewett, of the Smithsonian Institution, more than a generation ago—the first time, we believe, in which his plan has been put into practical operation.

It is impossible at this writting to say which of the two plans proves superior in mechanical execution and in money economy. After the issue of the present Catalogue, we shall hope to present in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY some statement of the comparative cost and convenience in preparation, and users of the two will be able to compare for themselves the mechanical execution. It is fair to say, however, that the gelatine process used for last year's Catalogue was worked at that time under considerable disadvantages and that its proprietors now claim to be able to do much better work. The method of the present Catalogue is a new departure in such work, and the question of method is one of much importance, not only as to the future continuation of this Catalogue, but in many relations in the library profession and the book-trade. Some few lapses of alphabeting may be discovered, owing to the difficulty of fitting the little plates accurately to the length of the column without occasional transposition.

The editor again begs to acknowledge the services of Miss M. M. Monachesi in making most of the title-entries and descriptive notes, and of Mr. A. Growoll in the practical work of arranging the Catalogue and in general oversight.

The Index has this year been made by actually preserving the type of the monthly indexes and merging these into one alphabet from time to time. This we had hoped would be a considerable saving both in editorial labor and in money cost. It is doubtful, however, whether there has been a real saving in either direction. The limits of saving in this work are reached much sooner than we had supposed, and the amount of correction necessary in editing to bring entries into their proper relation to each other has been very considerable.

The number of books recorded this year in our main list falls somewhat below the record of the previous one, being 4437 in 1887, as against 4676 in 1886. This, however, is without special significance, as publishers' carefulness in reporting their issues varies considerably from year to year, and the production is perhaps not less in 1887 than in 1886. Our system of bibliographical record, nevertheless, has on the whole become better year by year, so that our columns present a fairly adequate key to the current literature of America. But with all the careful work which has been done from this office to obtain full information from all quarters, we find, nevertheless, that a considerable number of small or special publishers who had issued books during 1887 had not reported their publications. A special circular was sent to all such of whom we could find any trace, and the results are given in the Supplementary Index, the starred titles being those of books which are not included in the lists by publishers which form the last division of this volume. It is most discouraging to the conscientious and careful bibliographer that so many publishers should fail in the simple matter of putting their works on record, especially since it involves only the cost of a little trouble and a two-cent postage-stamp. The list of publishers is about the same as last year, including as before a number of houses which are printers or publishers of but one or two incidental books. The number of the important names in the publishing trade does not seem to vary greatly from year to year.

So many questions have been asked, in connection with the discussion of international copyright, as to the relative proportion of books of American authorship and foreign reprints, that we endeavored to make some compilation of statistics on this subject. The lack of information as to copyright entry, and other difficulties connected with the task, have made it impossible to gather such statistics in any presentable shape. We trust, however, before many years, to have our records so nearly perfect as to make possible adequate report of this sort from year to year.

This volume, of course, is one part in the general American Catalogue system. The next large volume is to be in 1890. Throughout the work, the editor has to say that no one can be more sensible than himself of its sins of omission and of commission, and he can only ask the aid of the patrons of the successive volumes in supplying omissions and in otherwise giving their co-operation in making American trade bibliography as perfect as may be practicable.

ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1887

Full Titles by Authors.

NOTE.

In this list the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Sumuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1887,

Of Books recorded January 1 to December 31, 1887, with full titles and descriptive notes, arranged alphabetically by authors.

A., E. P. The Ashmeads; or, scenes in Northern Europe. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., 1887. 251 p. D. cl., $1.

A., L. M. Six weeks in old France; or, Dr. Thom's holiday; letters from Château de Montagland. N. Y., American Bureau of Foreign Travel, [A. de Potter,] 1887. c. 5+317 p. il. S. cl., $1.

In the form of letters, descriptions are given of the beautiful scenery, châteaux, castles, and cathedrals of the province of Touraine in Southern France, familiarly called "the garden of France." Stories and historical episodes and incidents of travel are interspersed. The lady who writes the letters has for travelling companions a party of American ladies and gentlemen, with whom the reader becomes quite well acquainted.

Abbot, Willis J. Blue jackets of 1812: a history of the naval battles of the second war with Great Britain; to which is prefixed an account of the French war of 1798; il. by W. C. Jackson and H. W. McVickar. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1887.] c. 7+409 p. sq. O. canvas, $3.

Gotten up on the same plan and uniform in general style and binding with "The blue jackets of '61," published last season. The title covers the contents; the material is written up in a way to claim the attention of young readers.

Abbott, Austin. New cases selected chiefly from decisions of the courts of New York. With notes. V. 17. [1885–'86.] N. Y., Diossy & Co., 1886. c. 45+591 p. O. shp., $5.

Abbott, Austin. The principles and forms of practice in civil actions in courts of record under the codes of procedure; adapted also to common law and equity practice. V. 1. N. Y., Baker, Voorhis & Co., 1887. c. 10+867 p. O. shp., $6.30.

Abbott, B: Vaughan. Decisions on the law of patents for inventions rendered by English courts since the beginning of the 17th century. V. 1, 1662–1833. Wash., C: R. Brodix, 1887. c. 19+513 p. O. shp., $6.50.

Abbott, B: Vaughan. Decisions on the law of patents for inventions rendered by English courts since the beginning of the 17th century. V. 2, 1834–1838. Wash., C: R. Brodix, 1887. c. 12+554 p. O. shp., $6.50.

Abbott, B: Vaughan. Decisions on the law of patents for inventions rendered by English courts since the beginning of the 17th century. V. 3, 1839–Feb., 1843. Wash., C. R. Brodix, 1887. c. 11+552 p. O. shp., $6.50.

Abbott, B: Vaughan. The patent laws of all nations. Wash., C: R. Brodix, 1886. c. 10+580; 32+634 p. O., shp., $13.

Abbott, C: C. A naturalist's rambles about home. 2d ed., rev. N. Y., Appleton, 1887, c. '84. 2+485 p. cl., $1.50.

Abbott, C: C., M.D. Waste-land wanderings. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 11+312 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The country on either side of Crosswick's Creek, a thread-like stream running through the centre of New Jersey and emptying into the Delaware, is the scene of Dr. Abbott's present work, which is in line with his previous works, "Upland and meadow" and "A naturalist's rambles about home." He describes with charming minuteness and to the accompaniment of many amusing anecdotes the beasts, birds, fishes, flowers, etc., of this little-known region.

Abbott, E. A. The kernel and the husk: letters on spiritual Christianity. [Anon.] Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. 9+375 p. S. cl., $1.50.

Dedicated to "the doubters of this generation and the believers of the next;" written by the author of "Philochristus," and "Onesimus." Consists of a series of letters in which, while the divine nature of Christ is insisted upon, his miracles are discredited on the ground that they are not in accordance with natural law.

Abbott, Lyman, D.D., and Halliday, Rev. S. B. Henry Ward Beecher: a sketch of his career; with analysis of his power as a preacher, lecturer, orator, and journalist, and incidents and reminiscences of his life. Hartford, Ct., American Pub. Co., 1887. c. '82, '87. 670 p. il. O. cl., subs. $3; leath., $4; hf. mor., $5; full mor., $10.

About 150 new pages have been added to this new edition, embracing a description of Mr. Beecher's last visit to England, his last discourses, his death, funeral services, and the various tributes to his memory. The earlier parts of the book present the facts of his life, with reminiscences by 39 eminent writers, and a number of his characteristic utterances grouped under topical headings.

A'Beckett, Gilbert Abbott. The comic Blackstone; rev. and extended by Arthur W: A'Beckett; il. by Harry Furniss. New rev. ed. Bost., C: C. Soule, 1887. 25+324 p. O. cl., net, $3.75.

Written forty years ago, the caustic wit and kindly humor of the "Comic Blackstone," still retain their charm. In preparing this new edition Mr. A'Beckett has been most careful to preserve as much of his father's original wit as possible. The changes and revisions have chiefly been made where changes in the laws necessitated them. Although the application and statement of the law are in all cases ludicrous, they are so extremely telling that they are an aid to memory with the student even through their entertaining quality. Ten funny full-page colored illustrations add to the interest.

Abercromby, Ralph. Weather: a popular exposition of the nature of weather changes from day to day. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 15+472 p. D. (International sci. ser., no. 58.) cl., $1.75.

This volume is not a mere compilation of existing knowledge, for the results of many of the author's original and unpublished researches are included in its pages. Such, for instance, as the explanation of many popular prognostics, the elucidation of the general principles of reading the import of cloud-forms; the classification of those cases in which the motion of the barometer fails to foretell correctly the coming weather; and the character of that kind of rain-fall which is not indicated in any way by isobaric maps. Most of the charts are derived from the publications of various meteorological offices

Across the Atlantic: a book for ocean travellers; consisting of a selection of scripture for both outward and homeward bound, interleaved with blank pages for notes and autographs. New ed. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. Sq. S. canvas, $1.

Adam, G. Mercer, and Wetherald, A. Ethelwyn. An Algonquin maiden. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [1887.] 5–240 p. S. (Lovell's lib., no. 846.) pap., 20 c.

Adams, Brooks. The emancipation of Massachusetts. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. '86. 5+382 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Begins with a brief summary of the religious persecutions in the old world which led to the colonization of Massachusetts, and gives a detailed history of that Puritan Commonwealth and of the development of the different sects, which in their turn were all persecuted by the parties in power. The Antinomians, the Anabaptists, the Quakers, the Witches, etc., etc., and their special doctrines are clearly described. A full history of the founding of Harvard College and its influence on the thought of that day and of our own are given. The authorities consulted are given in foot-notes to vouch for each statement. The work shows how amidst hardship and apparent failure Massachusetts "slowly achieved her civil and religious liberty, and conceived that constitutional system which is the root of our national life." Fifteen-page index.

Adams, C: Follen. Dialect ballads; il. by "Boz." N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 5–136 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Humorous poems in German-American, Irish-American, and Yankee dialect, with others in plain English. A companion volume to "Leedle Yawcob Strauss, and other poems," with which it is nearly uniform in size and general style. The illustrations, which are very clever, are, like those in the previous volume, from the pencil of Mr. M. J. Sweeney ("Boz").

Adams, Herbert B. Notes on the literature of charities. Baltimore, Md., [N. Murray, Agt.,] Johns Hopkins Univ., 1887. c. '87. 48 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, 5th ser., no. 8.) pap., 25 c.

Adams, Herbert B. Seminary libraries and university extension. Balt., N. Murray, agt. Johns Hopkins Univ., 1887. c. 33 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, 5th ser., no. 11.) pap., 25 c.

Three papers on Seminary libraries and university extension: The work of libraries; University extension in England.

Adams, Herbert B. The study of history in American colleges and universities. Wash., Government Printing Office, 1887. 299 p. il. O. (Bureau of education, circular of information, no. 2, 1887.) pap.

Adams, H: C. Public debts: an essay in the science of finance. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 12+407 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Adams, I: E. Life of Emory A. Storrs; his wit and eloquence, as shown in a notable literary, political, and forensic career. Phil., Hubbard Bros., 1887. 800 p. O. cl., subs., $3.75.

Adams, Mrs. Leith. Aunt Hepsy's foundling: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. 3+315 p. D. hf. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

A specially good addition to the neat and cheap series of novels the Lippincott Co. are publishing. Mrs. Leith Adams understands young girls, and in this story introduces two very charming ones. The scene is laid in New Brunswick, on the Reed farm. Aunt Hepsy, her servants Samson and Maggie, her neighbors and friends are well-executed character studies. This edition is authorized, but the book was reprinted in this country in 1881.

Adams, Mrs. Leith. Aunt Hepsy's foundling: a novel. N. Y., Norman L. Munro, [1887.] 294 p. D. (Munro's lib., no. 768.) pap., 20 c.

Adams, Mrs. Leith, [Mrs. Laffan.] Geoffrey Stirling: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. 397 p. D. hf. cl., 50 c.

The main incident is a crime which impoverishes a great many people, causes much sorrow, and puzzles the worthy people of Beeklington for a number of years when a clever woman discovers that the author of this deed has lived in their midst, loved and respected for a number of years. This discovery profits her little, as Geoffrey Stirling's death makes her revengeful plans a failure.

Adams, Mrs. Leith. Madelon Lemoine: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. 504 p. S. (Lippincott's series of select novels, no. 77.) pap., 25 c.

See notice, "Weekly record," P. W., Aug. 30, '79, [398.]

Adams, Sarah Flower. Arise! my soul, arise. Easter ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. Il. sq. O. pap., $1.

Adams, Sarah Flower. Nearer, my God, to thee. Miniature ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. Tt. pap., ribbon-tied, 35 c.

Adams, Sarah Flower. Nearer, my God, to thee; il. by photogravures after original designs by F: W. Freer. N. Y., F: A. Stokes & Bro., 1887. c. ed. No paging, sq. S. pap., ribbon-tied, 75 c.

Adams, Sarah Flower. Nearer, my God, to thee. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1887. il. sq. Tt. pap., ribbon-tied, 25 c.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud."] ed. Little one's annual, v. 6; illustrated stories and poems for the little ones. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1887. il. sq. O. cl., $2.25; bds., $1.75.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Our standard-bearer; or, the life of General U. S. Grant: his youth, his manhood, his campaigns, and his eminent services; il. by T: Nast. New ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] c. '68, '87. 3–366 p. D. cl., $1.50.

New ed., with an additional chapter bringing the General's story down to the day of his death; gives some account of his eight years in the White House, his sickness, and the pageant and ceremonies attending his funeral.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Ready about; or, sailing the boat. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. 5–333 p. il. S. (The boat-builders ser., no. 6.) cl., $1.25.

This concludes the twelfth series for young people written by "Oliver Optic." The whole art of boat-building, boat-rigging, boat-managing, and boat-sailing has been taught by means of interesting stories, introducing boys meant to teach other useful lessons of importance in shaping the young readers' lives and characters.

Addison, C: G. On torts: a treatise on wrongs and their remedies, 6th ed.; by Horace Smith; with Am. notes by H. G. Wood. Bost., C: C. Soule, 1887. c. 2 v., 100+468; 4+469–935 p. O. shp., $12.

Addison, Jos. Selected essays; with an introduction by C. T. Winchester. Bost., Chautauqua Press, [Rand, Avery & Co.,] 1886. c. 3–175 p. S. (Chautauqua lib., garnet ser., no. 2.) cl., 75 c.

Social papers on society, fashion, and minor morals, in which Addison displays his rare gifts of refined humor, delicious satire, and graceful style. Prof. Winchester's excellent introduction gives one a sympathetic acquaintance with the author, and makes one ready to believe that "to read Addison's best papers is to take a lesson in good manners as well as in good literature."

Æschylus. Euminides; with introduction and notes by A. Sidgwick. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1887. S. (Clarendon press ser.) cl., 75 c.

Æschylus. The seven against Thebes; with an introduction, commentary, and translation, by A. W. Verrall. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1887. 38+179 p. O. cl., $2.

Agatha and the shadow: a novel. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. '86. 3–321 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of the Puritans and the old colony days. The hero is Bernard Anselm, son of the great India merchant of Amsterdam. He comes to America, and marries Agatha, the Puritan daughter of Elder Brewster. An innocent entanglement in his early days with a Jewish maiden Rachel, is the shadow which darkens the lives of both Agatha and her husband. In a spirit of revenge Rachel follows Anselm to the colonies, and leaves no method untried to destroy him. The background to the story of early New England history and descriptions of noted places, is one of its chief charms.

Agnew, Daniel. A history of the region of Pa., north of the Ohio and west of the Allegheny River, of the Indian purchases, and of the running of the southern, northern, and western boundaries; also, an account of the division of the territory for public purposes, and of the lands, laws, titles, settlements, controversies, and litigation within this region. Phil., Kay & Bro., 1887. c. 7+246 p. O. hf. shp., $2.

Alcott, Louisa M. A garland for girls. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1888 [1887.] c. 6+258 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

Seven short stories: May flowers; An ivy spray and ladies'-slippers; Pansies; Water-lilies; Poppies and wheat; Little button-rose; and Mountain-laurel and maidenhair. Most excellent advice on duty, health, unselfishness, occupation, reading, travelling, home-making, manners, etc., is given in Miss Alcott's loving, attractive, motherly way. Girls will read these stories without perhaps clearly seeing the author's purpose, for every story is thoroughly interesting as a story. Miss Alcott wrote them for her amusement when confined to her room and gave them the names of favorite flowers sent by friends to cheer her.

Alcott, Louisa M. Lulu's library. V. 2. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 275 p. S. cl., $1.

Contents: The frost-king and how the fairies conquered him; Lilybell and Thistledown; Ripple, the water-sprite; Eva's visit to fairyland; Sunshine, and her brothers and sisters; The fairy spring; Queen Aster; The brownie and the princess; Mermaids; Little bud; The flower's story. Miss Alcott wrote these stories at the age of sixteen for her younger brothers and sisters. They have appeared under the title "Flower fables." V. 1 was on record in P. W., no. 723, Dec. 5, '86.

Alexander, Archibald. Some problems of philosophy. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1886. c. 4+170 p. S. cl., $1.

The author is Professor of Philosophy in Columbia College, New York City. In his labor of instructing different minds he is brought to realize the difficulty of explaining satisfactorily such problems as: The problem of the ultimate nature of matter; the problem of the origin of organic being; some difficulties connected with any doctrine of the ego; unconscious mental states; the problem of physiological psychology; reason in contradiction to reason; the relation of belief to knowledge; the problem of human will; the immortality of the soul; the feeling of obligation and moral knowledge; is Hedonism equivalent to pessimism? the ethical conflict; the doctrine of a first cause; the infinite; God and the principle of right; the atheistic meaning of pantheism; and the doctrine of cause and effect. The style is clear and attractive.

Alexander, A: W. Grant as a soldier. St. Louis, published by the author [A: W. Alexander,] 1887. c. 249 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Aims to give a true estimate of Gen. Grant's place in history as a military leader. Contains no personal biography nor reference to his career subsequent to the close of the war. Beginning with the battle of Belmont, and taking up successively Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, and the other great campaigns in which Grant figured down to the surrender of Lee, the author presents a number of facts and statistics concerning them, which certainly do not add to Grant's reputation as a great general.

Alexander, E. Porter. Railway practice; its principles and suggested reforms reviewed. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 60 p. D. (Questions of the day, no. 36.) cl., 75 c.

A criticism of several proposed solutions of the railroad problems, the one being offered by Mr. J. F. Hudson in his volume called "The Railways and the Republic," the other by Prof. R. T. Ely in Harper's Magazine for July, August, and September. A third has long been before the public in the Reagan bill, which twice passed the House, has failed in the Senate. The author's method consists in sifting from the fifty years of experiment and railway transportation certain principles, settled by actual test, and put beyond question or dispute, making what may be called the science of railway management. These axioms he applies to the reforms under review.

Alexander, S. B. Ten of us. Bost., Laughton, McDonald & Co., 1887. 165 p. S. cl., 75 c.; pap., 25 c.

A party of ten formed themselves into a sort of society which met at regular intervals at the house of one of the number, where they discussed topics of current interest. On one of these occasions, the literature of the day was freely criticised, and a motion made for each member to write a story. The gentlemen of the house offer a $100 prize for the best one. The first—"The modern Mephistopheles"—is aptly called, as its author gives a strange conception of his Satanic Majesty; "Behind the scenes" leans to the humorous; "Out of the sea" is strange and adventurous; "A dual life" is weird and fantastic; and the remaining six are not behind these in interest.

Alger, Horatio, jr. The store boy; or, the fortunes of Ben Barclay. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1887.] c. 314 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

Ben Barclay began his career in the village store at Pentonville; hence the name of the story, which tells of Ben's encounter with a tramp, his rivalry with Tom Davenport, his friendship for Rose Gardiner, a short trip to New York, an experience with two of Gotham's sharpers, how he captured the pickpocket, the reward proffered him for honesty, and how he gained an ascendency over Squire Davenport, reclaimed his mother's property, and launched himself into a successful business.

All in the wild March morning. Chic., The Illustrated Pub. Co., [1887.] 3–224 p. D. (Popular ser., no. 10.) pap., 25 c.

The heroine is a meek little girl, the salaried reader of Madame Vivian, until that lady finds that her companion is dangerously attractive to her nephew Stephen Tredennick, then Madame commences a course of unjust treatment, and other complications ensue, which cause Winnifred Caerlyon to go to America; after a lapse of years she returns to England, meets her old lover under peculiar circumstances, and rescues him from a very perilous position, "All in the wild March morning."

Explains the author's theory about hands; how one may judge of character and a person's past and future by the shape or lines. Divided into four parts, treating of "Hand superstitions and customs," "The physiology of the hand," "On the shape of hands," and "Cheiromancy or palmistry."

Allen, Frank G. Autobiography of Frank G. Allen, minister of the gospel; and selections from his writings; ed. by Rob. Graham. Cin., Guide Printing & Pub. Co., 1887. c. 11+259 p. O. cl., $1.

The writer of this autobiography, who died quite recently, was a well-known Baptist evangelist, who did good work through Ohio and Kentucky. His life was uneventful, its interest appealing chiefly to personal friends.

Allen, F. M. Through green glasses; Andy Merrigan's great discovery, and other Irish tales; il. by M. Fitzgerald. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 4+236 p. S. pap., 50 c.

Seven stories which the author claims to have heard from "Dan, an illiterate Irish story-teller with an extraordinary fund of humor and totally devoid of chronology." The tales are: Andy Merrigan's great discovery; From Portlaw to Paradise; King John and the mayor; The wonderful escape of James the Second; The last of the dragons; The siege of Don Isle; Raleigh in Munster. Almost all are written in the Irish brogue, indicated by very skilful spelling.

Allen, Grant. Common sense science. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 2–318 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Grant Allen is one of the brightest and most interesting of writers on natural history topics, and also upon what may be called everyday science. In this volume there are twenty-eight chapters upon as many different subjects, none of them exhaustively treated it is true, but all of them suggestive, and calculated to arrest attention, and induce further investigation. Among the most notable papers are: The balance of nature; Instinct and reasoning: The origin of bowing; The earth's interior; Knowledge and opinion; Second nature; Self-consciousness; Sleep, etc.

Allen, Willis Boyd. The mountaineer ser., 5 v. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1887.] c. il. S. cl., $2.

Contents: The mountaineers, 4+45 p. Lost on the mountain, 3-63 p. Winnie's black dog, 3-56 p. Mountaineers at school, 3-62 p. The danger signal, 60 p. The series is intended for the little ones. The five volumes form a connected story concerning the King family, who were obliged to leave their home and begin a struggle for existence elsewhere. They began on a mountain, where the father had offered to him the agency of the railroad station and a small store patronized only by summer visitors. Thus they became "mountaineers," and Mr. Allen tells how they accommodated themselves to their new surroundings, what adventures there befell them, etc.

Allies, T: W. The throne of the fisherman, built by the carpenter's son; the root, the bond, and the crown of Christendom. N. Y., Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1887. 24+555 p. O. cl., net, $2.80.

This work begins with a short review of the "witness of history during eighteen centuries to the See of St. Peter: its divine institution, its acceptance by the [Roman Catholic] Church, and the manifold support given to it during so many centuries by Providence, as shown in the acts both of foes and of friends. In two chapters which follow, the author, planting himself upon the Nicene Council, retraces the history of the three preceding centuries in their action upon the church's hierarchy. For this purpose he makes a careful analysis of the constitution which that council shows to have been in operation when it was held. After this, eight chapters are devoted to the unfolding of the church's constitution, from the Nicene Council to that of Chalcedon."

Allinson, E: P., and Penrose, Boies. Philadelphia, 1681-1887: a history of municipal development. Balt., N. Murray, Agt. Johns Hopkins Univ., [Phil., Allen, Lane & Scott,] 1887. c. 51+392 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, extra volume, no. 2.) cl., $3; shp., $3.50.

"The purpose of this work is to record the history of the development of the municipal institutions of Philadelphia; to trace, with considerable detail, the many changes in the powers, duties, and position of the mayor; in the election, appointment, and powers of the other executive officers; in the position and relation of the various departments; in the legislative and executive powers of councils; in the frequently shifting distribution of executive power between the mayor and councils; in the procedure of councils, and in the financial system of the city. Such a history is of peculiar interest to students of municipal questions, because the development of the government of Philadelphia begins with the most characteristic form of a mediæval English borough corporation, and, after passing through almost every system and phase of municipal institutions, ends with a charter embracing the latest ideas of municipal government. The work is based upon the acts of assembly, the city ordinances, the state reports, and many other authorities cited elsewhere." —Preface.

Ames, F. S. D. Wishes on wings; a roundabout story. N. Y., Catholic Pub. Soc. Co., 1887. 3+248 p. D. cl., net, 80 c.

Two pretty stories for young Catholic children of 12 or 14; "Wishes on wings" has an interesting heroine, Millicent Grainger, who is first almost spoiled by good fortune, but whose better qualities are brought out by adversity and sorrow. "Inside the gate; or, the hundred sheep," is a story of a young boy who becomes a priest and dies a martyr to his faith and earnestness.

Amicis, Edmondo de. Cuore: an Italian schoolboy's journal; a book for boys; tr. from the 39th Italian ed., by Isabel F. Hapgood. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1887. c. tr. 6+326 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This journal runs over ten months of a young Italian boy's school life from October to the following July. It is a charming narrative of the events of his little world—the good deeds and misdeeds of his school-fellows, the kindness and wisdom of his teachers, and the methods of his school. It also includes letters from his father and mother rich in good advice, and a little story for each month, which is read to the scholars for the lesson it inculcates. Altogether a most instructive and entertaining book for boys.

Andrews, C. C. Brazil; its condition and prospects. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 352 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author's object is to answer such questions as an intelligent American would be likely to ask in regard to Brazil. His means of acquaintance with that empire are principally derived from a residence of three years at Rio de Janeiro, while in the service of the United States Government as Consul-General to Brazil, during which period he made a few journeys into the interior. His duties brought him into frequent personal intercourse with the leading business houses and with many of the best-informed people of the country.

This work does not offer matter for rote recitation, but "blazes through the jungle of the ages a course along which the instructor can guide his class much as he lists." It comprises 11 chapters of generic topics: The study of history; The old East; The classical period; The dissolution of Rome; The mediæval Roman empire of the west; Feudalism and the French monarchy; Islam and the crusades; Renaissance and reformation; The thirty years' war; The French revolution; Prussia and the new empire; each conspicuously broken up into about 20 paragraphs, after the fashion of the best German Lehrbücher, and all constituting together a compact, orderly, and rounded whole. Especially to encourage and facilitate collateral reading a select bibliography precedes each chapter and paragraph.

A little waif, John Goodrich, applies at the home of the Traftons one Thanksgiving day for food and shelter. They take him in, and make an opportunity with a neighbor to get him work. From this out his fortunes brighten. In the form of a pleasant story is shown how much industry and earnest desire may accomplish in a year.

Andrews, Lilian Herbert. Only a farmer's daughter. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. c. 206 p. D. pap., 25 c.

The authoress is a member of the New York Bar. "Only a farmer's daughter" marries the hero, a writer of novels, and lives happily with him until at a great reception he meets an adventuress, with whom he had once been in love. She follows him around and notifies his wife of his whereabouts, and makes things very sad for the "farmer's daughter." All ends happily. The hero is supposed to be an intimate friend of a police inspector who initiates him into the details of crimes, in one of which the adventuress had figured many years ago.

Anecdotes illustrative of New Testament texts. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1886. D. (Clerical lib., no. 8.) cl., $1.50.

Annual American catalogue, 1886; being the full titles, with descriptive notes, of all books recorded in the Publishers' Weekly, 1886, with author, title, and subject index, publishers' annual lists and directory of publishers. N. Y., Office of the Publishers' Weekly, 1887. c. 17+196+128 p. O. cl., $3.50; pap., $3.

The body of this catalogue is a reproduction in alphabetical order of the full title with descriptive notes given in the "Weekly Record" of the Publishers' Weekly during the year 1886, numbering above 4500 entries. The index, covering about 10,000 entries, is the short-title record of the same books by author, title, and subject, containing in the author entry the date of the "Weekly Record" in which it first appeared, which is approximately a key to the date of publication. The list of publishers preceding the main catalogue, numbering 517, forms a practical directory to the American publishers really issuing books.

Appleton, G. W. A terrible legacy: a tale of the South Downs. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 3+354 p. S. pap., 50 c.

The mystery of this story is so ingeniously worked out, that any light thrown on it would spoil the interest for the reader. The disappearance of a woman, who is supposed to be murdered, and a remarkable will are the leading incidents. The story is told with considerable spirit and humor by young Tom Swift, upon whose youthful shoulders devolves the task of unravelling the mystery.

Ireland of the present, with its internal dissensions, its rebellious and often dangerous peasantry, is the background to a pretty love tale in the author's earlier style. "The Duchess," otherwise Norah Delaney, is a most delightful little heroine, both witty and brave and beautiful enough to turn any man's head. Her old "Dad," her cousin Denis, and his English mother are all well-drawn characters.

Armstrong, W: Thekla: a story of Viennese musical life. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 239 p. D. cl., $1.

Thekla is a Bavarian girl who, at an early age, developed a beautiful voice and a passion for music. Her father, a harsh, unloving man, sends her to Vienna for a musical education, calculating to make a fortune out of her. She is a great success, is admired enthusiastically both on and off the stage, and ends by making a great match and becoming the heir to a large fortune. Commonplace as the plot is the story is so freshly and humorously told that it is exceedingly interesting.

Not counting his first collection, which was published over thirty years ago, this is the seventh volume from the pen of Mr. Arnold, the inspiration of which is derived from eastern sources, generally from those which derive whatever interest they are supposed to have from the mythological and religious elements of the Hindus and Mohammedans."—Mail and Express.

The first volume of a new historical series on a new plan, aiming to set forth both for schools and readers the political and social history of England. To each well-defined period of history is given a little volume made up of extracts from the chronicles, state papers, memoirs, and letters of the time, and also from other contemporary literature, the whole chronologically arranged and chosen so as to give a living picture of the effect produced upon each generation by the political, religious, social, and intellectual movements in which it took part. When needed, a glossary is added, and brief explanatory notes. To each volume is also appended a short account of the writers quoted, and of their relations to the events they describe, as well as such tables and summaries as may facilitate references. The illustrations are of monume .ts, documents, sites, portraits, coins, etc.

Having given in former volumes a history of the manners and customs of the 17th and 18th centuries in England, the author now sketches the dawn of the present century. Never were changes so rapid. Police, locomotives, steamships, gas, electricity, the present methods of commerce were all born within the present century, and this book with its many illustrations enables the reader to form a clear idea of its dawn, to grasp its singularities and perceive the most striking contrasts to the present time, and the extent of the advances made in civilization. Many of the illustrations are caricatures, but they tell a useful story.

"Originally this was an address delivered on May 1, 1887, before the Labor Lyceum of Boston. It had been arranged that Mr. E. M. Chamberlin should reply. Accordingly he was furnished in advance with a copy of the address, and his remarks, together with Mr. Atkinson's rejoinder, are incorporated in the present volume. As usual, Mr. Atkinson adds some graphic tables. The discussion confirms the impression that it is impossible to draw a line between labor and capital, that capital is dead matter until it is used by labor of all kinds, and that labor is by no means confined to wage-earners, nor capital to employers."—Boston Beacon.

These lessons are plain and practical, being a transcript of work that has been successfully done in the school-room. They are intended for children from five to eight years of age, the plan being so elastic that it may be used in any of the primary grades. The first part of the book is devoted to "Outline lessons for oral work," and aims to suggest to teachers simple and interesting methods of increasing the child's vocabulary, and leading him to appreciate the value of the words he is constantly hearing and speaking. The second part of the book is devoted to "Suggestive lessons" for blackboard reading and word-building. The plan embraces the best known features of the various methods of teaching reading.

A story with a purpose; aims to show how a departure from the old conventional methods and an infusion of common-sense ideas into our educational methods would be productive of the most beneficial results. The author gives at the opening the picture of a country village school which, through lack of tact and knowledge on the part of teachers and of interest on the part of parents, had become almost worthless. A new teacher, with a mind and method of her own, is engaged for a term, and she sets at work with a determination to revolutionize the existing condition of things. It requires a good deal of tact and management to enlist parents and pupils in her plans, but she does it by quiet persistence, and the end of the term sees not only a remarkable change in the school, but in the village itself.

Bain, Alex. On teaching English; with detailed examples and an inquiry into the definition of poetry. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 11+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The present volume is auxiliary to the enlarged edition of the author's "English composition and rhetoric." It embraces principally the three following topics: First, a review of the prevailing opinions as to the proper mode of teaching English, together with a critical estimate of their respective merits. Second, a brief sketch of the rhetorical method, followed by a series of select lessons on the leading qualities of style—intellectual and emotional. Third, an inquiry into the definition of poetry.

Bain, Alex. English composition and rhetoric. Enl. ed. Pt. 1: Intellectual elements of style. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 17+310 p. D. cl., $1.40.

In remodelling the manual of "English composition and rhetoric," after twenty years' experience of teaching the author has seen fit to narrow its scope, so as to do more ample justice to certain portions of the work chosen for their general unity. The subject as thus modified has been much enlarged both in exposition and in illustration, and is made to fall under two divisions, a separate volume being given to each. The topics of the present volume are the following: Order of words; number of words; the sentence; the paragraph; figures of speech; and finally, the qualities of style named respectively clearness, simplicity, impressiveness, and picturesqueness. Every one of these topics is fully expounded, exemplified, and applied to the arts of criticism and composition.

Bainbridge, Elizabeth G., comp. School-room games and exercises; comp. and written by E. G. Bainbridge. Chic., The Interstate Pub. Co., [1886.] c. 2–135 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Little games and exercises for teaching geography, history, composition, spelling, arithmetic, etc., compiled by Miss Bainbridge, who is a teacher of experience, from many excellent sources, and also written by herself. "She beiieves that the introduction of such exercises will not only rest the pupils, but will brighten their faculties, concentrate their attention, and strengthen them for a renewal of more difficult mental work. It is really teaching by new methods; no less teaching that there is amusement in it.

Baker, Ella M. Seven Easter lilies. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. 300 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A story for girls, pure, sweet, and full of encouragement, and calculated to exert a strong influence for good. The author feels that there is something peculiarly sacred and tender about Easter lilies, partly, perhaps, from their association with the day and season whose name they bear. The story tells what became of seven lilies which were tended by as many different hands in different homes, and how they affected those homes by the silent lessons they taught.

The author seems to be a fatalist; the characters are all grouped to illustrate a fixed belief in the part destiny plays in the lives of humanity. The heroine is a pretty little German peasant, who acquires some knowledge and strange ideas from books selected at random; these ideas are fostered by an English artist, and then fate again interposes by sending two English travellers who play a strange part in the life of the little Lieschen, who seems to have no power to combat her troubles, when the fitful fate behaves more kindly and sends Lieschen back to Passau, the quiet home of her youth, and leaves her at the beginning of her second romance.

Baker, J: F. The federal constitution : an essay. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 6+126 p. D. cl., $1.
"It is not my aim, in the following essay, to attempt or even propose any innovations upon the system thus established, nor to strike out any new path, with any hope, the most visionary, of improvement, but rather to present in a small compass, and in as clear a light as possible, an outline of the origin, growth, and principles of constitutional liberty as enunciated by the Federal Constitution."—Preface.

Baker, Josephine R. Roundtop and Squaretop, the Gates twins. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1887.] c. 343 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
A continuation of "Dear Gates" published a year ago. The New England farm-house with group of bright children whose names have become almost lost in the familiar nicknames, is as homelike as before. Mrs. Gates is full of bustle and business, but finds time to celebrate the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving day in a manner to instruct as well as amuse her children. The twins who give the title to this volume are in the habit of getting into many scrapes. "Dear" still plays the older sister's part with all her well-known goodness.

Baker, W: Spohn. Character portraits of Washington as delineated by historians, orators, and divines, selected and arranged in chronological order, with biographical notes and references. Phil., Rob. M. Lindsay, 1887. c. 351 p. Q. cl., $5, (limited to 350 copies.)
The purpose of this volume is to exhibit the character of Washington as understood and portrayed by some of the best writers and thinkers, as well by contemporaries, whose personal knowledge and convictions lend additional value, as by those of a later day, whose careful study and critical analysis render their testimony of equal weight and importance. The book is a companion volume to the author's well-known "Engraved portraits of Washington" and "Medallic portraits of Washington," making the third of a series in which the results of years of critical research in the vast mass of permanent records bearing on the personality of Washington have been admirably arranged for consultation.

Balch, Elisabeth, ["D. T. S.," pseud.] Zorah : a love-tale of modern Egypt. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. 4+287 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.
Zorah is a slave who is rescued from a cruel snake-charmer by Mustapha Bey, the master of ceremonies at the Egyptian court, and presented to the girl he loves, the daughter of an English merchant. She declines the gift, and then Zorah is given to the queen of the harem. A well-told story of intrigue follows, in which many Eastern customs are described and explained. Witchcraft and poisoning are used by Zorah to smooth the path of true love for Mustapha Bey, whom she loves with a hopeless and most unselfish love. The visit of the Empress Eugenie to Egypt is well brought in. By the author of "Mustard leaves."

Baldwin, Ja. A story of the golden age : il. by Howard Pyle. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 10+286 p. il. D. cl., $2.
The various Greek legends and myths relating to the causes of the Trojan war have been woven by Prof. Baldwin into one continuous narrative ending where Homer's story begins. The hero of the Odyssey is the hero here, the story of his boyhood and youth being interwoven with the most beautiful of the old Greek myths. The book will interest boys, and prepare them for an enjoyable reading of Homer either in translations or in the original.

"This work of Professor Baldwin is intended by its author expressly for elementary classes. It seeks to aid them, by many happy devices, in making an inventory of the mental processes and in arranging the items methodically. It aims to familiarize those commencing the study with the technical nomenclature and useful discriminations used by writers of our day in treating this theme. Above all, it expects to teach the pupil how to attain the second order of observation; how to pass from the altitude of mind which observes external things to that altitude of mind which observes internal activities."—Preface.

Baldwin, Mrs. Mary R. Gurnet's garden; [also,] The new boy at Southcott. N. Y., Phillips & Hunt, 1887. c. 4-282 p. D. cl., $1.
"Gurnet's Garden" was first the home of Mother Gurnet, who attracted all the children by her beautiful flowers which she cultivated only to give them pleasure. After many years Miss Persis Marcel took the neglected garden and made Mother Gurnet's house a happy home for poor children. Roland Morton, the new boy at Southcott, a village in the Eastern states, comes to school conceited and careless, but under the influence of "Jamie," the good genius of the school turns out a healthy, noble boy.

A companion volume to the author's previous works, "Due west" and "Due south." A record of travel experience, with descriptions of the leading "sights" of Norway, Sweden, Russia, and Russian Poland. It is in the latter part of the work that the author betrays the most originality. Here his judgments of Russia, both concerning the government and people, differ from other writers. He finds the first more liberal and the last more contented than facts would seem to prove.

Balzac, Honoré de. The alkahest; or, the house of Claës. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. tr. 2+307 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

Balthazar Claës, belonging to a wealthy Flemish family, has a deep interest in chemistry, and gets farther and farther in speculation. He at last believes it possible to discover the primal substance, the true elementary matter out of which nature constructs everything. This search for the absolute becomes the master-passion of his life, and wife, home, children, and substance are all sacrificed to it.

Balzac, Honoré de. The country doctor. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. tr. 4+304 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

"The 'Country doctor' is not a novel in the ordinary sense of the term. It is rather a prose poem, and one of the most beautiful, captivating, and ennobling in any literature. Balzac himself said of it that it was a picture of 'the Gospel in action,' and the definition is keen and succinct. It is indeed a story of the noblest and most practical philanthropy. . . . The narrative of Dr. Benassis, his simple yet telling description of the methods by which he created a flourishing district and a populous and prosperous town out of an arid waste and stagnant and benighted hamlet, is unique both in manner and matter. . . Miss Wormeley has translated the book excellently, and has preserved as nearly as possible every shade of the author's meaning."—New York Tribune.

Balzac, Honoré de. The two brothers. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. tr. 6+376 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

The story is one chiefly of French provincial life at the beginning of the century. The lives and careers of the two brothers form a strong contrast—the one so thoroughly good and industrious, the other vicious in every way, obtaining finally through his unscrupulousness and audacity wealth, and a place in good society. The object is to illustrate that knavery often succeeds, where modest merit is very much at a discount. Even the mother of the two brothers loves the evil one best, though he refuses to go to her when she is dying; only then is she brought to a consciousness of the life long devotion, and self sacrifice of her good son—through the reprimand of her confessor.

Bamford, Mary E. The Look-about Club and the curious live things they found. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 4–187 p. il. sq. O. cl., $1.50.

The Look-about Club, is a party of children who know very little about natural history. Directed by their father and mother and "Aunt Nan," they begin the study of insects and the domestic animals. The stories and descriptions of the specimens they find and bring together at their meetings are so simply told that the youngest child can understand them. In large type and fully illustrated.

Little studies in natural history for young readers; they are all in the first person and autobiographical, the speakers being a wren, a flea, a pig, a dog, a salmon, and so on.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America, v. 3. Central America, v. 3. 1801–1887. San Francisco, The History Company, 1887. 15+776 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

This completes the history of Central America, covering the last days of Spanish rule, the achievement of independence, and the union with Mexico. It shows how the states joined in a confederation and formed a constitutional government, taking the constitution of the United States as its model. Civil war followed, leading to the dissolution of the republic and of the union. The various states are treated separately, showing the difficulties that have beset their development. Walker's campaign in Nicaragua is depicted and his career is followed till filibustering in Central America was crushed out. The adventurer is handled without gloves. One of the most important parts of the volume gives a general view of the resources of the different states, and of the characteristics of the inhabitants of each, together with descriptions of the principal cities. The volume closes with a careful review of the many efforts that have been made to establish interoceanic communication.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America, v. 17. California, v. 5, 1846–1848. San Francisco, The History Company, 1886. 15+784 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

Opens with the movements of Fremont in California, which at once stirred the natives to armed hostility. A great deal of attention is given to this explorer, and his course is carefully traced so long as he remained on the coast. Instructions from Washington to other government agents there are presented for the purpose of proving that less is due to him for effecting the conquest than has been popularly supposed. The Bear Flag revolt is described, which terminated with the raising of the United States flag by Sloat. The historian seeks to show that the Californians would never have revolted, had United States Consul Larkin's plans not been overthrown. The coming of the Mormon battalion is described, and the sending of the New York volunteers. The brief biographical sketch of all the pioneers that had entered California up to 1848 is completed in this volume.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America, v. 24. History of Oregon, v. 1. 1834–1848. San Francisco, The History Company, 1886. 39+789 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

The coming of the first settlers who emigrated to Oregon with the definite purpose of settling there is treated with great detail, the successive immigration of each year being treated separately. The crossing of the plains and intervening mountains with its attending hardships and suffering occupy considerable space. The unsuccessful mission efforts are described, and the final destruction of the Presbyterian by the Whitman massacre. The organization of the provisional government before the government had taken definite action is described, with the influences that led to it, and the Oregon question before congress, which at length resulted in the erection of a territorial government. Several chapters are given to the Cayuse war.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America, v. 27. British Columbia, 1792–1887. San Francisco, The History Company, 1887. 31+792 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

After giving a summary of the earliest voyages, a general view of the northwest coast is presented. The occupation of the country by the fur-traders, and the extension of their trading-posts all through the wilderness is fully treated. The character of the leading traders and the mode of life at the different posts are sketched at length. Considerable space is given to the discovery of gold and the great excitement that followed. The different mining districts are described in detail. The establishment of a colonial government follows the overthrow of the authority of the Hudson's Bay Company. Two chapters treat of the projecting and the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the final chapter gives a general view of the industries, the commerce, and the finance of that territory.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America, v. 31. Popular tribunals, v. 1. San Francisco, The History Company, 1887. 13+749 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

This is the first of the two volumes that have grown out of a large amount of material, bearing on vigilance committees. The opening chapters are devoted to a review of similar tribunals in other times and countries, and to a general discussion of the right of a community to take the administration of justice into its own hands. The secrets of the first great vigilance committee of San Francisco are now fully published for the first time, the author having obtained the archives of this committee of 1851, and also of the committee of 1856. The latter part of the volume is devoted to a general view of the action of vigilance committees in the other states and territories west of the Mississippi.

Bancroft, Hubert Howe. History of the Pacific States of North America. V. 32: Popular tribunals, v. 2. San Francisco, Cal., The History Company, 1887. c. 8+772 p. O. cl., $4.50; leath., $5.50; hf. cf., hf. rus., or hf. mor., $8; rus., mor., or tree cf., $10.

The volume treats chiefly of the second great vigilance committee of San Francisco, opening with an account of the ballot-box stuffing and the general political corruption that took the government of the city out of the hands of honest men. A description of the great tribunal and its method of organization follows; its opposition by the law and order party, and the positions taken by Sherman and Farragut in this connection. The extensive military organization is described, and the methods of trial and execution of prisoners in the hands of the committee. It closes with the labor agitations of California in 1877–'8.

The contents consist of a series of authors' readings which were supposed to have been given for a children's entertainment, in which the dead authors of certain nursery tales were represented by living ones. Therefore 'Hop o' My Thumb' was read by the Eminent Realist; the Apostle of Obscurity recited a myth; the leader of the Fleshly School intoned the 'History of Mary and the lamb;' the Disciple of Ambiguity told of 'Jack and the beanstalk;' the African Reminiscencer thrilled his audience with the story of 'Rumpeslopogaas;' the Illustrious Laureate sung of 'Cinderella;' the Grand Romancer of 'Beauty and the beast,' and all these celebrated people were introduced by the Distinguished Diplomat.

Baring-Gould, S. The Gaverocks: a tale of the Cornish coast. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1888 [1887.] 3+423 p. S. hf. cl., 50 c.

Scene laid on the Cornish coast of England. The Gaverocks are a family consisting of father, mother, and two grown sons, every one of whom have pronounced characteristics and prejudices that make their home-life very stormy. There are two heroines, both beautiful and who both almost ruin their lives for the men they love. An old family feud is the basis of the plot. The descriptions of scenery, manners, and customs of that part of England fifty years ago form a good background for a story of "true love" that certainly did not run smooth.

Baring-Gould, S. Red spider: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 322 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The author states that he partly owes the theme to the reminder a little German tale conveyed, and partly to a visit to his native parish, Bratton-Clovelly, where the scene is laid. Hillary Nauspian and Taverner Langford were seated upon a stone, talking, when a spider commenced to spin her web. This incident named the story and created enmity between the men, as both coveted the reputed luck of the money-spinner, who eventually lost her life in the dispute. Her place is quickly filled, however, by Honor Luxmore, who proves her worthiness to the title, "Red Spider" by her tact and managing qualities. A charming story, which abounds in quaint humor and the forgotten superstitions of Devon.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. A border shepherdess: a romance of Eskdale. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1887.] 4+325 p. S. cl., $1.
The border land of Scotland is the scene of the story; Faith Harribee is the heroine, a lovable woman, who shows herself equal to any emergency. There seems nothing but trying incidents throughout her life; first her sister's elopement, followed soon by her father and brother's death, and her doubts about her nephew's affairs, then her own sad love troubles add the romantic element and prove the undoubted strength of Faith's character.

Barr, Amelia E. Paul and Christina. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1887.] c. 4+227 p. S. cl., $1.
Paul is a strong, honest Shetland fisherman who marries Christina, a spoiled, shallow, selfish child of a hard-working widow. Christina does all she can to persuade her husband to become a smuggler to enable him to give her the gew-gaws her little soul longs for. He refuses, and she then defies him in every way and makes his home wretched. A child is born and the minister, a remarkably well-drawn character, refuses it baptism, hoping to bring the mother to a consciousness of her sins. Finally Paul leaves his home, sorrow and repentance come to Christina through events that are worked into a telling plot. The book is the companion picture to "Jan Vedder's wife." The Shetland character has been studied to good purpose by the author.

Barr, Amelia E. The squire of Sandal-side: a pastoral romance. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 342 p. D. cl., $1.
The scene is laid in an old manor-house situated at the foot of Seat-Sandal mountain in the Cumberland valley. The story has no depth of plot; the interest for the most part centres in the quaint romance of Charlotte Sandal and Stephen Latrigg, and the incident which made Stephen "Squire of Sandal-side." The characters are supposed to have lived in Wordsworth's time and Miss Barr introduces him in the story.

Barrett, Frank. The great Hesper: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 3–173 p. S. pap., 25 c.
A great uncut diamond found at Cape Town gives title to the book. It is owned in partnership by three men, the daughter of one, familiarly known as "the kid," having also some interest in it. It is brought to England, and whilst waiting to be cut is stolen; this is but the beginning of a long series of most exciting adventures, in which the readers' curiosity is cleverly kept on the alert as to who the real thief is. The author brings out a fresh idea in his hero, whom he makes a "nyctalops," that is one who is blind in the daytime, but gifted with extraordinary vision at night. The great possibilities here for the apparently supernatural may be imagined.

Barrett, Frank. His helpmate. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 3–256 p. S. pap., 30 c.
Madge Goddard's fate is settled by a picture her father Potter Goddard, an idle, impecunious artist, paints of her, and gets accepted by the London Academy. Two gentlemen, partners in the brewing establishment of Motley & Harlowe, lose their hearts to her counterfeit presentment. She accepts one through a desire for wealth, and then casts him off through real love for the other. The beauty of her character in adversity is the reason for the title. The character-sketching is very good, as are also the glimpses of Bohemian London. By the author of "The great Hesper."

Bascom, J: Sociology. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 12+264 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"The work does not promise a full and systematic discussion of the subject. . . . While theoretical completeness is by no means a matter of indifference in this treatise, there is a predominant interest in questions of immediate moment to society. Not much is attempted by way of formal inductive proof. . . . I have covered a large field suggestively, rather than a narrow field exhaustively."—Author's Preface. The author speaks first of the "distinct departments of sociology, then of the interaction of these departments, and later of the light thus brought to urgent social questions, and to the lines of growth which lie before us."

Bastin, Edson S. Elements of botany; including organography, vegetable histology, vegetable physiology, and vegetable taxonomy, and a glossary of the botanical terms. Chic., G. P. Engelhard & Co., 1887. c. 13+282 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

Many years' experience in teaching the subject have convinced the writer that there exists a genuine need for some work on botany better adapted to the wants of our high schools, academies, and colleges of pharmacy and medicine than any in present use. It is this conviction which has brought forth this work, which is simple and easy in arrangement, gradually leading the student up to scientific facts through his observation of ordinary plants and flowers and his common-sense. A too liberal use of technical terms and language has been avoided, and an endeavor made to teach as much as possible by illustrations.

Batchelor, G: Social equilibrium and other problems ethical and religious. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1887. 3-286 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Essays discussing some of the causes of social unrest and religious disintegration. They are hopeful, positive, and constructive. The names of the more important ones are: The revolt of the majority; The future of the minority; Religion its own evidence; Righteousness its own law; Free thought; Heredity and education; Ethics and happiness; The secular origins of Unitarianism in Salem, etc.

Bates, Arlo. A lad's love. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 2-281 p. D. cl., $1.

The scene is laid on the island of Campobello; the novel is essentially a summer one, of love-making, flirting, light gossip and badinage, moonlight expeditions by sea and land, and glimpses of exquisite scenery. The motive is a young Harvard graduate's love for a charming widow of thirty-five, who is the mother of a pretty, atractive girl of sixteen. Mrs. Van Orden is neither silly nor heartless, and is a thorough woman of the world, a most graceful tact being one of her many accomplishments. How she cures the lad of his love, and still retains his affection and respect is very nicely told.

The minor key predominates in these sonnets, which evidently voice a near and recent loss of the author. They are smooth and musical, but extremely sad. The dainty little work is printed only on one side of the sheet.

Bates, Fanny B., comp. Between the lights: thoughts for the quiet hour. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. c. 5+436 p. D. cl., $1.75.

For many years the compiler collected gems of poetry and prose in a scrap-book, which finally became so valuable that friends felt a delicacy in borrowing it and urged Miss Bates to publish its contents. She has arranged her material in the form of selections for a year. Almost every selection is signed, and the names of innumerable authors appear. Many favorite poems have been omitted owing to their length, and some have been admitted because their sentiments condoned their faults of diction. Index to first lines of quotations of verse.

Bates, Katherine Lee. Sunshine. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., 1887. c. No paging, il. Tt. pap., 50 c.

A little poem, in which the wild flowers and sunshine play their part in driving away the bad temper of a little lass who had hidden away in the grass in a fit of sulks.

Baylor, Frances Courtenay. Behind the Blue Ridge: a homely narrative. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 3-313 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A little valley in Virginia, shut off almost entirely from the outside world is the home of a set of characters that Miss Baylor describes with the humor and pathos that made "On both sides" so attractive. The Rebellion of 1861, the devoted loyalty of Virginians to the Southern cause, and incidentally a few of the now historical traits of the leaders of the South are happily worked in. There is little or no plot. It is a study of human character under conditions described with photographic accuracy.

Baylor, Frances Courtenay. Juan and Juanita; il. by H: Sandham. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. '86, '87. 3-276 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The story of a little Mexican boy and girl, who were captured by the Comanche Indians, one of the most fierce and warlike tribes, and carried off to the Llanos Estacados. After four years of captivity they made their escape, and safely accomplished the almost impossible feat of walking three hundred miles and more through virgin wilds, first to the frontier of Texas, and then back to the arms of their mother. The author assures us the story is founded on fact. Young readers obtain from it much knowledge of Indian craft and noble lessons of bravery and endurance. Part of the story was published in St. Nicholas.

"The present volume contains as much analytical geometry as can be read to our second class of mathematics within six or seven months of the scholastic year, after the study of plane and spherical trigonometry. . . . I have added an outline of geometry of three dimensions, as also a chapter on surfaces of the second degree." —Preface. The author is professor of mathematics in Santa Clara College, S.J., Santa Clara, Cal.

Bayne, P: Martin Luther, his life and work. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 2 v. 11+518; 9+583 p. por. O. cl., $5.

Chiefly a personal history of the great reformer, the work serving at the same time to present "an important phase of belief, a notable chapter in spiritual evolution." Divided into 15 books, the subjects of which are: Luther from various points of view; Boyhood and youth, 1483-1507; Spiritual crisis; Industrious peace; the ninety-five theses; Luther and Cajetan. The Leipzic disputation; The call to Germany; The diet of Worms; The Wartburg; The peasants' war; Katie; The new era; Pope Clement and Pope Luther.

Beal, W. Goodrich. Picturesque Cambridge; six original etchings. Bost., L. Prang & Co., 1887. c. In paper wrapper, $1.50.

The subjects of the six etchings are "Morning on the river," "Longfellow's home," "Cambridge on the Charles," "Corner of Massachusetts Hall and old churchyard," "Elmwood, Lowell's home," and "Evening on the Charles." All show in their subject, aside from the deftness of their execution, a singularly fine artistic sense for the beautiful and the picturesque.

Beard, Lina and Adelia B. How to amuse yourself and others: the American girl's handy book. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 12+474 p. il. D. cl., $3.

The publication of D. C. Beard's "What to do; or, the American boy's handy book," in 1882, led the authors to plan a book for American girls which should be equally original and practical. A few of the chapters originally appeared in the Youth's Companion, St. Nicholas, Harper's Young People, Golden Days, and Wide Awake. The authors have made all the articles, played all the games, and solved all the problems described. Everything a girl can possibly do for relaxation in all seasons of the year seems to have been thought of, and innumerable illustrations make the explanations clear.

Beaufort, Raphaël Ledos de. Franz Liszt; the story of his life. Bost., Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887. c. 233 p. il. and por. D. cl., $1.25.

A plain, unvarnished story of the life of the famous pianist. The events of his life from early childhood to the time of his death are given. In addition to the main work there is an essay by T. Carlaw Martin, entitled "Liszt as a littérateur," and a list of his chief compositions, together with the names of his principal pupils.

Beaumont, Mrs. B. Twelve years of my life: an autobiography. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1887.] 17–366 p. D. cl., $1.50.

This is a true story of twelve years passed by a Northern woman in Woodville, Miss. The lady writes in a pleasant, chatty style, and with an evident frankness that carries conviction. She went South in 1854 with her husband a machinist and her children, and had from the beginning to battle with the Southern prejudice against "Yankees." Her narrative is very graphic in its varied experience of keeping store, raising fruits and vegetables, and being suspected of being an Abolitionist. Yellow fever, too, was a familiar visitor, its terrors being well described.

This is as nearly as possible a complete collection of Spanish idioms, or of Spanish phrases, which, if literally translated, would fail to convey to foreign ears the sense in which they are understood by Spaniards. The translations have been made with great care, and numerous errors in the readings found in Spanish-English dictionaries are here corrected. The idioms are arranged on a plan so simple that any phrase may be found with the utmost ease.

Beckett, C: H: Who is John Noman? N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 318 p. S. cl., $1.

A little ill-treated boy, found by an aged recluse who lives on some high mountains, is the hero John Noman. He as well as his benefactor is the centre of a mystery, which is only solved in the last chapter. The story changes from America to England, and has some very sensational scenes.

Beecher, H: Ward. Aids to prayer. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1887.] 2–179 p. T. cl., $1.

A pretty little red-edged book, with a red-line frame to the page of selections from Mr. Beecher's published writings that appeared before 1864, when the book was first issued.

Beecher, H: Ward. Beecher as a humorist: selections from the published works of H: W. Beecher; comp. by Eleanor Kirk. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1887. c. 6+213 p. D. cl., $1.

The brief extracts which are comprised in the first half of the volume are mostly taken from Mr. Beecher's spoken words—sermons, lectures, etc.—the source being given in each case, that the reader may have "some hint of the general current of thought, from the surface of which these glancing ripples and bubbles have been caught." The longer extracts, towards the close, are perhaps more purely humorous and are from his written articles and books, some quite famous in their time, and all full of rollicking fun. The head-lines are a guide to the topics of each page, and there is besides a good topical index.

First published in America by Ticknor & Fields, 1866. Had been issued some years previously in England, without Mr. Beecher's knowledge or sanction.

Beecher, Rev. H: Ward. Proverbs from Plymouth pulpit; selected from the writings and sayings of H: Ward Beecher by W: Drysdale. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 230 p. D. cl., $1.
Grouped under topical headings such as "Nature," "Man," "Manhood," "Business," "Human life," "Amusements," "Religion," etc., etc. The work was begun nearly ten years ago, at Mr. Beecher's suggestion and under his guidance. After its completion the manuscript was in his hands, and he from time to time revised and corrected it. When his ministry came to a close, he had gone patiently over about a third of it. The remaining proverbs are as he had originally written them.

Beecher, Rev. H: Ward. Speeches on the American rebellion; delivered in Great Britain in 1863. N. Y., Frank W. Lovell Co., 1887. 368 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Beecher, H: Ward. A summer in England with H: Ward Beecher; giving the addresses, lectures, and sermons delivered by him in Great Britain during the summer of 1886; together with an account of the tour, expressions of public opinion, etc., ed. by Ja. B. Pond. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1887. c. 5+125+160+118+298 p. por. D. cl., $2.
The introductory chapters by Major Pond, Mr. Beecher's business manager and friend, giving an account of the trip to England during last summer is not only rich in personal details, but also embraces some private letters never before made public. Besides this account of the trip, there are eight addresses as delivered by Mr. Beecher, four of his lectures, and seventeen sermons and prayers. The photo-artotype portrait is a characteristic picture of Mr. Beecher, taken last year. The seven pages of manuscript fac-simile, given with the address for which the notes were jotted down, will be a point of much interest to all who like to see how such a master did his work.

Beecher, H: Ward. Life of H: Ward Beecher. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. c. 130 p. por. D. pap., 25 c.
"A comprehensive and accurate history of the great divine, from his birth to his grave, including selections from his sermons, writings, speeches, and letters, illustrating the multiform activity and genius of this great American editor, lecturer, preacher, novelist, and philosopher."

Beers, H: A. An outline sketch of American literature. N. Y., Chautauqua Press [Phillips & Hunt.] 1887. c. 287 p. S. cl., 60 c.
A companion to the "Outline sketch of English literature," published last year for the Chautauqua circle. In writing it, the author has followed the same plan, aiming to present the subject in a sort of continuous essay, rather than in the form of a primer or elementary manual. Though mainly a history of American belles-lettres, some mention is made of historical and political writings, but hardly any of philosophical, scientific, and technical works.

Beers, Rev. R. W. The Mormon puzzle; and how to solve it. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. '86. 2–195 p. D. cl., $1.
This volume is the product of two years' careful study and research. The leading authorities, both Mormon and non-Mormon, have been consulted. The author divides his subject into four parts: The history of Mormonism; The political puzzle; The social puzzle; and The religious puzzle. He thinks the intricate problems of Mormonism might be solved by a national colonization scheme, inducing non-Mormons to inhabit Mormon territory, establish free schools and Christian churches, all of which would surround the rising generation with an atmosphere of freedom that would in time break up the present system of slavery.

Benham, Rev. W:, ed. The dictionary of religion: an encyclopædia of Christian and other religious doctrines, denominations, sects, heresies, ecclesiastical terms, history, biography, etc. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 4+1148 p. O. cl., $5.
The present work treats of ecclesiastical history and doctrine, and with the known religions of the ancient and modern world, and the topics and persons connected with these subjects. Articles of purely scriptural history, topography, and exegesis are excluded, and the biographical articles deal with persons only, whose course on earth is ended. The standpoint is, the author says, "as will be naturally expected, that of orthodox Christianity as generally understood by intelligent members of the Church of England." The work, however, has been written in a simply informative rather than dogmatic spirit. The work was undertaken and begun by the late Rev. J. H. Blunt. Upon his death Mr. Benham was invited to complete the book.

Benjamin, Fannie Nichols. The sunny side of shadow: reveries of a convalescent. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 188 p. S. cl., $1.
Twelve attractive little papers written in the lingering hours of a long convalescence. They aim to deal with life in a cheerful, hopeful way. They make excellent reading. The subjects are: The doctor; Patsy Pringle; Mrs. Runabout; The Harpies; Loving; Friendship; Suggestions of the sea; Thanksgiving; The materialist; Presentments; Christmas musing; From night to light.

Benjamin, S. G. W. Sea-spray; or, facts and fancies of a yachtsman. N. Y., Benjamin & Bell, 1887. c. 6+298 p. S. pap., 50 c.
Ten papers; some are instructive relating to yachts and yachting; others are stories and narratives of adventure. The titles are: We two on an island; Evolution of the American yacht; Steam yachting in America; The trans-Atlantic railway; What came of a sea picnic; A cruise in a pilot-boat; The hidden treasure; Out of the depths; A case of circumstantial evidence; Lighthouses of old. The first and ninth papers are now published for the first time; the others appeared in the Century, St. Nicholas, Manhattan, and other magazines.

Benjamin, S. G. W. The story of Persia. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 14+304 p. il. D. (The story of the nations ser.) cl., $1.50.
S. G. W. Benjamin was lately United States minister to Persia and has already written a more exhaustive work on that country. This volume gives more proportionate attention to the legendary period of Persian history than is usual with those who have dealt with this subject, as well as to the great career of the House of Sassân, which, in the opinion of the author, has never received full justice from those Christian historians who have undertaken a connected history of Persia.

Bennett, A. J. The story of the First Massachusetts Light Battery, attached to the Sixth Army Corps: a glance at events in the armies of the Potomac and Shenandoah, from the summer of 1861 to the autumn of 1864. Bost., press of Deland & Barta, 1886. c. 200 p. il. and por. O. cl. $1.50.

Bennett, F: E. A detective's experience among the Mormons; or, polygamist Mormons; how they live and the land they live in. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1887. c. 9–294 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

The author depicts in graphic language the stirring and exciting life he led in ferreting out, with keen detective ability, the necessary evidence to convict the polygamous Mormons, who rebelled against Federal authority. In his experience as Deputy United States Marshal he arrested forty offenders, some of them the most notorious of this notorious people. He tells the story of the Mountain Meadow massacre, some of the secrets of the Endowment House, and gives other details of the manners, customs, and life of this peculiar people.

Bentley, Rob. Physiological botany: an abridgment of the "Student's guide to structural, morphological, and physiological botany;" prepared as a sequel to "Descriptive botany," by Eliza A. Youmans. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. c. 13+292 p. D. (Appleton's science textbooks.) cl., $1.40.

Designed to give such an elementary account of structural and physiological botany, or of the inner and minute mechanism and activities of plants as is now recognized to be needful in general education. The author, Dr. Robert Bentley, is an eminent English botanist, who has had more than thirty years experience as a teacher and a writer of text-books. These works are mostly devoted to medical botany, but the present is a general treatise prepared for a less advanced class of students. In abridging it Miss Youmans has made very little change in the author's text, which is a model of clear, concise, and accurate statement. The alterations have consisted in omissions of certain parts, which are already given in full in the "Descriptive botany," where they properly belong in the present course of botanical study.

A text-book of organic materia medica: comprising a description of the vegetable and animal drugs of the British pharmacopœia, with some others in common use; arranged systematically and especially designed for students. Benton, J. Rosalie. How to cook well. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 2–425 p. D. hf. cl., $1.50.

This thoroughly practical cook-book will be warmly welcomed by all housekeepers, who will find it a valuable aid and guide in the kitchen. The writer has aimed not only to give a large collection of valuable receipts, but also to teach cooking, and likewise, by arranging departments for Breakfast, Luncheon, Dinner, and Tea, to present suggestions to those housekeepers who find themselves taxed to make variety in the different meals. The style of cooking is for the most part adapted to people of moderate means, and especial attention has been paid to showing how to use remnants from a former meal in a tempting manner. These suggestions for what is left are put, in each case, with the directions for the first cooking, so that they follow in natural sequence, and are much more likely to be made use of than if put under the general head of "Made-over dishes." The measurements given are exact, and great care has been used in making the directions very full and plain, as well as accurate. Full index.

Bernard, J: Retrospections of America, 1797–1811; ed. from the MS. by Mrs. Bayle Bernard; with an introduction, notes, and index by Laurence Hutton and Brander Matthews. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. '86. 13+380 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

As one of the brightest of English comedians, and one of the earliest of American managers, and a most important figure on the stage of the United States in the beginning of the century, John Bernard is best remembered. He figured also as an author, his "Retrospections of the Stage," being among the most interesting of the literature of the mimic art. The present volume written from his MS. shows he was as shrewd a social observer as a brilliant comedian. He came to this country in 1797, well equipped in every way to benefit by what he saw. He had been the intimate, in England, of Fox and Sheridan and other Whigs of the Beefsteak Club—his naturally keen mind expanding under this exceptional association. In this country he met Washington, Jefferson, Charles Carroll, John Adams, and other distinguished men on terms of friendship. His impressions of individual and of social observance he jotted down freely and impartially. In their present form, with the editor's notes on early American actors and actresses, they make a delightful book. Illustrated with portraits of old stage favorites.

Berry, Abel B. The last Penacook: a tale of provincial times. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. 180 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Takes the reader back to the period just before the Revolutionary war. A member of the once powerful Indian tribe of the Penacooks plays a prominent part in the story. The main interest hinges on the stealing of a child, the heir to a large property, and her discovery years afterward on one of the small islands in Lake Winnepesaukee. A number of historical characters are introduced, the principal being Governor John Wentworth, the younger, of Portsmouth, N. H.

Bert, P: Introductory steps in science for the use of schools; tr. by Marc F. Vallette; rev. and enl. by J: Mickleborough. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. tr. 13+363 p. il. D. cl., $1.05.

Over half a million copies of the original book were sold in France within three years; in the preparation of this volume only such changes have been made as were required to adapt it to the wants of young American students. The work is divided into seven parts treating of animals, plants, minerals and rock formations, physics, chemistry, animal physiology, and vegetable physiology.

Bertron, Mrs. Ottilie. Edith: a novel. N. Y., Jenkins & McCowan, 1887. c. 281 p. D. pap., 50 c.

An American novel which takes its name from the heroine, Edith St. Claire; the chief characters are social lights of some magnitude; the plot is hinged upon the scheme of a celebrated banker to marry his son to his partner's daughter; this brings about a hasty marriage, unjust suspicions, enmity, and other complications, which puzzle the reader very much before they are satisfactorily adjusted and Guy Norton regains his position as the hero of the story.

Besant, Walter. Dorothy Forster: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 85 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 561.) pap., 20 c.

Dorothy Forster, who tells her own life-story, was the daughter of the Sheriff of Northumberland in the beginning of the eighteenth century. The descriptions of Dorothy's home life with her adored brother and their tutor, who is a clergyman of learning, with a taste for good wines and the theatre, is true to nature and to history. Dorothy loves a Papist lord, but refuses to marry him because she is a Protesant. Her short love story, her devotion to her family and the tutor's devotion to her, make a novel of great merit.

Besant, Walter. The holy rose: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 43 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 592.) pap., 20 c.
The D'Arnaults were a family of French refugees who escaped from Toulon in 1793. Each member of the family tried to rescue what he or she deemed most precious. Sister Claire, a nun, saved the jewelled rose treasured by the D'Arnaults because it had been blessed by the pope. This relic plays an important part in the story. It saves the French refugees from starvation, and finally provides the means of a voyage to young D'Arnault, who meets with great disaster, and is only saved from death by the self-sacrifice of Lieutenant Gavotte, who endeavors to expiate a crime of his father.

Besant, Walter. Katharine Regina: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 33 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 613.) pap., 15 c.
Tom Addison, a young writer for the magazines, inherits a fortune from his cousin which enables him to ask Katharine Regina to marry him at once. Just before the wedding the fortune is found to belong to some one else. Tom goes as war correspondent to India; Katharine remains a governess and lives in a home for working women, described in this author's most sarcastic and humorous way. The plot is simple. Dittmar, a young German merchant, is a good piece of character-drawing. The scene is London.

Besant, Walter. To call her mine: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 42 p. il. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 583.) pap., 20 c.
The novel opens with a confession which David Leighan makes on a small island in the Pacific Ocean. The shadow of his crime haunts him and finally drives him back to England, where he finds fate has interfered and prevented him from committing murder; his only feeling then becomes a desire to revenge himself, and his means of doing so take up most of the story, although Mary's love affair and her lover's trouble to gain their uncle's consent gives name to the book.

Big wages and how to earn them; by a foreman. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 8+219 p. S. cl., 75 c.

The key-note to this work is found in the following paragraph: "The interests of labor and capital are identical, and opposition between the two presents itself in the form of error and prejudice only." In a plain, straightforward way the writer addresses himself to the laboring classes in a series of papers on: Trade unions; What the leaders of labor unions ought to tell you; How the world lives; What are good wages; The iniquities of the rich; Socialism; What we are going to do about it; A model labor union.

Bigelow, Melville M. Bishop, Putnam P. American patriotism: an essay. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 3+144 p. D. cl., 75 c.

By the anthor of the unconventional novel "The Psychologist." A thoughtful and suggestive essay in which the author aims to raise popular opinion higher than the level of the mere politician. The just administration of government, the civil-service system, the labor troubles, and other questions of public interest are touched upon, and reforms suggested.

Bishop, W: H: The golden justice. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 3–393 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The scene of this novel is laid in a flourishing Western city on Lake Michigan. The "golden justice" is a statue erected on the roof of the City Hall by David Lane, a thriving business man, who was Governor of the State at the time the building was put up. In this "justice" was hidden a paper confessing a crime committed by Lane, which had great influence upon the lives of his only daughter and her faithful lover, Paul Barclay. How this paper came into the hands of Barclay gives occasion for the description of a Western tornado. The details of elections, labor unions, newspaper management, theories of divorce, factory discipline, etc., in the growing West, add great interest to the story.

Black, W: Sabina Zembra: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 93 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 573.) pap., 20 c.

Sabrina Zembra is twenty-five when the story opens, a woman whom women loved. She did not live with her father, who disapproved of her longing to work in a hospital as unworthy the daughter of Sir Anthony Zembra. Given such a character, a combination of events that test it to its utmost, and a chance to describe the loveliest scenery of England, and it is needless to say that the author of "A princess of Thule" has made a story that must meet the wishes of his most critical critics.

Blackmore, R. D. Springhaven: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 138 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 568.) pap., 25 c.

The scene of the story is laid in an English fishing village in the year 1804; with many love scenes and incidents of sea-life are interwoven episodes from the naval war of the time between England and France and Spain. Lord Nelson figures largely in the story: a description being given of his defeat of the foreign squadron.

Blossom and fruit; or, Madame's ward; by the author of "Wedded hands," etc. N. Y., G: Munro, [1887.] 313 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 968.) pap., 20 c.

Blouet, Paul, ["Max O'Rell," pseud.] Friend MacDonald; [also,] The land of the Mounseer. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 34 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 608.) pap., 20 c.

Four years ago the author published "John Bull and his island." In similar brief, neat paragraphs he here gives us sharp, satirical, descriptive observations on Donald, the Scotchman, and Mounseer, the Frenchman. The essays are quite distinct, merely bound in the same cover. A great wealth of anecdote is used in describing the typical Scotchman. The land of Burns, Walter Scott, Thomas Carlyle, and Adam Smith is regarded with more sympathy by this bright anonymous writer than John Bull's island met with. The pictures of French home-life are very interesting. The translation is exceptionally good.

Bly, Myron T. Legal hints for travellers; a compilation of judicial decisions pertaining to the rights of travellers upon passenger transportation lines. Bost., N. E. Railway Pub. Co., [1887.] c. 62 p. T. pap., 10 c.

Boardman, Rev. G: Dana. The divine man from the nativity to the temptation. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 3–306 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.50.

Twenty-one studies or sermons on the incidents of Jesus Christ's life upon earth. Author of "Studies in the creative week," etc., and one of the most brilliant and scholarly clergymen of the Baptist denomination.

Boocock, Kemper. Tax the area: a solution of the land problem. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [1887.] 87 p. S. (Lovell's lib., no. 1078.) pap., 20 c.

This work has two purposes: First, it is designed to show that the "unearned increment is unearned by the community instead of by the individual; and, second, that the substitution of specific taxes for value taxes on land would meet the chief demand for land reform."

Boehmer, G: H. List of astronomical observatories: from the Smithsonian report for 1885. Wash., D. C., Government Printing Office, 1886. 457–470 p. O. (Smithsonian miscell. coll., no. 536.) pap.

Bok, E: W., comp. Beecher memorial: contemporaneous tributes to the memory of Henry Ward Beecher. Brooklyn, N. Y., [Edward W. Bok, 7 Murray St.,] 1887. 10+110 p. il. por. O. cl., $1.

Bolles, Albert S., ed. The banker's almanac and register and legal directory for 1887. N. Y., Homans Pub. Co., 1887. O. cl., $4.

Bolles, Albert S. The law relating to banks and their depositors and to bank collections. N. Y., Homans Pub. Co., 1887. c. 28+522 p. O. cl., $4.50; shp., $5.

This important work is divided into three parts: The receiving and keeping of deposits; the paying of them; and collections. The author's aim is to present in language which can be easily and fully understood the law of banking contained in the reported decisions of the American and English courts; he has added many illustrations, drawn from cases that were before the courts, for the purpose of rendering the principles plain, if he should have happened to state them obscurely in the text, and also of showing some of the conditions under which they have been applied.

Bolmer, Rev. W: Brevoort. The church and the faith: a philosophical history of the Catholic church. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1887. c. 3+392 p. O. cl., net, $3.

Contains a theory of the church (Protestant Episcopal); an account of its establishment; essays on the six general councils and important controversies, an exposition and defence of the due and proper claims of the church in America, and other matters. Written for the instruction of all seeking to become members of the Protestant Episcopal Church either ministers or laymen.

Bolton, H. W., D.D. Home and social life. Chic., Fleming H. Revell, 1886. 253 p. S. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Bolton, Sarah K. Famous American authors. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. 5+398 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

The subjects of these papers are: Emerson, Longfellow, Irving, Prescott, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Holmes, Lowell, Higginson, Stoddard, Stedman, Howells, Aldrich, R. W. Gilder, Will Carleton, Cable, Mark Twain, and Charles Dudley Warner. The work is for young and old, although its style is especially adapted to interest youthful readers. While a great deal of the material is new, much of it has been gathered from printed sources, such as well-known biographies, magazines, etc. This is all presented so attractively and so cleverly mingled with extracts from each writer's works, and with criticisms from acknowledged critics, that it seems fresh and new Each sketch is illustrated with a good portrait.

Bolton, Sarah K. and C: K. From heart and nature. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1887. c. 61 p. D. cl., $1.

Charles K. Bolton is the son of Mrs. Bolton and is still a student at Harvard. "Of the poems it is difficult to speak too pleasantly. They are not sentimental, though full of sentiment and a certain vivacity pervades them all. Finally they are devout, and, like everything truly devout, they are simple and hopeful."—Boston Beacon.

Boulger, Dora H. ["Theo. Gift," pseud.] Lil Lorimer: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 2+427 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The heroine is one of three charming girls, daughters of an Englishman, who occupies a small government position in a South American city. The girls have been brought up in an unconventional manner without a mother, and add to many natural attractions the art of flirting. "Lil" is an unusually fresh and sympathetic character, her many love affairs enlisting the readers interest deeply. The scene changes to England for a time, and we get the contrast of the strict—hedged in domestic life of the English woman; here poor "Lil's" free unrestrained ways bring her into no end of trouble, and almost make a tragedy of her happiness.

Boulger, Dora H. ["Theo. Gift," pseud.] Victims. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 3+ 470 p. S. (Leisure hour ser., no. 198.) cl., $1; pap., 30 c.

Brittany, an old French châteaux, two pretty girls, Vera St. Laurent, the daughter of the owner of the châteaux, and Leah Josephs her companion and instructress for the time being, are the revelations of the first chapter. Leah, an accomplished Jewess, whose father is a noted London scientist, accepts an engagement in Brittany for the summer in order to brighten up her French. A friendship springs up between her and Vera which changes all Vera's after life. It is the old story of a daughter being asked to marry to please her father in order that he may have his debts paid. Vera and an Englishman she loves are the "victims." Leah's faith and her love for a Christian are also elements in the story.

Bouton, J: Bell. Roundabout to Moscow: an epicurean journey. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 11+421 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A candid and unprejudiced view of the Russian people and Russian government by a cultivated American. In getting to Russia Mr. Bouton took the indirect route from Paris to Nice, thence to Genoa, Naples, Florence, through Switzerland, lingering in a portion of Germany—Prague, Dresden, Berlin, etc.—of all of these places he gives fresh, original views, that make his book very attractive. The most valuable portion of his travels are those relating to Russia, as they will serve to clear up many misrepresentations emanating from the English press concerning Nihilism and the condition of the people generally, and also the popular feeling towards the Tsar. A duplicate title-page in Russian is a curiosity.

Boutwell, G: S. The lawyer, the statesman, and the soldier. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 4+ 232 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Four biographical sketches: "Rufus Choate, the lawyer;" "Daniel Webster, the statesman;" "President Lincoln, the statesman and liberator;" and "General Grant, the soldier and statesman." Special value attaches to these sketches, as Mr. Boutwell was well acquainted with the persons whose personal and mental peculiarities he so happily describes.

Bovallius, Carl. Nicaraguan antiquities. Stockholm, [Swedish Society of Anthropology and Geography,] 1886. [N. Y., C: Woodward.] 51 p. + 41 pl. + 1 map. F. bds., $8.

It has been the author's good fortune, in his search for archæological treasures in Nicaragua, to meet with localities rich in remains from the prehistoric, or, rather, pre-Spanish period. These comprised a large number of statues, most of which have never before been figured or described; also, a number of rare examples of pottery. The latter are now deposited in the ethnographic collection of the R. Swedish State Museum. The antiquities figured and described in this work were found for the greatest part in the Island of Zapatera, the rock carvings in the isle of Ceiba, close to Zapatera, and a few ceramic objects on the island of Ometepec. The localities being within the territory occupied by the Niquirans, the specimens may probably be considered as being of Aztec art, or of an art very closely related to this. The drawings are made after the author's original sketches or from photographs taken on the spot. The author gives a brief sketch of his stay in Nicaragua, the storehouse of American archæology, and a very full description of each plate.

Bowen, J: Eliot. The conflict of east and west in Egypt. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 4+204 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A brief résumé of the Eastern question, going back to the 18th century, when England had already marked out for herself a passage through Egypt to the far away Indian Empire; concluding with an account of "Chinese" Gordon's work in the Soudan and the relief expedition sent out to him under Woolseley. Gives a list of books and periodicals consulted.

Bowne, Borden P. Introduction to psychological theory. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. '86. 11+329 p. O. cl., $1.75.

"The aim of this work is given in its title. First, it is an 'introduction' only, and does not go into the details or the literature of the subject. The aim is to point out the highways of psychology rather than its myriad byways. Secondly, it is an 'introduction to psychological theory,' and aims less at a knowledge of facts than at an understanding of principles."—Introduction. It describes and classifies mental process, traces their origin and cause, studies these laws as shown in general, and formulates a theory evolved from this description. The style is singularly lucid and fair, strictly adhering to facts. Mr. Bowne is Professor of Philosophy in Boston University, and author of "Metaphysics."

Bowne, Borden P. Philosophy of theism. N.Y., Harper, 1887. c. 11+269 p. O. cl., $1.75.

"Of all these ideals that rule our life, theism is the sum and source," writes Prof. Borden P. Bowne of Boston University. "The cognitive ideal of the universe, as a manifestation of the supreme reason, leads to theism. The moral ideal of the universe, as a manifestation of the supreme righteousness, leads to theism. The practical ideal of a 'far-off divine event to which the whole creation moves' leads to theism. In short, while theism is demonstrated by nothing, it is implicit in everything. It cannot be proved without begging the question, or denied without ending in absurity." It is an elaboration of this position that is made in chapters which bear the titles—"Unity of the world-ground," "The world-ground as intelligent," "The world-ground as personal," "The metaphysica. attributes to the world-ground," "God and the world," "The world-ground as ethical," and "Theism and life."—New York Evening Post..

Bramston, M. The heroine of a basket van. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1887.] 6+224 p. 3 il. D. cl., 75 c.

The scene may be termed shifting, as it is laid for the most part in a van which travels through England supplying the country-folk with baskets. This strange vehicle is inhabited by a strange family, each member of which contributes his or her part to the story, although Phenie is undoubtedly the heroine. Besides basket-selling Redmoor is engaged in several schemes which lend a peculiar element to the story and result in his undoing. Here Phenie shows at her best, and pilots the entire family through a succession of troublesome events.

Bramston, M. Uncle Ivan; or, recollections of fifty years back. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1887.] 8+219 p. il. D. cl., net, 75c.

"Uncle Ivan" was the Russian uncle and hero of some English children, who lived in St. Petersburg; his eldest niece Clarice tells in a graphic manner how he became entangled in politics and was saved from arrest by the tact of her sister and self, aided by the forethought of their English nurse; why her father followed the refugee to England; of the trust imposed in herself and Leslie, Ivan's romantic attachment, and how a Russian letter interfered with his happiness and placed him in great peril. A pleasing juvenile made up of characters who were children a generation ahead of the present one.

Brenda, [pseud.] Dinah Mite: a story for today. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. S. cl., 90 c.

"Dinah Mite" was the name given in jest to a little baby whose surname was Mite. Dinah lived in a wretched London court, where she became famous as the blue-ribbon baby because of the wonderful reformation she wrought in her drunken father. Shows up life among the poor of London and illustrates the necessity of their living temperate lives.

The first volume of "Fairy tales from Brentano," published nearly two years ago, met with so much favor, that a second was demanded. This handsome book, with its rich scarlet and gold cover and brilliant full-page colored pictures, is the result. The stories, the translator says, are "not a whit behind the others in point of interest, originality, and true fairy fancy." They are called, "The story of Gockel, Hinkel, and Gockeleia," "The story of Frisky Wisky," "The story of the myrtle maiden," "The story of Brokerina," and "The story of old Father Rhine and the miller."

Brigham, W: T. Guatemala the land of the Quetzal: a sketch. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. il. O. cl., $5.

The material for this work was collected from notes made during three journeys in Guatemala and Honduras. The author says he does not pretend "to offer a monograph on Gautemala, nor to add to the general knowledge of Central America; but remembering the lack of guidance from which he suffered in travelling through the country, would in some measure save others from the same inconvenience." In spite of the modesty of Mr. Brigham's claim, it will be found that his work is comprehensive and important. It covers a wide range, the people, with their habits and customs, the architecture of the present and the past, the climate, products, natural scenery, mineral resources, the flora, fauna, etc. The illustrations are numerous and excellent, and are from photographs taken by the author.

Brooks, Elbridge S. Storied holidays: a cycle of historic red-letter days. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 5–271 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Stories of historic events which occurred on holidays, such as Christmas, New Year's day, St. Valentine's day, St. Patrick's day, April Fool's day, Hallow E'en, Thanksgiving day, etc. They relate not only to English, Irish, and American history, but go back to the old days of Greece. The series first appeared in the Wide Awake. Mr. Brooks in the author of "Historic boys" and other favorite children's books.

Brooks, Elbridge S. The story of the American Indian; his origin, development, decline, and destiny. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 312 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

This work, one of the most ambitious from the pen of the well-known writer of "Historic boys" and "Historic girls," does not attempt to state or solve the Indian problem. "It simply seeks to arrange in something like complete and consecutive form the story of the North American Indian as he has existed for generations, and as from supremacy in the land of his fathers he has fallen under the ban of the white civilization that conquered and displaced him." The story is most successfully told in a direct, interesting way, that makes the book suitable for readers of all ages. "The best hundred books on the American Indian" is a selected list included in the work. The handsome get-up is to be noted.

A plea for more tolerance in religion. The first lecture shows that earnest personal convictions and generous tolerance are not incompatible. The second lecture makes an application of the writer's suggestions to the special conditions of our time and of "our church."

Brotherton, Alice Williams. The sailing of King Olaf, and other poems. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1887. c. 3–145 p. por. S. cl., $1.

The leading poem appeared in the Atlantic Monthly several years ago, and attracted much attention for its vigorous yet delicate and subtile handling of the old Norse legend. The book contains 70 other poems, most of them short, and all of them marked by the great beauty of expression which characterizes Mrs. Brotherton's best work. Many of them have already appeared in leading periodicals, including the Century, the Atlantic Monthly, the Independent, the Golden Age, the Christian Register, and Unity. The cover is ornamented with an original design in gilt, representing King Olaf's ship in the foreground.

Brown, Alice. Fools of nature : a novel. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 430 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Written to expose the frauds and deceits that masquerade under the name of spiritualism. The story opens in a Massachusetts farm-house, and the scene afterwards changes to the West End of Boston. A simple-minded, credulous believer in "spiritual" manifestations, and a crafty professional medium from Boston both use their influence to make a poor-house boy become a professional medium, and help make money for the professor. There is a love story which introduces the question of divorce. Several of the characters at the West End boarding-house are brought into the story to show that moral danger also lurks in the guise of spiritualism and in what different ways its teachings may affect certain individuals.

Judge Brown, who was Mayor of Baltimore in 1861, discusses frankly the events leading to the 19th of April, when the 6th Mass. Regt. marched through Baltimore and was attacked by a furious mob, and also those immediately following. Judge Brown states that his point of view of the events he describes is that of many leading citizens of Maryland. The volume not only aims to be dispassionate and historically accurate, but to bring about a better understanding of the state of society and of public feeling in the borderland between the North and South in 1861.

Brown, Mrs. Helen E. Mrs. Winchester's kitchen ; or, the one talent improved. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 272 p. 1 il. S. cl., $1.

Tells how one plain woman, with quite ordinary gifts and advantages, made her life truly and richly helpful to many of her neighbors by faithfully using the small gifts God had bestowed upon her. This is a book Christian mothers may read with real profit, as they will be sure to get from it many suggestions as to homely yet effective ways of doing good.

Brown, H: H. Alatypes; or, stenotypography : a system of condensed printing, together with the elements of alagraphy or syllabic shorthand. Battle Creek, Mich., published by the author, H: H. Brown, 1887. c. 92 p. T. pap., 4 c.

Brown, I. H. Common-school elocution and oratory : a manual of vocal culture based upon scientific principles philosophically presented and fully illustrated with appropriate selections for reading and recitation ; designed for common schools, academies, colleges, and private learners. 5th ed., rev. St. Louis, I. H. Brown & Co., 1886. c. '85. 15+305 p. D. cl., $1.

Brown, I. H. Common-school elocutionary selections [no. 1] : a careful selection of prose and poetical compositions, adapted for public readings and school recitations, with a key containing the proper elements required in the delivery of each selection. St. Louis, I. H. Brown & Co., 1887. c. '84. 7+216 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Brown, I. H. Common-school examiner and review : a collection of questions used by state, county, and city superintendents in the examination of teachers and pupils ; answered in the clearest and briefest manner ; designed for examiners, teachers, pupils, and institute conductors. New ed., rev. and enl. St. Louis, I. H. Brown & Co., 1887. c. 371 p. D. cl., $1.

Brown, Jessie H. Norman Macdonald. Cin., Standard Pub. Co., 1887. c. '84. 217 p. D. cl., $1.

A death scene ushers in the story, which is without plot and made up mainly of incidents in the life of a man determined to succeed at all hazards. A passing glimpse of Norman McDonald's boyhood surroundings, and a short account of his college friendships and career, soon gives place to his business experience which transpires, as do all the important events, in a growing Western city. The vice of drunkenness is shown up, as well as how to combat life successfully, notwithstanding disadvantages of birth.

Brown, W. K., D.D. Gunethics; or, the ethical status of woman. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. 162 p. por. D. cl., 75 c.

The author, who has already written "The Scriptural status of woman," in this volume proposes in the light of the Scriptures to sketch the status of woman in the field of human civilization and redemption, and thereby to disclose the ethical status of the sex. It is a plea for the recognition of woman as having equal inheritance, endowment, and dispensation with man in matters of religion, and that she should have equal rights in every field of life. The author even concedes her right to preach, and explains St. Paul's words to the contrary to have had other significance.

Browne, Herbert Janvrin. Is it Shakespeare's confession? The cryptogram in his epitaph. Wash., D. C., A. S. Witherbee & Co., 1887. c. 20 p. S. pap., 25 c.

The tenor of the argument is that the Shakespeare epitaph at Stratford-on-Avon opens to the world the mysteries of the cipher in which the bard is alleged to have written his dramas.

Browne, Lennox, and Behnke, Emil. Voice, song, and speech : a practical guide for singers and speakers; from the combined view of vocal surgeon and voice trainers. 7th ed. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 13+248 p. il. O. cl., $2.

In order to issue this cheaper edition it has been necessary to omit the most expensive item of the earlier editions, namely, the photographs of the larynx and soft palate during tone production, engravings being substituted. In all other respects the book remains unaltered.

Browne, Phyllis. Mrs. Somerville and Mary Carpenter. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 128 p. por. D. (The world's workers ser.) cl., 50 c.

Two biographies for young or old readers; Mrs. Somerville was the well-known astronomer, and Mary Carpenter the friend of the destitute and criminal children of London.

Browning, Rob. A blot in the 'scutcheon, and other dramas; ed. with notes by W: J. Rolfe and Heloise E. Hersey. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 5-246 p. por. S. flex. cl., 56 c.; pap. 40 c.

Prepared on the same plan as the "Select poems of Browning" by the same editors. The introduction is, however, much longer than in that volume, and contains considerable matter the substance of which would otherwise have been given in the notes. The other dramas are "Colombe's birthday" and "A soul's tragedy."

Browning, Rob. Christmas-eve and Easter-day, and other poems; with an introductory essay on Browning's theory concerning personal immortality; notes by Heloise E. Hersey; preface by W: J. Rolfe. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co. [1887.] c. '86. 2-175 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Mr. Rolfe, in his preface, commends the volume "to all 'Christian folk' as good reading for Christmas Eve or Easter Day, or any other time in the year." The poems are printed from the most recent text, and each has a brief introduction and explanatory notes. These are in the most direct and simple style. They aim only to explain difficult allusions and constructions. Miss Hersey has recently assisted Mr. W. J. Rolfe in editing a volume of selections from Browning for his "English classics." The notes are in the general well-known style of the notes in that series. They are, however, somewhat less full, as this book is not especially designed for school use.

Printed from new electrotype plates and tastefully bound. Contains in a convenient form and good type sixty or more of the choicest of Browning's lyrical poems.

Browning, Rob. Parleyings with certain people of importance in their day, to wit: Bernard de Mandeville, Daniel Bartoli, Christopher Smart, George Bubb Dodington, Francis Furini, Gerard de Lairesse, and Charles Avison; introduced by a dialogue between Apollo and the fates; concluded by another between John Fust and his friends. [Poems.] Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. S. cl., $1.25.

Bruce, Alex. Balmain, D.D. The humiliation of Christ, in its physical, ethical, and official aspects; the 6th series of the Cunningham lectures. 2d ed., rev. and enl. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. 7+457 p. O. cl., $2.50.

A new lecture has been added, the fifth in the present volume, on "Modern humanistic theories of Christ's person," in which the author has utilized the notes which appeared in the appendix of the former edition, replacing them by new notes on other topics. In the same lecture he has embodied the substance of an article on "Naturalistic views of Christ's person," which appeared in the British and Foreign Evangelical Review for January, 1879.

Bruce, Wallace. Old homestead poems. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 7+167 p. il. O. cl., $2.

Most of these poems appeared in the columns of magazines and newspapers some years ago. The author has genuine feeling. The form of his verses is familiar and colloquial with studied lack of polish, an effective setting for sentiments of patriotism, local and class pride, and various emotions evoked on "occasions." The volume is fully illustrated by selections from the works of various well-known artists.

Bruen, E: Tunis. Outlines for the management of diet; or, the regulation of food to the requirements of health and the treatment of disease. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 4-138 p. D. (Practical lessons in nursing.) cl., $1.

The substance of this little volume was delivered in the form of lectures to the nurses of the Training-Schools of the Philadelphia, University of Pennsylvania, and Woman's Hospitals. The scientific aspect of the subject has been subordinated to the presentation of some practical suggestions to guide in the selection of suitable food in different conditions.

Bugbee, A. G. Exercises in English syntax. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1887. c. 3–87 p. S. pap., 35c.

One object of this volume is to furnish a text-book which avoids the use of all examples of false syntax and at the same time contains a large amount of drill and test work. Another object of the work is to teach the use of correct language by composition work. The book is not expected to take the place of a grammar, but it is intended to be put into the hands of pupils to give additional practice in syntax where grammars are defective.

Eighty years ago, when the Battery was the fashionable quarter of New York City and above Chambers St. "out-of-town," is the time of the opening of this story. It follows the fortune of an old family mansion and its inmates, through many varying scenes, from the first days of wealth and lavish hospitality, down to the present decadence. The story is told with a certain poetry and feeling which make it very attractive.

The more romantic features of the history of invention have been described, apart from their technical surroundings. The life-stories of most inventors have already been written, but in many cases there has been so much hard fact to set forth, that the thread of romance has now and then seemed to get lost. The author's research has extended into many odd nooks and corners, and much labor has been brought to bear upon the bringing together of his interesting facts of the peculiarities of inventors.

Not only do all the great Christian sects agree on certain main points of religious belief, but the same is true, the author asserts, of all the religions and nations of the world. These beliefs relate to superhuman beings, the supreme deity, religious worship, efficacious prayer, immortal souls, possible salvation, etc., and are each the subject of a chapter. These doctrines the Christian is earnestly asked to accept and act upon, "to believe with the unspeakable majority."

Butler, J: S. The curability of insanity and the individualized treatment of the insane. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 59 p. sq. S. cl., 60 c.

The author was for some years physician and superintendent of the Connecticut Retreat for the Insane, at Hartford. He takes up much of his little volume with the description of individual cases of insanity. He dwells upon the improvement and progress in the treatment of this terrible malady, which he is glad to record is no more regarded as a disgrace and a curse, but simply as the derangement of certain organs of the mind and body. He quotes from Dr. Seguin, Dr. Kirkbride, and other distinguished specialists in brain disease.

Penelope Pelham was the young English girl who jilted Edward Buckley to marry Governor Bellingham in 1641. The Governor excused his betrayal of his friend by pleading the strength of his affections; this plea, it is held, does not cover the case satisfactorily. Mr. Bynner's version of the story was originally published in the Atlantic Monthly, and now appears in a garb almost as quaint as Mistress Penelope's mode of telling her part in the early history of Massachusetts.

Cabot, Ja. Elliot. A memoir of Ralph Waldo Emerson. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2 v. 8+382; 3+383–809 p. por D. cl., $3.50.

"Mr. Cabot has well stated the scope of this memoir; it fills out and defines more closely the image of Emerson which we already possess; more it does not attempt to do. It does not contain any exposition of his teachings or criticism of them except incidentally; much less does it establish or examine his place in literature or in his time. It is strictly a memoir; an account of his personality and the varying circumstances which surrounded his life among men. . . . Mr. Cabot has done his part of the work with singular felicity; his taste, his sense, his freedom from prejudice and eulogy, his grasp all around the subject are most excellent traits, and in the tone of the whole, cultivation, friendliness and knowledge are agreeably blended."—Boston Post.

Caddy, Mrs. Florence. Through the fields with Linnæus: a chapter in Swedish history. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1887. 2 v., 5+347; 4+376 p. il. and maps, D. cl., $4.50.

The first complete biography of the great Swedish naturalist, Carl von Linné, better known under his earlier name of Carolus Linnæus (1707–1778). The author, an English lady, who has written "Footsteps of Jeanne d'Arc," another successful biography, writes with the deepest enthusiasm for her subject. In 23 somewhat discursive chapters she takes the reader through all the events of Linnæus' life, tracing his love of nature from the earliest part of his career, following him through the fields and engaging with him in all his botanical researches.

The author of "In a grass country" has written another story of English country life, full of descriptions of nature at all seasons of the year, and of English people, ranging in rank from lords and ladies to ladies'-maids and bar-maids, and in fortune from millionaires to ruined lords. Mrs. Cameron describes the troubles caused by "the little god" in a way that is fresh even to well-worn novel-readers.

The author of "Across Africa" has written another tale of adventure, full of instructive facts. The hero at fifteen is taken from school and goes as sailor on board the Petrel, a trading vessel between Liverpool and the western coast of Africa, of which his father is commander. The special superstitions of native Africans are made interesting. Slave-ships are also described, and a chapter devoted to cannibals.

Cameron, V. Lovett. Jack Hooper; his adventures at sea and in South Africa. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1887. 348 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Making use of the material collected by him while in command of the English expedition sent out in 1872 in search of Dr. Livingstone, which was published under the title "Across Africa" some ten years ago, the author, in the form of a story for boys, gives descriptions of life in that country, bringing in valuable information about the lion, elephant, rhinoceros and other animals that have their homes in its almost impregnable forests. The author hopes to impress upon English boys the great value of England's vast dependencies in Africa.

Campbell, Archibald. Captain Macdonald's daughter: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 4+331 p. S. cl., $1.

The author seems to have decided views upon heredity, which he makes apparent in the career of the heroine. The story opens in Scotland, with a pleasing description of a manse in Strathlowrie. This quaint edifice is the home of the Leslies. Nan Macdonald's presence in the family is explained and enough of her father's history old to justify Mr. Leslie's fears for the child's future; these are quieted by a succession of incidents occurring; and then events shape themselves so that Nan decides to go to America; life in the South develops traits in Nan that add a very sad element to the book, and it is reproachfully said of her that she is "Captain Macdonald's daughter."

This series of papers, originally prepared for the Sunday edition of the New York Tribune, is based upon facts in the lives of the working poor of New York, gathered by Mrs. Campbell through the minutest personal research. They present a sad picture of almost hopeless poverty and degradation, for which, apparently, there is no remedy, except in the improvement of the mental and physical conditions of the workers themselves. The series obtained so many readers in the Tribune, through the widespread interest in the subject, that, as now presented in handsome book-form, it appeals again strongly to a new circle of readers.

The Marquis Miraldi des Ourques a noble smuggler, attempts to abduct Irène, the daughter of a Greek pilot of Athens. The father discovers the plot in time and forces the Marquis to marry the girl. After a brief honeymoon Miraldi tires of his wife, and sends her to a ruined castle he owns in the French village of Saint-Fortunat. Here Irène remains for five years forgotten by her husband, but developing in mind and body into a cultured beautiful woman. The remainder of the story takes place in Paris, and is devoted to an account of the Marquis' repentance and reformation and his successful attempt to regain his wife's love and respect.

Sabine de la Ruillière possessed beauty, great individuality, rectitude in a marked degree, and talents more fitted to the masculine than feminine character; the latter she exercised contentedly at her home, the Chateau Ruillière, until a visit to Paris breaks the monotony of her life. There she met Roger Borgemont and a hasty betrothal ensued; before the arrangements for the wedding were completed, an event occurred which separated the lovers. Sabine returned to the provinces and Roger went to America. When they again met Sabine perpetrated a deception which changes the tenor of the story and proves her an heroic woman.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Esther: a book for girls. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., [1887.] 255 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A pretty picture of English home life in which Esther Cameron is the chief figure; the Camerons lose their wealth and father at one stroke, and each member of the family has to do his or her part towards maintenance. Upon Esther devolves the most of the burden, but her executive ability helps her to conquer all difficulties. Next to Esther, Dot's quaint sayings and deeds win the most interest, in a story which is thoroughly healthy in tone notwithstanding its romantic ending.

Uncle Max, who is a young clergyman in an English country parish, encourages his niece to move near him, and spend her time in nursing the poor in their homes. The doctor, under whose direction Ursula works, is a fine character. Uncle Max's love story is prettily told, and after some misunderstandings the various couples are satisfactorily mated. Ursula's great talent for singing plays an important part in her work among the sick.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Wee wifie: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co, 1887. 5+421 p. S. hf. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

"Wee wifie" is the seventeen-year old wife of Lord Redmond, who has married her to please his family, after they have decided he is not to marry the girl of his choice for a peculiar reason. This girl has a beautiful character and devotes her life to her blind brother, a clergyman who has also lost the girl of his choice for a remarkable cause. "Wee wifie" wins her husband's heart after resorting to very unusual means. The story is delightfully told.

Character sketches of the Narragansett country fifty years ago. They are both pathetic and humorous, and are all studies from life. The opening sketch, "Sally of the South County," and the closing one, "L. C.," are unusually quaint and fresh. The others, "When my ship comes in," "At a sheep washing," "Ailse Congdon," "From hour to hour in the country store," "Evening meeting at Uncle Sia's," "Watching with the sick," "Jack Dawley's wife," and "Priscilla Gallaghan," are strongly outlined pictures of men and women and scenes that our all-pervading civilization is fast doing away with. "An afternoon at neighbor Northup's" is unique in its humor.

Cary, Alice and Phœbe. Early and late poems. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 10+321 p. D. cl., $1.50.

This collection has been issued in response to repeated calls for poems of the gifted sisters not included in "The poems of Alice and Phœbe Cary" published by this house. Their early poems have been long out of print in collective form, though many have been preserved in anthologies and in the memory of readers, while many poems contributed in later years by the sisters to leading periodicals have never before been brought together. Alice Cary's poems are grouped under the following headings : Ballads and narrative poems ; Poems of thought and feeling; Poems of nature and home; Poems of grief and consolation ; Poems of love; Religious poems and hymns. Phœbe Cary's poems number but seventeen short pieces.

Cassell's complete pocket-guide to Europe. Rev. and enl. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. c. '83 to '87. 26+497 p. T. leath., $1.50.

Originally issued by James R. Osgood & Co. ; was planned by E. C. Stedman, of New York, to meet the demand for a general European guide-book, small enough to be carried easily in a gentleman's or lady's pocket, and yet more complete than any other single-volume guide. It was compiled by Edward King, of Paris, who personally went over most of the routes described. It was revised by M. F. Sweetser, of Boston, the well-known and able compiler of travellers' handbooks, and is re-edited and kept up to date by Mr. Stedman, with the aid of skilled experts in the London office of Messrs. Cassell & Co.

Caswell, Albert S., and Ryan, Ja. E., comps. and eds. The barcarolle; 70 songs. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1886. c. O. (Time and tune ser., book 2.) bds., $1.05.

The aim has been to present a collection of vocal music of the highest class. It contains seventy songs in one, two, and three parts, suitable for seminaries and social circles. It includes the later and less hackneyed productions of Abt, Brahms, Berthold, Barri, Bishop, Grell, Gazzani, Klauer, Mattei, Muller, Macfarren, Pinsuti, Panofka, Roeckel, Reinecke, Stainer, Taubert, together with gems from such great masters as Mendelssohn, Schumann, Schubert, Gounod, Gade, Rossini, Rubinstein, Mercadante, Mozart, Verdi, and Donizetti, besides a number of excellent compositions of good tone masters less widely known. It is believed that the diagrams, scale illustrations, and solfeggios will be acceptable to teachers generally.

Célière, Paul. The startling exploits of Dr. J. B. Quiès; from the French by Mrs. Cashel Hoey and J: Lillie. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. '86. 8+328 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

"The hero of the story, Dr. Quiès, is a wealthy Frenchman, a resident of a provincial town, who is addicted to archæology and has a mortal antipathy to travel. But in an unlucky hour he is induced to take a journey by rail some distance from home; and partly by the malicious contrivance of a rival archæologist who is jealous of his fame, and partly in consequence of a series of mishaps he becomes involved in a course of involuntary wanderings. These extend through France, across the Mediterranean into Algeria, across the Soudan, down the Nile, and into various parts of Eastern Europe. The book abounds in laughable situations, arising from the conflict between the doctor's desire to be at rest and the perverse fate which urges him on, and it will be read with unflagging interest. The illustrations are numerous and characteristic."—Chicago Tribune.

Champney, Lizzie W. Great grandmother's girls in New France; the history of little Eunice Williams; il. by "Champ" and others. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1887. c. 246 p. sq. O. cl., $2.50.

Eunice Williams was a little New England girl, the daughter of the minister of Deerfield, Conn.; she was taken captive by the Indians, in an attack made upon the town in Feb., 1704; though many efforts were made at different periods of her life to ransom her and have her return to her father and friends, she resisted all overtures and lived and died with the Canadian Indians, one of whom she married. The reasons for her acting in this way, and the intrigues and influences that were brought to bear upon her are told in this book by a companion of her captivity, "Submit Dare," an imaginary character created to fill up the mere outlines history has given us of this little Puritan girl's story.

Champney, Lizzie W. Three Vassar girls at home: a holiday trip of three college girls through the south and west; il. by "Champ" and others. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1888 [1887.] 5-233 p. sq. O. cl., $2; bds., $1.50.

Travel and adventure in Florida, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, California, Arizona, etc., by the three bright girls who have figured in so many other volumes of this attractive series. Instruction and amusement are well combined, and the book made most acceptable to the eye by pictures, bright covers, etc.

The volume sketches an interesting portion of local history, embracing the period beginning with the voyage of the French Captain Cloron down the Allegheny in 1749, and ending with the siege of Fort Pitt and the fall of the Northern military posts in 1763. The facts embodied in the work have been gathered from a great number of sources, many of which are not readily accessible to the general reader.

Charnay, Désiré. The ancient cities of the new world; being voyages and explorations in Mexico and Central America from 1857–1882; from the French by J. Gonino and Helen S. Conant. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. tr. 5–45+45+514 p., map and il. O. cl., $6.

This volume is the outcome of an expedition sent out jointly by France and the United States. The pecuniary share of the latter was furnished entirely through the generosity of Mr. Peter Lorillard, of New York. The expedition was designed to determine the nationality and origin of the remains of ancient civilization in Central America and Mexico. This was done by a careful reproduction of the inscriptions of monuments, through photographs and casts, and a systematic investigation of the so-called "ruined cities." These photographic reproductions, with views of scenery, etc., are largely used in illustrating the work. The results of Mr. Charnay's labors, go to prove, in his opinion, that these monuments, etc., are chiefly Toltec, and of no great antiquity. Besides detailed accounts of his discoveries and a development of his theories, his book includes description of personal travel and adventure. It opens with a sketch of the Aztec people, and an account of the Toltecs. It is handsomely printed, bound, etc., with maps, il., and por of author.

Chauvenet, W: Treatise on elementary geometry; rev. and abridged by W. E. Byerly. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 3–322 p. D. cl., $1.20.

In preparing this edition of Chauvenet's "Geometry," the editor has endeavored to compel the student to think and to reason for himself. On this account the demonstrations of the main propositions, which at first are full and complete, are gradually more and more condensed, until at last they are sometimes reduced to mere hints, by the aid of which the full proof is to be developed, and numerous additional theorems and problems are constantly given as exercises for practice in original work. A syllabus, containing the axioms, the postulates, and the captions of the main theorems and corollaries, has been added to aid students and teachers in reviews and examinations.

Choate, Lowell. The romance of a letter. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 356 p. D. (The round world ser.) cl., $1.25.

A story of Boston, although not a society novel. The main interest of the book lies in a letter written by a physician, who, by brooding over a mysterious trouble, has become insane. This letter contains the secret of his life, and he places it in the hands of a young lady to whom his son is attached, and pledges her to secrecy until after his death. The existence of this letter, known only to the young lady, seriously complicates affairs. At last the physician dies, and the contents of the letter are made public. They are startling enough, but what for years had seemed like a black crime to the diseased mind of the suffering man turns out to have been something very different.

The scene is laid in Britain, about the year 408, when the Roman legions were finally withdrawn from the island; so little is known from history about this period that the writers have been permitted to draw largely upon their imaginations, the result being a novel, but the authors hope "not improbable," view of this important event—the abandonment of Britain by the Romans.

Church, Ella Rodman. In the hospital at Elmridge. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 288 p. il. D. (Elmridge ser.,) cl., $1.25.

The Elmridge series seems to have been written with a view to pleasing and instructing young readers; in five preceding volumes the little Kyles learn many facts about birds, insects, flowers, and trees and the sea; the present story tells how they were invalided at Elmridge, Miss Harson's suddenly improvised hospital, and her novel ways of amusing the convalescents.

Church, Ella Rodman. Sunday evenings at Elmridge. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 3–304 p. il. S. cl., $1.15.

In this number of the Elmridge Series we turn away from the fields of nature to the Holy Scriptures. We have here the Sunday evening talks of the young governess with her little people. The talks are about the children of the Bible. The stories are well told, in a familiar, conversational way.

Clarke, Mrs. C: M. More true than truthful: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 47 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 598.) pap., 20 c.

Two children, a boy and a girl, almost miraculously saved from death during the Indian Mutiny, are the chief characters. Their identity is hidden by the man who brings them to England, that he may safely carry out a blackmailing scheme of his own. Although only cousins, they are brought up as brother and sister, and taught to earn their own living. One goes out into the world as a governess, the other as secretary to a rich man. In this way they meet people, and a web of strange and remarkable incidents is woven, which ends in the proving of the children's parentage, etc.

Clarke, Reb. So., ["Sophie May," pseud.] Drones' honey. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. 3–281 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The title of this, the first novel by the favorite writer of children's stories, is taken from Plato's Republic—"When a young man has tasted drones' honey . . . then he returns into the country of the lotus-eaters." The young man who has a weakness for drones' honey is Mr. Benjamin Kirke, a Chicago lawyer of wealth and position. A misdirected letter which falls into his hands, and which he opens and reads believing it to be sent to himself, settles his fate. The letter is a most charming one, although it is a rejection of a marriage proposal not signed in full and coming from Narransauc, Maine. Kirke determines to find the writer and sets off for Maine. Accident makes him acquainted quite unexpectedly with Miss Evelyn Searle, the heroine of the letter, and her friend Miss Wilder. From these materials quite a romance is woven, in which Kirke's dislike of his profession, his passion for a doctor's life, and his loss of fortune all play a part.

"The attention of the translator was drawn to the original work, of which the following is a translation, by finding it to be the only source of knowledge of the subject outside of scattered articles in the journals, and thus convenient and almost indispensable, as a laboratory handbook, to himself and advanced students. It is in the hope of rendering it more available to all who may have occasion to use electrolytic methods in quantitative analysis, and of increasing and stimulating the use of these valuable methods, that he has undertaken the translation."—Translator's preface.

Claude, Mary S. Twilight thoughts: stories for children and child-lovers; ed. by Mary L. Avery, with a preface by Matthew Arnold. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. 104 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Matthew Arnold says of the author: "She was connected with Germany; and the soul of Northern Europe of the Germany of Richter and of the Denmark of Andersen, is in her stories, lending to them its familiar treatment of nature, its facile attribution to animals and plants and pebbles and clouds, of the life and feelings of man. Many a stroke of playful humor, many a moral and deeply humane suggestion, she owes to this genius—inextricably allied in her, however, with the English sadness."

The reflections of a reader and thinker whose invalidism prevented him seeking society. One gets a taste of all kinds of books and of all sorts of subjects on a little string of personal narrative which has chiefly to do with the author's aches and ailments. A quaint and, at times, grim humor, with a true feeling and appreciation for the best literature, are the characteristics of this charming little volume. Anecdotes of literary men, fresh criticisms of their works, and original opinions on many diverse topics are offered in equal parts. The author's list of famous works is full of interest.

Treats of the first period of the conflict between free and slave labor. The author of "The boys of '76" has presented briefly the cause, scope, progress, and meaning of the war of the rebellion by grouping the leading events. He has endeavored to see the questions at issue as the people of the seceding States saw them. The writer, as correspondent of the Boston Journal, witnessed many of the great battles and made the personal acquaintance of most of the generals. Since the war he has also known many of the Confederate generals. The aim of the book is to teach the younger generation the meaning of the great historic drama in which their fathers played their parts so nobly. The book has upwards of 175 illustrations.

Coleridge, Christabel R. A near relation: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 62 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 563.) pap., 20 c.
The question of identity, which at the moment is the epidemic among novel-writers, has been skillfully handled in this story. Two cousins are born on the same day. One mother dies, the other is so ill for a long time that both babies are taken care of together, and the nurse, excited over the family troubles, forgets which is which. The surviving mother brings them up together, and loves them equally. The plot and denouement are exciting. The character of the mother and her influence upon the opposite characters of the boys show some fine work.

Since the late Lord Houghton wrote his sympathetic life of Keats, at that time considered the biography of the poet, so many lovers and students of Keats have been busy, that much new information has been brought to light, and much of the old has been proven mistaken. As no connected account of Keats' life and work, in accordance with the present state of knowledge, exists, Mr. Sidney Colvin, also author of "Landor" in this series, was asked to contribute another volume to the English men of letters. His new sources and authorities are manifold, covering several pages. From his material he has evolved a concise but thoroughly appreciative biography.

Gives a flattering account of the part played by the Irish race in the history of America, through the Revolution, the war of 1812, etc. The development of the Irish race in various important states is noted, their progress in business, in the accumulation of wealth and honors, and also their success in literature and the learned professions. Other facts connected with the subject give the book a value for reference.

Mason's "Personal traits of British authors" suggested this work. The arrangement is the same, the contents consisting of extracts from well-known literary biographies and correspondence so arranged as to present a brief view of the subject's life and work. The introductory biographies with list of works, by Miss Cone, are very helpful. The volumes supplement Mr. Mason's work, as they embrace the literary women excluded from his series. The names of the subjects are: Hannah More, Frances Burney, Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin, Mary W. Godwin Shelley, Mary Lamb, Maria Edgeworth, Jane Austen, Joanna Baillie, Lady Blessington, Mary R. Conklin, Mrs. Nathaniel, [Jennie M. Drinkwater.] Isobel's between times. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] c. 521 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The story opens in France. Here Isobel Kellinger had lived at a small boarding-school in Havre during almost all the twenty years of her brief life. Isobel is an American girl and the only daughter of a sea-captain. She has never received much love from father or mother, and has grown up a dissatisfied, unhappy girl, yearning for love and a home life. The story illustrates her character, and the changes it undergoes both through trouble and happiness. She returns to America to live with her grandfather, and has many unusual experiences before she finds the happiness she desires. There is a strong element of religious teaching in the story.

Rizpah was a waif who had been adopted by an eccentric woman who bestowed upon the girl her name and fortune unconditionally; the story deals chiefly with Rizpah's mode of using the bequest, how she came to a final understanding with Griffin Vanderveer, and why she felt enabled to appropriate the quotation, "Thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy name."

The strictly original features are as follows: It is grammatically graduated from beginning to end; words occurring for the first time are in large type; grammatical peculiarities are printed in italics and explained in the vocabulary and tables; no idioms nor irregular verbs occur in the first part; every irregular verb in the second part is numbered and fully conjugated in the verb table at the end of the book.

Conscience, Miss Blanche, ed., [pseud.] The confessions of a society man; ed. by Miss Blanche Conscience: a novel. N. Y. and Chic., Belford, Clarke & Co., 1887. c. 3–266 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The avowed aim of this realistic narrative is "to remove the veil as far as possible from the lives of society men." The hero, Dick Conway, a selfish, heartless man of the world, mingling in the innermost circles of Philadelphia's most fashionable set, is the speaker. His own innumerable flirtations and not very creditable adventures with the "boys" form the subject of his story —told, however, with no suggestion of indelicacy. The scene opens in Phila., and shifts to Nantucket, Newport, Old Point Comfort, and New York. The style is flowing and easy, and the purpose good, although at times the revelations are rather startling. The book is very nicely gotten up, the four full-page pictures and graceful initial letters to each chapter adding very much to its attractiveness.

Converse, Frank H. The adventures of Tad. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 285 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Tad is a homeless waif; while warming himself in the railroad station in Phila. he finds an alligator-skin satchel left accidentally by its owner, who has been speaking to him, on his chair. Tad's attempt to restore this property gets him into various sorts of adventures. In escaping from a policeman, who thinks him a thief, he takes refuge in the train and is carried to Boston. Here he is dogged by a confidence-man who suspects the satchel contains valuables, and succeeds almost in geting it from Tad. The boy finally gets to Brixport, finds relatives and a good home, and the owner of the bag, who gives him five hundred dollars.

Conway, Moncure D. Pine and palm: a novel. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. c. 4+348 p. S. (Leisure Hour ser., no. 207.) cl., $1.

The story opens just before the Rebellion with an episode which led two Harvard students to dispute and then challenge each other. Subsequent events prevent a duel, but the slavery question is still an open one between Sterling, of Virginia, and Wentworth, of Massachusetts; the young men adopt a rather Quixotic mode of settling their dispute, and acting upon the advice of one of the professors, each determines to see life from the other's vantage-ground. Sterling sets out for the North, and learns much that is pleasing and new to him; Wentworth goes South, and is forced to amend his views. When they again meet the civil war has indisputably settled the question; experience, however, only serves to knit closer the partisans of both pine and palm.

Written by the author of "As common mortals," published anonymously. Nineveh, Long Island, is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melrose and their only child, Barbara. "Charley" Melrose is a shiftless, unlucky man, who succeeds at nothing he undertakes and finally dies from drink, leaving his family penniless. Barbara's hatred of poverty, and all its attending miseries, leads her to think only of money in marrying. She has two chances and takes the one which seems most hopeful of bringing her wealth and position. The story of her sad married life is a picture of a phase of living familiar to all New Yorkers.

Cooper, Sarah. Animal life in the sea and on the land: a zoölogy for young people. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 12+413 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

This book is offered to young people with the hope that it may help them in their studies of natural history. The aim has been to make it accurate and bring it up to the present condition of science; at the same time scientific terms have been avoided when others could be substituted for them. Starting with the sponge, and going systematically through the animal kingdom, a gradual development has been traced from the simple forms of life up to the highest, such subjects having been selected for the purpose as are of most general interest. Especial attention is given to the structure of animals, and to the wonderful adaptation of this structure to their various habits and modes of life.

During the publication of the articles embraced in this volume in Harper's Bazar they obtained many readers and awakened considerable interest and discussion. They are full of information, which goes into minute details of how a family may live well on a very limited income. The methods of buying the articles of food suggested, and the various ways of cooking, will prove most instructive reading to young housekeepers. The style in which the information is presented is unusually fresh and attractive. A good index is a feature of the volume.

Costello, Augustine E. Our firemen: a history of the New York fire departments, volunteer and paid. N. Y., A. E. Costello, 2 W. 14th St., 1887. c. 28+1112+13 p. il. O. cl., subs., $6; hf. tky. mor., $8; full tky. mor., $10.

An elaborate history of what has been considered by competent authorities one of the best, if not the best, organization of its kind in the world. In addition to the history of the fire department from its earliest beginning the author devotes considerable space to the history of the insurance systems, the fire-engine, the architecture, the water supply, and the improvement and growth of New York City. The biographical element is predominant. The author's plan has been strictly chronological, and to give facts as they could be gathered from trustworthy sources. The present is the first work on the subject compiled on so large a scale, and may be considered authoritative for a long time to come. The work is written in a plain, matter-of-fact style, is handsomely printed and lavishly illustrated—chiefly by Major D. E. Cronin and Louis Oram. A copious index and sketches of commercial and corporate enterprises, such as the Central Trust Company, Western Union Telegraph Co., etc., conclude the sumptuous volume.

Cotte, Alfred M. Contes tirés de Molière, no. 1: L'Avare. N. Y., W. R. Jenkins, 1887. c. '86. 62 p. D. pap., 20 c.

The first of a series of little volumes which are to be devoted to telling in modern phraseology and in condensed form the story of the best-known works of Molière, Corneille, Racine, Voltaire, Balzac, Musset, Dumas, Victor Hugo, George Sand, etc. Many of these can only be found in the expensive "complete works" of the authors, and families and schools need but a small proportion of the works that have become classics. To put the best known within reach at reasonable price is the aim of the editor.

Relates chiefly to woman's position in the medical profession. The three great stumbling-blocks to her further progress, Prof. Coues considers, are "religious intolerance, scientific insolence, and social tyranny."

Could aught atone? by the author of "Magdalen's legacy." Chic., The Illustrated Pub. Co., [1887.] 3–278 p. D. (Popular ser., no. 11.) pap., 25 c.
Matrimonial difficulties estrange Wynne and Phillip Rathsforth, and tempt Wynne to an act which an intervention of fate saves her from committing. Her life from thenceforth becomes one of self-renunciation and effort to atone for an uncommitted deed.

The brownie pictures and poems have been one of the most popular features of St. Nicholas Magazine during the past few years. Both grown people and children have delighted in these quaint, original little figures and their amusing adventures. Every one will be glad to have the whole series of pictures and poems in book form as now presented. The book is beautifully gotten up and many new pictures have been added, and there are brownies on the fly-leaves and all over the colored cover.

Coxe, A. Cleveland, (Bsp.) Institutes of Christian history; an introduction to historic reading and study. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887. c. 7+328 p. D. (The Baldwin lectures, 1886.) cl., $1.50.
Hoping to bring practicable Christian influences to bear upon the great body of students annually assembled at the University of Michigan, Bishop Harris, of the P. E. Church, undertook to collect funds for that purpose. The Hobart Guild was established, a hall erected and a lectureship endowed by Henry Porter Baldwin, formerly Governor of the state, and his wife. Six or eight lectures are to be delivered annually by a clergyman of the P. E. Church. Arthur Cleveland Coxe, Bishop of Western New York, delivered the course here given during 1886. It is a lectureship similar to the Bampton Lectureship in England, for the establishment and defence of Christian truth.

Life in Florida after the war is the leading motive. "Cracker Joe" is the wealthiest man in his immediate neighborhood; born poor and ignorant, but with much native shrewdness and intelligence, he quickly develops business qualities, which rapidly make him a rich man. His wife is also a character, while the negro cook, "Aunt Pruny," is a most decided element both for good and bad in the story. A New York family, impoverished by speculation, who buy a house from "Cracker Joe" and settle down to a permanent residence, add a charming heroine to the women characters. The "cracker" and "negro" dialects are thoroughly well done.

A part of the Province of Ulster in the North of Ireland, embracing Antrim, Londonderry, and Donegal, is the scene of Miss Mulock's explorations. She writes delightfully of its grand desolation and wonderful scenery, and of the good and bad qualities of its peasant population. The many poetical legends and stories connected with its ruins and ancient history are told in her familiar style. The book is handsomely gotten up for the holidays.

Crane, T: F:, ed. Le romantisme Français : a selection from writers of the French romantic school, 1824—1848 ; edited for the use of schools and colleges, with an introduction and notes. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. '86. 47+362 p. S. (French classics, no. 2.) cl., $1.50.

The object of the present work is "to give some idea of a school or period of literary history as well as space and the character of the classes for which the book is intended will permit." The selections are in French, and are intended for those who have already been made acquainted with the ordinary grammatical difficulties of the French language. The notes are confined almost exclusively to the explanation of literary and biographical questions. The introduction indicates the various lines of influence and phases of the romantic school, which, the editor says, "under the guidance of the teacher and with the aid of the list of works to consult, the student can investigate more fully at his leisure."

Crawford, F. Marion. Marzio's crucifix. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1887. c. 3+250 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is Rome. The great power of the work lies in the careful and subtle study of character. Marzio is a worker in silver, whose artistic tastes and pecuniary interests lead him to the production of church plate, chalices, crucifixes, etc., orders for which he receives through his brother, a Roman priest. Marzio hates the church and the clergy above all things, but cannot give up the lucrative work his brother brings him. The author has made a remarkable study of the union of artistic strength with moral weakness, of fierce passion with ingrained cowardice, that characterizes Marzio. The crucifix is one of Marzio's masterpieces and has an important bearing on the plot.

Crawford, F. Marion. Paul Patoff. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2+456 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Like "Marzio's crucifix," this is a remarkable study of strange duality of character. Paul Patoff is a diplomatist The grave, powerful, dominating man attracts ; the cold, impenetrable, apparently heartless soul, on the other hand, repels. This character is brought into strong relief by that of his brother, a brilliant young officer, with almost supernatural beauty, a ready tongue, sweet voice, and dashing grace. The story begins and ends in Constantinople and the Bosphorus, affording Mr. Crawford opportunity for his marvellous word-painting in the description of nature, the people, and the habits and customs. His description of the rites practised in the Mohammedan mosque of Agia Sophia is one of the finest in this remarkable book. It also contains a strong study of insanity, introducing an original specialist, and a very careful dissertation on the first love of very young girls. The work is running as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly.

Crawford, F. Marion. Saracinesca. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1887. c. 4+432 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is laid entirely among the patrician society of Rome in the year 1865—a class that Mr. Crawford has carefully studied and observed. The Prince Saracinesca, his only son and heir Giovanni, and a beautiful girl whom the latter loves, the Duchesse d'Astrardente, who is married to an infirm old man, are the leading characters. There is also a political element in the story, one of the characters being a spy of the Liberal cause.

Crowninshield, Mrs. Schuyler. The ignoramuses ; a travel story. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 3–446 p. il. sq. O. cl., $2.50.

The "Ignoramuses" are the same five children who took the summer cruise described in "All among the lighthouses," published last season. They take the name on shipboard, where they find so many things they know nothing about. It has been the intention of the author, who resided abroad for some time, to give in the guise of a story such information about the countries visited as cannot be found in text-books. The party sails for Hamburg and visits all the important cities of Germany, Switzerland, and the south of France. The story leaves them in Nice, where they are met by Captain Gordon. The volume is profusely illustrated and is uniform in style with the author's former book.

Cruger, Mary. The Vanderheyde manor-house, N. Y., Worthington Co., [1887.] 2+323 p. D. cl., $1.25.

An unjust suspicion forced Harry Elliot to resign hopes of a brilliant business career, and take up his residence in the old Vanderheyde manor-house; about the same time a strange misunderstanding with his wife occurred, then his financial prospects brightened, and young Elliot commenced to plan for the future, when the mystery of the story abruptly terminate his hopes and add strange complications that intensify the interest and curiosity of the reader.

Cummings, E. C. Nature in scripture : a study of Bible verification in the range of common experience. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. '84. 12+357 p. O. cl., $1.75.

The author aims to prove that the every-day facts of every-day life among average people, if properly grasped, are convincing proof of the truth of the Scriptures. He takes as his text Acts vii. 11 : "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so." He dwells at length upon the subjects that have always most puzzled expounders of the Word, the fall, justification, law of atonement, the process of redemption, etc.

Curtis, G: Ticknor. Creation or evolution? A philosophical inquiry. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 19+564 p. D. cl., $2.

A strong interest in the modern doctrine of animal evolution, and a careful study of the works of Darwin and Herbert Spencer, resulted in the author writing the present book. "The result," he says, "of my study of the hypothesis of evolution is, that it is an ingenious but delusive mode of accounting for the existence of either the body or the mind of man; and that it employs a kind of reasoning which no person of sound judgment would apply to anything that might affect his welfare, his happiness, his estate, or his conduct in the practical affairs of life."

A satirical society sketch depicting the getting up of an operetta, in a small place "within twenty-five miles of New York city." The little volume depends entirely upon its style for success, the unknown author having a brilliant, trenchant method of picturing the littlenesses and the humorous aspects of would-be-fashionables. There is only a thread of a story, the characters being known only by the names of their parts in the operetta, as "the portrait," "the statues," "the author," "the doppelgänger," etc.

A story of Plymouth, England. "Gran" is the good angel of a poor struggling family. The father takes to drink, the home is broken up, and "Gran" goes to the poor-house. Even here her tender, merciful nature helps others more unhappy than herself.

D., S. E. Mahaly Sawyer; or, putting yourself in her place. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1888. [1887.] c. 5+328 p. S. cl., $1.25.

In the form of a story, of which the scene is laid in New England, the author aims to teach the relative duties of ladies and servant girls. Mahaly Sawyer is a young lady who "lives out" for a year as an experiment, and then instructs ladies and servants that if their mutual relations are to be peaceful and profitable, they must be based on the injunction, "to do unto others as ye would they should do unto you."

Dahlgren, Mrs. Madeleine Vinton. Lights and shadows of a life: a novel. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 400 p. D. cl., $1.50.

By the author of "A Washington winter," "The lost name," and other stories. A romantic story of Southern life, before the war, told in the first person. The heroine paints in glowing colors the past glories of the rich planter's home and hospitality and also gives a glimpse of some of the horrors of slavery. The story, however, can scarcely be called one with a purpose, although it does enter into the question of miscegenation—the young girl who is the narrator having given her heart to a young man of cultivation and charming exterior to whom a suspicion attaches of being the child of a slave woman.

Dale, Allen. Ned Bachman, the New Orleans detective. N. Y., J: S. Ogilvie & Co., [1887.] 2–159 p. D. (The champion detective ser., no. 10.) pap., 25 c.

The story is made up of a network of crimes committed in New Orleans by a gang of ruffians who called themselves the black band. Ned Bachman proves that he can outwit them when he rescues Hero Dalton in several perilous positions. In addition to this detective story the book contains a quaint little romance with the apropos title "Old memories."

Damon, Sophie M. Old New England days: a story of true life. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. 6+434 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Ruth, the seventh daughter of General Allwoode, is the courageous heroine of a story whose scene is laid in Vermont during the war of 1812. Incidentally the heart-burnings and love affairs of almost all her sisters and cousins are brought in, and Ruth is almost invariably called upon to smooth the path of others and stand back on all occasions.

Dana, Ja. D. Manual of mineralogy and petrography; containing the elements of the science of minerals and rocks for the use of the practical mineralogist and geologist and for instruction in schools and colleges. 4th ed., rev. and enl. N. Y., J: Wiley & Sons, 1887. c. 7+517 p. il. D. cl., $2.

In this edition the general plan and scope of the work remain unchanged. But it has been revised throughout, and brought down to the year 1886 in its descriptions of minerals, and in the introduction of the many new species announced during the past eight years. The chapter on rocks has been rewritten, rearranged, much enlarged, and supplied with new illustrations. The work is greatly indebted, for facts about ores and other useful minerals, to the excellent annual report on the "Mineral resources of the United States," by Mr. Albert Williams, Jr., published by the United States Geological Survey.

See notice under Longfellow, H: W., "Weekly Record," P. W., Oct. 2, '86, [766.] These 3 v. complete the new Riverside ed. of Longfellow's works.

Darling, Mary Greenleaf. Gladys: a romance. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 304 p. D. (Round world ser.) cl., $1.25.

Gladys Lyman lived on the Continent until her sixteenth year, when circumstances occurred that made it wise for her to return to America, where she quickly fell into native ways, and assumed readily the round of gayeties that called her from Bar Harbor to Boston, and made her the intimate of a number of social lights. At the juncture life looked the most alluring to Gladys, Gordon Lyman formulated and carried out a scheme that transformed the heroine from a happy girl to a dissatisfied woman who never lost sight of her own incompleteness. Dr. Stephen Forbes finally interposes and his manner of saving Gladys from herself is the most pleasing part in a society novel that introduces a graphic description of the yellow fever scourge that almost overwhelmed Memphis, Tenn., in 1878.

Darling (The) of an empire: a novel. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1887. D. cl., $1.50.

Darwin, C: The formation of vegetable mould, through the action of earth-worms, with observations on their habits. N. Y., J. Fitzgerald, [1887.] 91 p. O. (Humboldt lib., no. 92.) pap., 30 c.

Darwin, C: The life and letters of Charles Darwin; including an autobiographical chapter; ed. by his son Francis Darwin. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 2 v., 7+558; 4+562 p. pors. D. cl., $4.50.

The great scientist and the author of the "Origin of species" is a most interesting subject for a biography. The methods by which his books were evolved, he special lines of thought and study he habitually indulged in, his manner of working, and his daily life and habits are all facts every one wishes to know something about. His son has aimed to gratify this interest and curiosity through material chiefly from his father's pen, filling two thick volumes. The first volume opens with an autobiography most quaintly and frankly written. This is supplemented by reminiscences; following are letters covering all the chief events of his life from 1828. They give a brief history of all his works. Four appendices give an account of his funeral at Westminster Abbey; a catalogue of his works, a list of portraits of him extant, and a list of the honors, degrees, etc., bestowed upon him, and of the societies of which he was made member. A good index, fac-simile of handwriting, portraits, illustrations of his home, etc., complete a valuable work.

Daudet, Alphonse. La belle Nivernaise: histoire d'un vieux bateau et de son equipage. N. Y., W: R. Jenkins, 1887. 111 p. S. (Contes choisis, no. 11.) pap., 25 c.

Alphonse Daudet's latest publication. It is a charming story, graphically portraying life on the Seine; with delicate touches of character painting, and full of delightful humor and pure sentiment.

Daudet, Alphonse. La belle Nivernaise; the story of an old boat and her crew. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1887. 5+331 p. il. D. hf. leath., $2.25; pap., $1.50.

Contains, also, "The fig of the idler," "My first dress-coat," "The three low masses," and "The new master," all excellent examples of the peculiar genius of Daudet, who now ranks among the greatest living novelists. The translation is very good. The illustrations are by Montégut, and paper, print, and general get-up are a credit to the publishers.

Daudet, Alphonse. Sappho: Parisian manners; il. by Rossi, Myrbach, and others. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1887. 370 p. D. pap., $1.50; hf. leath., $2.25.

Daudet, Alphonse. Tartarin of Tarascon, traveller, Turk, and lionhunter; il. by Montégut, De Myrbach, Picard, and Rossi. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1887. 6+245 p. D. hf. leath., $2.25; pap., $1.50.

A romance, of which the scene is laid in Spain. The hero is a modernized Don Quixote, and the story is inimitably funny. It is beautifully printed, and the publishers have secured duplicates of the illustrations by De Myrbach, Montégut, Picard, and Rossi, in the costly French edition, and have made a daintily-beautiful book.

Daudet, Ernest. Which? or, between two women; from the French by Laura E. Kendall. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1887.] c. tr. 18–310 p. sq. S. pap., 75 c.

A romantic love story, in which a gypsy girl of great beauty and heroism, named Dolores, and Antoinette de Mirandol, an heiress, are rivals for the possession of Philip de Chamondrin, the hero. About this double romance are clustered a series of stirring episodes, many of which are historic. The adventures of Philip, Dolores, and Antoinette in Paris are graphically described, also the Conciergerie prison and its noble inmates. Very stirring scenes are the attack on the Château de Chamondrin, Coursegol's struggle with Vauquelas, and Bridoul's rescue of the condemned prisoners on the Place de la Revolution.

Davidson, J. Thain, D.D. The city youth. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. 6+291 p. D. cl., $1.25.

These twenty addresses were delivered in London to "young men between sixteen and twenty, who have left the paternal roof, and have come up to push their way in the busy, crowded city." The author takes his text for each discourse from the Bible, and explains its bearings upon the life of young men to-day in a serious but cheerful and encouraging tone. Fully up to the standard of the author's former volumes, "Talks with young men" and "Forewarned—forearmed."

Phil., H: Carey Baird & Co., 1886. 608 p. il. O. cl., $6.

Davis, G: B. Outlines of international law; with an account of its origin and sources, and of its historical development. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 23+469 p. D. cl., $2.

Sufficiently elementary in character to be within the reach of students and others who may desire to gain some knowledge of the general principles of international law. Intended to be used as a text-book rather than as a book of formal reference. To that end, the use of citations and of technical law terms has been avoided, and an effort made towards great conciseness and simplicity. Where quotations have been found necessary, they have been acknowledged in the text. At the end of each chapter will be found a list of references to state papers, and a general bibliography of the subject of the text.

Davis, Rev. J. A. Leng Tso, the Chinese Bible-woman; a sequel to "The Chinese slave-girl." Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. '86. 416 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

The author is not a novel-writer, but having been a missionary in China is thoroughly familiar with life and customs in that country, and also with the experiences of the missionary and the methods of missionary work. The present volume tells the story of the life and work of a Chinese Bible-woman who went about the country carrying Christ into the homes of the people. There is a slender thread of romance running through the volume which adds to its interest. The book is full of information concerning the country and abounds in realistic pictures.

Davis, Rev. Lyman Edwin. A pastor's thought on living themes; with an introduction by Marshal H. Bright. N. Y., The Tibbals Book Co., [1887.] c. 3–288 p. D. cl., $1.

Collection of lectures and orations written for particular occasions, sermons, poems, essays, etc. Some of the subjects are: The spirit of the times, a sermon; Development and revelation, an oration; Paul the single-hearted, a sermon; The tribute of the flowers, an address delivered on Decoration day; Religion at the door of the public schools; Henry Ward Beecher. There are about a dozen poems alternating with the papers, mostly on religious subjects.

Davis, L: S. Studies in musical history. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 5+164 p. S. cl., $1.25.

"Music is but one of the effects of the cause, the Christian Church, and upon its rituals and institutions depended the fate of the whole tone system. It is from the history of the Church that much of this volume is drawn." —Preface. In his first chapter the author gives "a standard of music," and his succeeding chapters treat of the spirit of Jewish music, the mass, the first Christian hymn, the organ, color and thought in music, use and influence of bells, etc. His tone is warm and the subject is evidently very dear to him.

Davis, Minnie K. The Lollard: a story of the Wiclifites. Phil., Lutheran Pub. Soc., [1887.] 366 p. S. cl., $1.

A romance of the 15th century which has for its hero the celebrated Lollard, Sir Roger Effingham. Like most historical tales truth and fiction are liberally intermixed, but the story serves the author's purpose admirably, as it gives a very good idea of this period of the Reformation, and pictures vividly the difficulties which beset those in search of the truth several hundred years ago. Sir John Oldcastle and others who favored Wycliffe's doctrines are introduced.

Davis, S. M. H: Norway nights and Russian days. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1887. c. 7–325 p. il. S. cl., $1.25; hf. cf., $2.50.

While the actual voyager, who is seeking "fresh fields and pastures new," and who may be drawn to attempt the growingly fashionable tour through Norway, Sweden, and Russia, will find herein many valuable facts and hints for comfort in seeing how agreeably the party of three ladies made their trip, that larger class who travel in the books of others will catch the inspiration of beauties and oddities and sights and characters of singular interest. The wild, impressive scenery of the Norwegian coast, by land and sea; the quaint simplicities of the people; the strange loveliness of the Arctic Circle, and the midnight sun; the pretty passage through the canals of Sweden; the episode of Finland; the barbaric splendor of the two great Russian capitals—are all described gracefully and clearly.

"The life of the young missionary bishop, who was massacred with a number of Christian converts by the King of Uganda in October, 1885, is told with sympathy and fervor in this volume by one who knew him well and who has had access to his family and personal papers, including the diary of his very last hours in captivity. It is a narrative of deep interest, not only on account of its religious lessons, but owing to the peculiarly attractive traits of the man whom it commemorates."—New York Tribune.

Dawson, Sir J. W. The story of the earth and man. New ed., with corrections and additions. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 9+411 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In this, the 9th edition, several corrections and additions, rendered necessary by the progress of discovery, have been introduced into the text, and notes have been added with reference to other new points. The general statements and conclusions remain, however, substantially the same as in 1873; the author having seen no valid reason to depart from any of them, while with respect to some, additional evidence in their favor has been furnished by the facts and discussions developed in recent years.

Dayne, J. Belford. In the name of the Tzar: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 44 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 580.) pap., 15 c.

Three men, a Russian, a Frenchman, and a German, meet near the far-famed convent of La Grande Chartreuse, on the last Sunday in Jan., 188–. They are members of a far-reaching society, which is conspiring for the liberty of Russia, which has for its head a Russian prince of the royal blood who works under the command of the Tzar, who is represented as in sympathy with the revolutionists. The story is a prophetic one, its culmination, a revolution and freedom for Russia, not occurring till 1889. The scenes alternate between France, England, and Russia. The characters are taken from European nations mostly.

A second and enlarged edition of a dainty collection of original poetry. "We remember," says The Mail and Express, "writing about this collection a year ago, and it impressed us then, as it does now, as being the work of a new hand, from whom better things might soon be expected, good of their kind as these were, and who had the instinct of a true poet. What they possess is an abundance of the light and fanciful qualities of the early English lyrists; what they lack is depth of thought and feeling—the touch that only experience and suffering can impart. But they are charming, for all that."

An effort to give, within the space of a day, a vivid picture of the Galilean activity of Jesus. The historical data are taken from the Gospels, but consist not only of what is there narrated, but embrace also many features that have hitherto been but little noticed. It is written with a poetic fervor that holds the attention to the end. Prof. Delitzsch is recognized as one of the leading Old Testament scholars of the world.

Desbeaux, Emile. Mattie's secret. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1887.] c. 8+188 p. il. sq. O. bds., $1.25.

A young French girl of seventeen, upon discovering that her little brother is in danger of losing his sight, heroically sacrifices her own happiness and devotes herself to his cure. Their mother is dead and their father deeply worried with business difficulties, so Mattie resolves not to marry, as her father had wished her to do. This little story is only the framework for an instructive book for young people on such subjects as coal, diamonds, lead-pencils, torpedoes and torpedo-boats, glycerine and dynamite, etc. To occupy the little Andre's time and mind while his eyes are undergoing a cure, Mattie relates or reads to him these interesting facts. The text is full of pictures.

Diaz, Mrs. A. M. Bybury to Beacon street. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 276 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Bybury was a little New England town, wedged in among the hills, with a small, widely-separated number of inhabitants who had small opportunities and also little desire for amusement. Captain Jerome, an old bachelor living among them, conceived a plan of bringing the people together occasionally for entertainment and improvement, which he details in letters to a Boston friend. Many subjects are discussed of special interest to women, such as woman's work and wages, marriage, luck, the hired girl, society, fashion, etc. They are in the country vernacular and brightly and cleverly handled.

Diaz, Mrs. Abby Morton. The John Spicer lectures. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1887. c. 99 p. 1 il. D. cl., 60 c.

The lecturer, Mr. John Spicer, "aged eight and one month," delivers the amusing and practical discourses which the book contains to an assemblage of boys and girls in Barn Hall. These "talks" relate to Christmas-trees, Knives, Swapping, Clothes, Food, Money, Riding, Fourth of July, Crying, Sneaks, Manners, Boys. They are in the language of a very small boy and are quite funny, while instilling some good, healthy lessons.

"This is the first issue of a directory intended to be useful mainly to persons engaged in the music trade, to musicians and singers by profession, and to that somewhat small fraction of the community that may suddenly require information as to the addresses of certain individuals whose names and dwelling-places could not readily be found elsewhere. The initial edition of a book of this sort must necessarily be incomplete, but the gathering of about 8000 names is a respectable beginning and promises well for the completeness of the second issue of the work. Every city of importance in the United States is represented in the directory as it stands by a greater or lesser array, of tenors, sopranos, pianists, organists, and music-dealers."—New York Times.

Mrs. Dodd is a New York lady who records the interesting details of a six weeks' driving-tour made through the cathedral towns of Southern England with "Boston," her husband, and the pony "Ballad." With descriptions of the various towns and their architectural attractions, are many amusing adventures and funny anecdotes, all told in a charmingly fresh style. Beginning with Arundal, the towns visited include Chichester, Winchester, Salisbury, Bath, Wells, Glastonbury, Exeter, etc.

Dodd, Anna Bowman. The republic of the future; or, socialism a reality. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 86 p. S. bds., 50 c.

All who have had the pleasure of reading "Cathedral days" know the charm of the author's descriptions. The vision of New York City two hundred years hence, when men and women are equal in all things, children educated by government, all work done by machinery, all competition abolished, all wealth equally distributed, all romance dead, is described in letters to a friend in Sweden. The letters are full of instructive truths, given in innocent comments, without seeming to bear any hidden lesson. The little book is daintily attractive in paper, print, and cover.

Biography of the late W: E. Dodge, the well-known New York business man, philanthropist, and reformer. Made up from his own reminiscences, those of his friends, and from his correspondence. The volume was first published for private distribution, but at the request of friends who think the work should be accessible to a larger number of readers, the present edition is issued and at a price that will simply meet the cost of publication.

Dodge, Grace H. A bundle of letters to busy girls on practical matters. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. 4–139 p. S. cl., 50 c.

These twelve letters have grown out of practical talks addressed every Tuesday evening to the members of working girls' societies, originated by Miss Dodge. The title-page says they are "written to those girls who have not time or inclination to think and study about the many important things which make up life and living." They refer to health, dress, men friends, home life, care of the sick, working and saving, etc.

Dodson, W: A choice of chance: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 65 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 587.) pap., 20 c.

The scene opens at St. Lozell's, Cornwall. Audrey Dalrymple, a five-year-old child, has a peculiar adventure in her father's garden, which frightens her very badly and instills a doubt into the reader's mind as to Audrey's ancestry; this uncertainty is intensified as the story progresses, and the interest is divided between a romantic love affair and the adjusting of an uncanny event which reveals a portion of Sir James Ketterly's history and the secret of Audrey Dalrymple's birth.

In preparing a new edition, some things have been added which Prof. Dolbear hopes will make the book more useful to those who consult it. Two things may be specially mentioned: the electric lamps and lights for projection purposes, and the projection and phenomena of vortex rings.

Dole, Edmund P. Talks about law: a popular statement of what our law is and how it is administered. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 8+557 p. D. cl., $2; shp., $2.50.

"The main object of the book is to give the non-professional reader, in a simple way, some idea of what law is, and how it is administered, such general information upon this most interesting and important subject as all intelligent persons are expected to have in regard to other subjects. With a subject so vast I have found it no easy matter to make my book a small one. My object has been to make it accurate and readable."—Preface.

Little stories and verses illustrated by comic pictures take the place of the stereotyped exercises and reading-matter. The lessons are made up of questions on the stories and poems, which are of a character to gain the attention of young people. There is a good vocabulary, also the conjugation of the verbs, lists of names and numbers, etc., with other useful matter. The reading and lessons are of course graded, and can be made serviceable in object-teaching.

Dostoleffsky, Fedor. Prison life in Siberia; tr. by H. Sutherland Edwards. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 64 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 594.) pap., 20 c.

A minute account of life in the prisons of Siberia. The story is told by one who was for ten years a convict. His own story and that of several of his fellow-convicts are woven in with many revolting scenes of prison work and discipline, and low vice indulged in by the convicts and ignored by the authorities. Published by H: Holt & Co., in 1881, under the title "Buried alive; or, ten years of penal servitude in Siberia," from the Russian, by Marie von Thilo. See "Weekly Record," Ap. 16, '81, [483].

Doudney, Sarah. Prudence Winterburn. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] 8+319 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story was written some years ago and has been reprinted by the author for the purpose of showing young girls the danger of acting entirely upon impulse when selecting a friend; these views are verified in the ill-advised course of Prudence Winterburn, who permits no interference with her injudicious choice, until she realizes consequences which nearly wreck her happiness.

Douglas, Amanda M. Foes of her household. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 391 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Doris Hawthorne and Lloyd Wentworth meet abroad under rather peculiar circumstances, which terminate in a hasty marriage. After a short period of unalloyed happiness, events shape themselves so that Doris is forced to go among her husband's people, who seem determinedly set against her. From this time forth the interest centres in Doris Wentworth's mode of combating the "Foes of her household."

Douglas, Amanda M. The fortunes of the Faradays. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] c. 2+407 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Faradays are a doctor, his wife, and ten children, who are all ambitious and longing to get out of their straitened circumstances and cultivate their special talents. An old uncle dies, leaving them a fortune, and then the different characters are shown in their manner of spending it. Val, an adopted daughter, is the most important actor in this little home drama. After a time, when her nearest relations are discovered, they prove to have a claim upon the Faraday money, which makes a really interesting plot.

Dowling, R: Tempest-driven: a romance. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 4+358 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The story is ushered in with a dramatic scene enacted, at midnight, on the Dulwich Road. This is followed by a still more sensational one, which introduces the principal characters, forecasts the plot, gives the details of a peculiar love episode, and reveals enough of the heroine's sad history to justify the title "Tempest-driven." Doyle, J. A. English colonies in America. V. 2. The Puritan colonies, 2 v. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 12+333; 14+416 p. maps, O. cl., ea., $3.50.

The first volume of this important historical work was published in 1882. It related to Virginia, Maryland, and the colonies, and though a distinct work in itself, it was the first instalment toward a complete history of the English colonies in North America during their period of dependence on the mother country. Mr. Doyle had expected to only give one volume to this portion of his subject, but the immense amount of material he found at hand necessitated two. Also, in place of concluding the work in another volume, he will have to deviate from his original plan, by the addition of two more—making five in all instead of three. The subjects of these volumes are: The Plymouth pilgrims; The settlement of Massachusetts: Roger Williams and the Antinomians; The settlement of Connecticut and the Pequod war: The settlements south of Cape Cod and north of Massachusetts; New England Confederation; The war with Philip, etc., etc. Index.

Drake, S: Adams. The making of the great west, 1512–1883. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 9+339 p. il. and maps, D. cl., $1.75.
As in the "Making of New England," by the same author, "this book aims to occupy a place between the larger and lesser histories." It deals mostly with that section lying beyond the Mississippi, a second volume being promised in which the central portion of the Union will be treated. Mr. Drake shows how it was first colonized by the white race, how the title to that area was acquired from the natives, and how it passed to the people of the existing republic. The book is divided into three groups: "Three rival civilizations," the Spaniards, French and English; "Birth of the American idea," including the adventures of the "Pathfinders" and the tracing of the Oregon trail; and "Gold in California, and what it led to."

Cécile is a young girl whose relationship to the Count De Porcien is not made clear; on his death a technicality of the law which prevents her inheriting his fortune becomes the motor for several intrigues, in which the chief participants are escaped convicts from Toulon; their desperate attempts to secure Cécile's fortune fail, although reasons prevent her claiming the De Porcien money.

Du Boisgobey, Fortuné. Death or dishonor (Jean Coupe-en-deux); a story of devoted love and family pride; tr. by Sir Gilbert Campbell. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. 320 p. D. pap., 25 c.
A young Parisian, who has returned from America after a lengthy absence, is found in the room of a hotel with a man who has apparently been murdered and without doubt robbed of a large Sum of money. "Jean's" explanation of his presence is not believed, and he is arrested, tried, and finally condemned to be executed for the crime. A foolish scruple holds the young man back from telling his real name, etc., and so in spite of the successful detective work of his counsel he dies an innocent man, by the guillotine.

Du Boisgobey, Fortuné, The detectives eye. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1877. 3–112 p. D. pap., 25 c.
The revolting details connected with the finding of the dead body of a young woman furnish ample proofs of a murder but fail to give any clue to the perpetrator of the deed who eludes the vigilance of the police, and puts an unusually clear-sighted detective on several false scents; an unskilled amateur proves his staunch friendship and constancy by bringing the murderess to bay.

Du Boisgobey, Fortuné. The steel necklace. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. 5–29 p. D. pap., 25 c.
The story opens with a crime which horrifies Paris and baffles the skill of the police until evidence points to Berthe Mornas; thread by thread the mystery is unravelled and the readers are startled, by the strange details of the murder and the murderess motives for supplementing murder by suicide through the aid of the "steel necklace" which figures extensively in the story.

Düsterdieck, F:, D.D. Critical and exegetical handbook to the Revelation of John ; tr. from the 3d ed. of the German, and ed., with notes, by H: E. Jacobs, D.D. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. '86. 8+494 p. O. cl., (Meyer's Commentary,) $3.

The author is well known as a writer on apologetics. Dr. Jacobs says in his preface, "In revulsion from the assumptions of the Tübingen school . . . our author has taken the directly opposite position, and denied the apostolic origin of Revelation. . . . It must not be inferred, however, that, in denying that the Apostle John wrote the book, he also denies its inspiration, this he maintains, although with limitations. In the notes, we have frequently given the arguments on an opposite side, mostly from some of the later standard authorities. This commentary is itself of high value, especially because of its compact summary of the interpretations of all the more prominent expositors." The latest volume of Meyer's "Commentary on the New Testament."

No unpublished correspondence existing regarding this famous woman, it is not possible to reveal any new facts concerning her. The world has already in its possession, probably, all it is possible to ever know of her. This knowledge has been incorporated in a long list of memoirs, biographies, and correspondence, which the writer owns her obligation to in this effort. Her work has the merits of freshness in style and independence in judgment, and also of conciseness. The estimate bestowed upon Madame de Staël by her contemporaries has vanished before the mature judgments of time. While Miss Duffy is fairly appreciative of her talents, she falls in line with later critics in denying that she was a genius.

Dullea, Owen J. Claude Gellée le Lorrain. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1887. 7+144 p. il. D. (Illustrated biographies of the great artists.) cl., $1.25.

"I have endeavored to present a brief yet complete account of Claude and his art from a careful collation of what has been written concerning him up to the present time, including Lady Dilke's exhaustive monograph. I have also included the results of a comparative study of his pictures, drawings, and etchings, together with several grains of information gleaned while writing a series of articles on the lives and works of artists of the French school."—Preface. The appendices give for the first time in English — found through Lady Dilke's researches — Claude's will, his inscriptions on the drawings in the Liber veritatis, and lists of his pictures and etchings. There is also a bibliography. Index.

A handsome new edition, uniform with the illustrated edition of "Les misérables" published last year. Beautifully printed in large clear type on rich paper, with ample margins. The illustrations have a special interest, the designs for them having been made and engraved when the work was originally published in France, nearly fifty years ago; they are, therefore, a faithful reproduction of costumes and fashions of that day, and vigorous and spirited delineations of Parisian and French life at the time the plot of this great romance was laid.

This pleasant story is intended to show that the failure of our little plans may not be failures in life. It is a story of three young lives—young girls. It begins when they are school-girls, and we follow them on through various experiences as life's meaning deepens.

Durand, Mme. la générale. Napoleon and Marie Louise : a memoir. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. 11+266 p. S. cl., 75 c.; pap., 35 c.

The author of these souvenirs was for four years in the service of Marie Louise, and was an eye-witness of much she relates. She gives a charming picture of the domestic life of Napoleon, whom she evidently saw only at his best. The book was written for Mme. Durand's family, and was not undertaken with a view to publication.

The scene is laid in Memphis, A.D. 1643. Many incidents in the life of Mukaukus George and his son Orion, the uprising of the Moslems, famine and the plague, caused by the failure of the Nile to inundate, forecast the tragic event of the story. The Egyptians clamor for the revival of the ancient heathen rite of casting a beautiful maiden into the depths of the Nile to appease the wrath of the river god. Paula, the betrothed of Orion, is chosen, and great pomp attends the approaching ceremony. Paula is arrayed in fitting raiment, but events transpire which prevent Paula from being the victim, although the Nile received its bride, and to this day the people of Cairo commemorate the event by placing a figure of clay on the banks of the Nile on the night of its dropping. This is called the Aroosa or bride. The splendors of Memphis are portrayed, and the several religious factions of the time introduced. They are the Moslems, the Jacobite Christians, and the Melchites.

A record, admirably told, of the life, and, more particularly, of the scientific achievements to which the "headmaster of Egyptology" owed his high and well-deserved honor and renown. Prof. Lepsius was born 1810. At Leipzig, Göttingen, and Berlin he devoted himself to the archæological division of philology. He was made doctor when thirty-three years old. In Paris he learned, among other things, lithography and engraving, and finally decided to pursue Egyptological studies. In 1838 he projected an expedition to Egypt, which left England in 1842, and with success returned to Germany in 1845; became professor at Berlin in 1846; again went to Egypt in 1866 and discoved at Tanis a bilingual description of the time of Ptolemy Energetes. A bibliography of his works is given in the appendix.

Eclectic guide to health or physiology and hygiene ; with special reference to the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics and their effects upon the human system. N. Y. and Cin., Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 189 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

The subject-matter is presented in a plain, didactic style ; common words are usually employed, instead of technical terms, and the details of anatomy are subordinated to the more important consideration of physiology and hygiene. The character of alcoholic drinks is clearly defined. Their effects upon the various organs of the body and their consequent effects upon the mind are fully explained. Tobacco, opium, and other narcotics receive due attention.

"Owen Meredith," in a preface of twenty pages, gives some account of the writer and his work. Of the stories he says: "Like some of Nathaniel Hawthorne's 'Mosses from an old manse,' or the 'Märchen' of Hans Christian Andersen, though written in prose, they belong, in all essentials, to the province of poetry. They are not abstractions of pure fancy, but ideal delineations of real feeling, with a definite core of human interest." Karl Erdmann Edler was born in 1844, at Padebrod, in Bohemia. "Baldine" comprises the greater part of the volume. The other stories are "Notre dame des flots" and "The Grossglockner mountain."

Ellerton, J: The twilight of life: words of counsel and comfort for the aged. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1886. 5–199 p. D. cl., $1.

This little work is an attempt to bring before those who are advanced in life some helpful and cheerful thoughts on the special conditions, trials, encouragements, and blessings of old age. It is based upon the conviction that old age has a true place and function of its own in the ordering of the world. Several beautiful poems are scattered through the text, which is printed in great primer type to suit the eyes of aged readers.

Elliot, H: R. The common chord: a story of the Ninth Ward. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 6+294 p. S. cl., $1.00.

The "common chord" is "the rich, solid, satisfactory chord of C major," in which the author has pitched this story of the lives of some inhabitants of the Ninth Ward of New York City, which he pronounces the American ward of that cosmopolitan town. He introduces about half-a-dozen characters, but each one is a little masterpiece of word-painting.

Ellis, E: S. The camp in the mountains. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1887.] c. 366 p. il. S. (Deerfoot ser., no. 2.) cl., $1.25.

Mr. Ellis has supplemented "The Deerfoot series" with two new volumes. The principal characters in both are Fred Linden, Terence Clark, and the young Shawnee, for whom the series is named. "The camp in the mountains" tells of Fred's adventure with a Winnebago, Terry's captivity, and the Deerfoot's negotiations in behalf of his friends; "The last war-trail," of Deerfoot's wooing, George Linden's surrender, the Indian's sacrifice, and then comes the author's assurance that Deerfoot will never again appear in his books.

Ellis, E: S. The hunters of the Ozark. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1887.] 2+410 p. S. (Deerfoot ser., no. 1.) cl., $1.25.

The noble Shawnee Indian Deerfoot who was one of the heroes of the "Log cabin ser." again appears in this volume the first of a new series for boys. The story opens with the adventures of Terence Clark and Fred Linden in their search for a white cow that has strayed from the farm. Terence almost falls a captive to an Indian, but is rescued by Deerfoot. Fred afterwards joins his father in an expedition to the Ozark Mountains, and has numerous hunting adventures, etc.—in which Deerfort figures.

Rev. Sumner Ellis was born in North Orange, Mass., 1828; he died in Janury of 1886. He was for many years pastor of Universalist churches in New England, at Newark and Chicago. Rev. C. R. Moor's sketch of his life is full of interest. The sermons of which the larger part of this volume is made up are selected from those written by Dr. Ellis in the more recent years of his ministry. It is believed they represent his best thought, and are good examples of his fine literary expression.

Emory, A. M. Told at Tuxedo. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 3+145 p. 1 il. S. cl., $1.
A party of ladies and gentlemen snowed in at Tuxedo, where they had assembled to spend the Christmas holiday, while away the time with stories. The first story, "Carmelite Castro," is a charmingly pathetic tale of California many years ago in Bret Harte's style; "In the shadow of Monte Diablo" is also of California. The other stories, "The doctor's rival," "A point of law," and "In solitude," are unusually good.

Engels, F: The condition of the working class in England in 1844; tr. by Florence Kelley Wischnewetzky. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [1887.] c. tr. 7+199+11 p. D. cl., $1.25.
Written in German and first published forty years ago. The author at that time was about twenty-four years of age, and the work bears the stamp of his youth, with its good and faulty features. The state of things described in this work, to-day, as far as England is concerned, belongs in many respects to the past. Notwithstanding this the book will repay study, representing as it does the views of the educated proletariat, backed by official statistics.

Engravings on wood; by members of the Society of American Wood-Engravers; with an introduction and descriptive text by W. M. Laffan. [Popular ed.] N. Y., Harper, 1887 c. No paging, F. cl., $12; édition de luxe, (limited to 110 copies,) $100.
The most distinguished wood-engravers of this country have contributed to this work twenty-five engravings, which are, with one exception, from American paintings. The work not only illustrates in the most striking manner the marvellous progress which has been made in wood-engraving in the United States, but it represents the highest excellence ever reached in that art, in which America holds the foremost place. The following is a list of the engravers who have contributed to the work: V. Bernstrom, T. Cole, W. B. Closson, John P. Davis, Frank French, T. Johnson, F. S. King, Elbridge Kingsley, G. Kruell, R. A. Muller, Miss C. A. Powell, S. G. Putnam, John Tinkey, F. H. Wellington, Henry Wolf.

Errett, I: Evenings with the Bible: Old Testament studies. In 2 v. V. 2. Cin., Standard Pub. Co., 1887. c. 2–374 p. O. cl., $1.50.
"These volumes have a field of their own. They are not meant to take the place of such works as Stanley's 'History of the Jewish church' or Geikie's 'Hours with the Bible.' They are meant for a large class of readers to whom a briefer and simpler treatment of Old Testament facts and themes will prove more acceptable, and which, written in popular style and with a stamp of originality in their method of handling Biblical subjects, will, we venture to hope, prove to the mass of readers less tedious than a detailed history, and more attractive than voluminous dissertations on ancient institutions, manners, customs, etc."—Introductory note.

Erroll, H. An ugly duckling: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 53 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 604.) pap., 20 c.
Kate Ferrers was a younger member in a family of seven; an unlikeness to her brothers and sisters, and unconvential ways, led her to compare herself, to the "ugly duckling;" in her proclivity for getting into scrapes she seemed as unfortunate as the storied bird, and finally an escapade with her governess condemns her to exile and a boarding-school at Geneva, where new difficulties assail her and deepen the plot; her resemblance to the proverbial duckling continues to the end, as she develops at a bound into a beauty and a heroine of a very pretty romance.

"'The Martyr of Golgotha,' which treats of the birth, the bringing up of Christ and his martyrdom, is remarkably well written. It may be called an amplification of the New Testament, but within certain sober limits. A careful study of the manners and customs of the Jews and Romans adds interest to the text. . . . Many of the most beautiful of the old legends are introduced, but the author is careful as to giving such side issues undue space. With commendable fidelity he follows the grand story of Christ, of Mary and Joseph, and writes of them with true Spanish fervor. It is with feelings of awe and respect that the author undertook the task, and he begs that his work be considered 'as a mere stone placed humbly by him on the immense pyramid of Christianity erected by the immortal words of the Martyr of Golgotha.'"—New York Times.

Intended to supply the widely-felt want of a work at once easy enough for a class reading-book and precise enough for a text-book. Great pains have been taken to make every statement as plain as possible, and to put every sentence into the form which will render it easiest to understand at first hearing. Familiar language, wherever available, has been preferred to the use of technical terms. Algebraic formulæ have been altogether excluded.

"The peace egg" is an old Christmas mumming play; Robert, a precocious but charming hero of Mrs. Ewing's, saw it performed by some street boys, and immediately planned a mumming expedition, in which he, his brothers and sisters, and the two dogs Pax and Darkie were to figure. Love of adventure led him away from home, but was the means of effecting a much desired reconciliation and bringing his parents joy at Christmas-time. The play itself with an introduction from Mrs. Ewing appears in the back of the book.

An introductory note by an Associate in Johns Hopkins University says that of the thirty-five legends given, the first twenty-three were selected and translated from the pages of the French folk-lore journal, Melusine, published from 1878 to 1887; the remaining stories were selected and translated from Paul Sébillot's Contes des Provinces de la France. Scrupulous care has been taken to preserve a note of the sources of the stories. The writer claims that the transmission of such stories adds to the sum of modern learning and throws much light on peasant character. Children will enjoy these smoothly told wonder-stories.

An endeavor to interest young people in the mysteries of science, by an ingenious combination of fact and fiction, and an attractive framework of simple dialogues. The stories, twenty in number, betray their subjects through their titles. We mention a few: "Snow—the emblem of what?" "The fire and water elves," "The discovery of glass," "Tea, coffee, pepper, and potatoes," "Sponges, oysters, and coral," "A bird paper-manufacturer," "How silk is made," "The plant world," "Queer stories about birds," "Anecdotes of animals," etc.

Fawcett, Edgar. The confessions of Claud: a romance. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. '86 and '87. 3-395 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

A study in heredity. "Claud," or Otho Clauss, is the inheritor of a sad family history. He is the son of a German peasant who ran off with the daughter of a wealthy Breton bourgeois; failing to gain her father's forgiveness he came to America and is gaining a precarious living, when the story opens, in an obscure part of New York, as a cultivator of fine vegetables. He is a morose, jealous man, and from striking his wife, at length murders her, and is hanged for the crime. "Claud," with this tragedy darkening his life, is adopted by a wealthy lady, who takes him abroad. The evil traits he has inherited bear fruit in his own painful life.

Fenn, G: Manville. The bag of diamonds. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 188 p. S. pap., 25 c.

Scene laid in London, chiefly in the house of a fashionable physician, who has let his practice slip from his grasp while he studied chemical problems. The doctor's office-boy is an original character. The bag of diamonds is brought to the doctor's office by his daughter's lover and mysteriously disappears. There is a happy ending after many complicated scenes.

Fenn, G: Manville. Devon boys : a tale of the North shore. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 66 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 562.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is laid on the North shore of the Devon coast; the exploits of a trio of schoolboys are told by one of their number, Sep Duncan, who lionizes Bigley Uggleston in his history of perilous adventure, enlarges upon Bob Chowne and his peculiarities which add much to the story, and gives himself a modest position, though he is unmistakably the hero.

Fenn, G: Manville. The master of the ceremonies : a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 4+448 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The mysterious murder of old Lady Teigne, who is a lodger in a private house at Saltenville, an English watering-place, is the central motive. The murderer carries off her diamonds, the robbery of which having apparently been his object in gaining entrance to her room. The diamonds prove not to be real diamonds, and, being cast into the sea by the murderer, rise up in proof against him finally, not, however, before many innocent persons have been suspected and accused, and much suffering caused.

The design of these lectures is to present to the student of pharmacy a course of instruction on weights and measures, specific gravity and its uses, and all operations occurring in pharmaceutical practice, in the most simple manner possible.

Fergus, Mrs. M. Nearer to Jesus : memorials of Robert Walter Fergus by his mother ; with a prefatory notice by the Rev. F. Oswald Dykes ; from the 5th thousand of the Glasgow ed. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] 4-248 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The little hero of this true story was born at Glasgow, 1853; he only lived ten years, dying of a severe injury received through his clothes accidentally catching fire. His mother relates his little life in detail from his birth. He was always a precocious child and early showed a strong religious element in his character, which became stronger towards the end. His story is interestingly told, and is full of instruction to children and suggestions to parents.

Fessenden, Mrs. Laura C. S., [Laura C. S. Dayton.] A Puritan lover. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. 3-220 p. D. (Globe lib., no. 32.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is laid in New England prior to the Revolution. Some village gossips usher in the story and forecast a mystery in the family of Abner Joiner. Strange incidents occur and give credence to the rumor, and Abner becomes ostracized and his daughter loses her lover. Both remain steadfast in their secrecy until Francisco Willoughby reveals the secret which restores Faith's honor.

"'The Unseen King, and other verses,' by Caroline Leslie Field, is full of pleasant charm. The poet here sings sweetly, simply, and with genuine feeling, chiefly of nature as manifested in out-door life. Her verse is graceful, her diction crisp, and her fancy and imagination are delicate and colored with true poetic sentiment. Her little book is commendable in almost every point. The volume appears in a dainty vellum cover, and with every attraction that clear type, fine paper, and excellent printing can impart to it."—Boston Gazette.

A collection of sketches, reviews, anecdotes, and poems, whose strongest characteristics are their wit and humor. The author, Eugene Field, is the editor of the Chicago Daily News. Julian Hawthorne speaks of him as one already famous in journalism, although his name was only heard for the first time a few years ago. The little book will be found full of genuine fun and quite entertaining.

Finck, H: T. Romantic love and personal beauty —their development, causal relations, historic and national peculiarities. N. Y., Macmillan, 1887. c. 12+560 p. D. $2.

The author has collected a number of curious facts tending to show that romantic love (as distinguished from conjugal affection) is a modern sentiment, only about six hundred years old. He analyzes love into eleven constituent traits and emotions (including admiration of personal beauty, emotional hyperbole, gallantry, coyness, jealousy, etc.), and shows, in separate chapters on "Love among animals" and "Savages," "Ancient Hebrew love," "Greek love," etc., that although traces of some of the elements of love are to be found among animals and primitive men, the majority were absent even in the love-affairs of the ancient civilized nations, owing to the lack of opportunties for courtship (chaperonage), the degraded position of women and the substitution of parental dictation in place of the free choice of lovers. The author is a Harvard graduate (1876) and a well-known New York journalist.

Finley, Martha, [Martha Farquharson.] Elsie's friends at Woodburn. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1887.] c. 334 p. il. D. (Elsie book ser.) cl., $1.25.

Elsie Dinsmore and a number of others who appeared in the earlier works of this author have still their places in her last book, which tells of Captain Raymond, and his method of governing his children, Max, Lulu, and little Gracie, and their beautiful home at Woodburn. Lulu takes up most of the story; her hasty temper leads her into a number of escapades and stormy scenes in which she does not always come off victor.

Fischer, Kuno. History of modern philosophy: Descartes and his school; tr. from the 3d and rev. German ed. by J. P. Gordy; ed. by Noah Porter. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. tr. 17+589 p. O. cl., $3.50.

Hitherto only a small portion of Kuno Fischer's life-work has been translated into English, for one reason, among others, that the work is not yet complete. During this interval there seems no reason, thinks Dr. Noah Porter, "why the earlier portion of this history should not be given to the English public, especially when we consider that the history of the school of Descartes, in many senses, and especially as treated by our author, stands by itself and holds closer relations to all the forms of modern speculation than is commonly supposed." The publishers have decided to publish in two separate volumes a translation of that portion of this history which treats of Descartes and his school (including Spinoza). They may publish the entire history. The translation is made by a competent German scholar.

Fisher, Miss F. C. ["Christian Reid," pseud.] Miss Churchill: a study. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 294 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

An unusually interesting character study. Miss Churchill is discovered by Bernard Lysle a brilliant literary man, who goes south after the war to pay a visit to an old friend. Here he finds Cecil Churchill leading a hopelessly monotonous life, teaching a half dozen little children. He recognizes, after a few interviews with her, that she is a woman of genius, who needs only culture and experience to make a name for herself in literature. He plans for her to go to Europe—to Italy—as companion to his cousin the Marchesa Ferrata. Here, surrounded by luxury and refinement Cecil's character developes. How it developes and in what direction, we cannot spoil an exceptionally good story by telling.

Fisher, G: Park, D.D. History of the Christian church. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 13+701 p. maps, O. cl., $3.50.

The work is designed for intelligent readers generally, and the author has avoided the extended and minute discussions that could only be of interest to technical students. He aims to exhibit fully the relations of the history of Christianity and of the Church to contemporaneous secular history, and has tried to "bring out more distinctly than is usually done the interaction of events and changes in the political sphere, with the phenomena which belong more strictly to the ecclesiastical and religious province." The author is Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Yale University, and acknowledges important assistance received from his pupil, Mr. Henry E. Bourne, a graduate of the Divinity School last year, who is also the compiler of the excellent index.

The hero, a man of earnest convictions and devoted to a mother who has been a disgrace to him, is the leader of a strong political faction. Carried away by his love for the wife of a ruined intriguing nobleman he wavers in his work for the cause of Italian liberty for some time, but finally, urged by her words and her noble renunciation of everything but her duty, he becomes the strength of his almost ruined cause. Some of the characters are very well drawn. The heroine's mother, uncle, and husband especially so. The translation is good. Much political matter has been omitted.

A story of Mississippi some forty years ago. The boy who tells the story is sixteen when he begins the narrative; "our fellows" are his "chums" of the adjacent plantations. The Choctaw Indians, then very numerous in the South, gave them a great deal of trouble; added to the Indian depredations were the attacks of the "Swamp Dragoons," a set of lawless young men hiding in the swamps. With these episodes and many hunting adventures the book does not lack excitement.

Foster, Mrs. I. H., ["Faye Huntington," pseud.] St. Paul's problem and its solution. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] 218 p. D. cl., $1.25.

How to bring the young people to Christ was the problem that troubled the pastor of St. Paul's Church. Many experiments are tried—none proving of any avail until the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is started The book gives the history of this society and its successful workings. There is a little thread of a story, many young people being introduced and their various opinions and actions serving as a text.

Foster, Mrs. I. H., ["Faye Huntington," pseud.] Stories of great men. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] 4–136 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

A companion volume to the author's "Remarkable women," and fulfils like requirements. It is made of twenty-six brief biographies of remarkable men, of ancient and modern times. Although the sketches are necessarily short, they contain the salient points in the history of each.

Foster, Mrs. I. H., ["Faye Huntington," pseud.] Stories of remarkable women. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 3–99 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

In the twenty-two brief sketches which make up this little volume the author has packed a good deal of pleasant information about well-known women, among them Alice and Phœbe Cary, Miss Mitford, Margaret Fuller, Harriet Newell, Mrs. Alden ("Pansy"), Dorothea Dix, Miss Francis E. Willard, and others. No attempt is made to be exhaustive, but just enough is given to furnish a fair idea of what has been accomplished by each, and to arouse an interest which will lead to further inquiry and investigation.

Foster, Stephen Collins, My old Kentucky home. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. No paging, il. sq. O. cl., $1.50; seal, $2.50; flex. cf., or tree cf., $5.

Full-page pictures by Charles Copeland and Mary Hallock Foote interpreting the song. They are naturally scenes and incidents of the old slave-life in "Dixie." The frontispiece is a capital portrait of Stephen C. Foster, the author of this poem and "The Swanee River." The music is also given. A picture of "My old Kentucky home" adorns the front cover.

Fothergill, Jessie. Borderland: a country-town chronicle. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 3+ 428 p. S. (Leisure hour ser., no. 197.) cl., $1 ; pap., 30 c.

The four heroes are introduced as boys in the first chapter, their personalities and distinguishing traits described. The scene is laid in England, on the river Tees. Twelve years afterwards the young men return from school and college and again meet on the old ground. Here the story all takes place. It is entirely a home tale of love and domestic happiness and perplexities. The moral that seems to run through it is that it is useless expecting more of human nature than it has to give. There must always be degrees of goodness and badness, and the most that can be done for the bad is to make them less bad, or as good as their limitations will permit.

This work is written under a deep sense of responsibility. Of the necessity for some other term than "Bright's disease" in the present state of our knowledge, no question can exist. It is now fifteen years since the writer attempted to grapple with this widespread morbid change in the chapter, "Combined heart and kidney disease" in the first edition of his work, "The heart and its diseases." This may form some explanation for his venturing upon the present essay.—Preface.

The future Europe the author believes is to be Slav or Saxon. The struggle for supremacy will be between Russia and England—not in our day, probably, but still not very far distant. This struggle, however, may be avoided, he thinks, "by a disintegration of those forces in the dominions of the Czar which threaten the future peace and well-being of mankind," and "in the establishment of civil liberty in Russia, and in the substitution of industrial methods for its present military system." A series of chapters on the territory of Russia, its people, government, etc., offer reasons for these views.

An excellent translation of a popular German novel. A most complicated question of identity runs through a story that gives a detailed picture of life in Germany immediately after the overthrow of Napoleon I. The self-sacrifice of a woman for the wife of the man she loves, to prevent his discovering his wife's unworthiness, is the key-note of a story of misunderstanding which finally establishes the claims of the last Von Reckenburg.

Frederic, Harold. Seth's brother's wife : a study of life in the greater New York. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 6+405 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Has been a feature of Scribner's Magazine since its beginning. A strong story of every-day life and one essentially American. Seth Fairchild's experience as a green country boy on a great city daily, of which he finally becomes the editor, is true to the life, and not without its lesson. Isabel, "Seth's brother's wife," is the central figure of a love story which is full of dark shadows. A murder and many realistic descriptions of rural New York life and character are among the elements which go to make up an unusually fresh and original novel.

Frémont, Mrs. Jessie Benton. Souvenirs of my time. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. 393 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Jessie Benton Frémont, as well as her husband, General Frémont, and her father, Senator Benton, are historical figures. From her childhood Jessie Benton was thrown among famous people, and continued to live among them and to witness some of the most noted events of history and of society, here and abroad, that have occurred during the past fifty years. These valuable reminiscences she has put together in charming style for the benefit of young and old. At fourteen she was bridesmaid to the youthful bride of Mr. Bodisco, the then Russian minister at Washington. The account is a genuine bit of history. It is followed by chapters on "Washington in past days," "Family life at the White House," dealing especially with the days of Van Buren and Jackson; "Mrs. Madison and Mrs. Hamilton;" life at St. Louis, New Orleans, and in California, in her youthful days; and her journeys and experiences abroad, where she was received at the courts of several countries.

Fresh bait for fishers of men; by Revs. F. Barrows Makepeace, W. L. Gage, D.D., Smith Baker, Reneu Thomas, and C. E. Bolton. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. House, [1887.] c. '86. 87 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Papers suggesting a new and more hopeful line of church work for the working classes and the poor. Methods are also described, and successes related, that have been reached by those engaged in the work. The first and the last two chapters contain portions of an essay read before the Congregational Ministers' meeting of Boston, March 22, 1886, upon the topic, "The responsibility of the Church for the entertainment of the people." They are by Rev. F. Barrows Makepeace. The other chapters by successful workers are "Hints from Germany," by Rev. W. L. Gage; "Working people and city life," by Rev. Smith Baker; "An experience with outsiders," by Rev. Reneu Thomas; "Practical education and entertainment for the people," by C. E. Bolton.

Frey, Albert R. Sobriquets and nicknames. Bost., Ticknor, & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 3+482 p. O. cl., $3.

The first attempt to gather together the nicknames and sobriquets bestowed upon writers and other celebrities and to trace their origin and meaning. Mr. Frey is one of the staff of the Astor Library, and has made a work which will hereafter take its place with the indispensable handbooks of literary reference. The work is in two parts. The first—of course by far the larger—embraces the nicknames in alphabetical order, with the explanation following. The second part is a careful index of real names with the nicknames attached. The explanations are for the most part brief, but in exceptional cases space has not been limited. After "The man in the iron mask," twenty-five pages are devoted to an account of the various myths connected with this title; to "Rob Roy" three pages are given; and "Beau Brummel," "Beau Fielding," etc., have seven or eight pages given them. The exhaustive paper on "The man in the iron mask" is credited to Mr. E. Denham, of New Bedford, Mass.

Lord Shaftesbury was one of England's greatest philanthropists; he only died in 1885. A larger and fuller work has been written of his notable life, and his many efforts in Parliament and out for the amelioration of the condition of the London poor; but the facts will be found in this little volume amply and authentically recorded, and so succinctly that its contents is easily mastered in a few hours' reading.

The present volume is a summing up of a life of observation, study, and experiment among plants, in the field, forest, and garden. In endeavoring to explain some of the physiological laws and principles which govern the growth of plants, the author says he has not placed implicit confidence in the statements of those who are usually considered eminent vegetable physiologists, but has stated what appeared to him to be the facts. Besides the ground covered by title, the volume also gives descriptions of the process by which varieties and species are crossed or hybridized, and the many different methods by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied.

Mr. Fuller was a life-long friend of Mr. Garfield—his reminiscences extending from his earliest school-days to the day of his death. He also quotes copiously from Garfield's letters, believing that the extracts, "revealing the almost infinite tenderness of his great heart, will give a finer appreciation of his imperial soul than anything heretofore given to the public." His chief aim has been to present his illustrations friend "as the true-hearted, genial, companionable Christian gentleman" he believed him.

In his "proem" Edgar Saltus draws a comparison between the genius of Gautier and that of Mérimée as shown in two of their best-known works, "Avator" and "The Venus of Ille," which are here incorporated in a pretty little volume. The translator, in spite of his foreign name, has put the French stories into excellent English.

Genone, Hudor, [pseud.] Bellona's husband : a romance. Phil., J: B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. '87. 3–332 p. D. cl., $1.

A scene at Spidhank, Long Island, opens the story. Mr. Holt and wife are discussing a scheme which a friend claims will net him a fortune; his wife disapproves, however, and Mr. Holt is about to be influenced by her judgment, when fate interposes and he takes a trip to New York and purchases an interest in the aërial disc. Again a rapid change of scene occurs. Mr. Holt is transported by a novel mode of travel to the planet Mars, where the main incidents occur. Although some confusion is inevitable. Mr. Holt enjoys his trip thoroughly and amuses the reader with his graphic portrayal of the inhabitants of Mars, and strange wooing of Bellona. The closing chapter relates to the return of Mr. Holt to earth. Originality and a rather broad humor are the features of a book by the author of "Inquirendo Island."

Gerdes, E. The soldier's ward ; or, saved for martyrdom ; a sequel to "Walter Harmsen ;" tr. from the Dutch (with changes and additions) by Rev. Dan. Van Pelt. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. tr. 410 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

The story is full of living interest. It paints many real pictures of the times of the reformation in Holland and introduces the reader to some of the practices and machinations of the Jesuits and gives glimpses of the sufferings caused by this order. The interest centres throughout the story in Antoine Moreau, whose character is not wholly fictitious, although the incidents are in some respects changed. In this story, after suffering at the hands of the Inquisition, Antoine is finally released from [illegible] his friends, but only to die in their hands [illegible] book is full of valuable information [illegible] times to which it belongs.

Gilchrist, Annie Somers. Harcourt; or, a soul illumined. 2d ed. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. '86. 490 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Nashville, Tenn., is supposed to be the seat of a girls' seminary, where the two heroines are drawing to the end of their school-life. One is rich and the other poor, beautiful, and very talented, with special gifts for music. The music-teacher of the college is desperately in love with her, and troubles her very much with his devotion. Harcourt, a young man possessed of many attractions, comes upon the scene, and, after a long course of love that does not run smooth, events at last shape themselves to make everybody happy.

Gilchrist, J. G., comp. Manual for infantry officers of the National Guard; showing uniforms, arms, manual, equipments, and positions, for officers of every grade, on all occasions of drill and ceremony; rev. by E. C. Knower. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887. c. 2–163 p. T. cl., $1.

Compiled from "Tactics," "Army regulations," "Decisions on points of tactics," and "Duties of guards and sentinels" by Kennon. Great pains have been taken to secure perfect accuracy in all particulars. In doubtful cases where proper authority could not be found, the question was submitted to the Adjutant-General U. S. Army, the date of reply being given.

Gilder, R: Watson. Poems. [New complete ed.] In 3 pts. 1, The new day; 2, The celestial passion; 3, Lyrics. N. Y., The Century Co., [1887.] c. '75–'87. 103; 76; 136 p. D. pts. 1 and 2, ea. cl., 75 c.; pap., 35 c.; pt. 3, cl., $1; pap., 50 c. In 1 v., cl., $2.50; pap., $1.20.

Mr. Gilder's poems were formerly published by C: Scribner's Sons. In this edition "The celestial passion," parts of which have not before been printed, appears as a companion volume and sequel to "The new day." "The celestial passion" series is divided, after the prelude, into four parts; the first shows the connection of poetry with the theme; the second has to do with the Christian idea; the third treats of deity; the fourth of the soul and immortality.

Gilmore, Emily. The boys of Riverton. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub. [1887.] c. 270 p. il. S. cl., $1.

Mildred Lyte's interest in "The boys of Riverton" led her to formulate and execute a plan which takes up most of the book and works a remarkable change in some boys who were formerly noted for viciousness. Those who are interested in this class of work will find many good suggestions in the story.

Gilmore, Ja. R., ["Edmund Kirke," pseud.] John Sevier as a commonwealth-builder; a sequel to "The rear-guard of the Revolution." N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 15+321 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In "The rear-guard of the Revolution," the author traced the career of this remarkable man—John Sevier, one of the original settlers of Tennessee—from his first appearance at Watauga to the close of the Revolutionary struggle. In the present volume he takes up the narrative where it there left off, and follows his course from the peace of 1783 to the end of his life; during which period, opposed by North Carolina and unaided by the General Government, he built up a great commonwealth in the very heart of the Western wilderness. Mr. Gilmore had access to the same sources and authorities he consulted in writing his first work, also some new material was put at his disposal of much value and interest.

Gipsy, [pseud.] For him; or, a promise given and a promise kept. Chic. and N. Y., Brentano Bros., 1887. c. 265 p. S. cl., $1.

The scene is laid in Chicago. There is no plot; the story is made up of a few incidents and a number of details in Blanche Forest's love affair. Blanche falls deeply in love with Maurice Hildreth, who returns her love, but is deterred from marrying her by motives of honor. Blanche upholds him and for love of him sacrifices her own happiness.

"This portly octavo represents the impressions of foreign travel upon one whose fortune it has been to visit London, Paris, Berlin, and other strange and remote places. The author has devoted the leisure intervals of professional study to sightseeing and to preserving his comments and criticisms for mankind, with the result of producing a work which every candid reader must pronounce thoroughly amusing, while not lacking in the qualities that convey a useful lesson."—Commercial Advertiser.

Gneist, Rudolph. The English Parliament in its transformations through a thousand years; tr. by R. Jenery Shee. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1886. 420 p. O. cl., $3.50.

Gneist, Rudolf. The student's history of the English parliament, in its transformations through a thousand years; popular account of the growth and development of the English constitution, from 800 to 1887. New English ed., rewritten, with a complete index, by A. H. Keane. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 26+462 p. O. cl., $3.

The first English edition of this work having been exhausted, advantage was taken of the opportunity thus afforded to have a fresh translation prepared, and a full index added, which, with other incidental improvements and additions, will, it is hoped, thoroughly meet the requirements of the numerous class of students for whom it is specially intended. The proofs of the translation all passed through the author's hands, the result being a faithful reproduction of the German text.

God in creation and in worship, by a clergyman. N. Y., [T. Whittaker, 1887.] c. 96 p. S. cl., 50 c; pap., 25 c.

The author aims to show that the early historic peoples believed in "One God Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible;" that their records and traditions indicate belief that matter and spirit, good and bad, were from God.

Godet, F. Commentary on St. Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians; from the French by Rev. A. Cusin. V. 2. N. Y., Scribner & Welford, 1887. 493 p. O. (Clark's foreign theological lib.) cl., $3.

Godin, M. Social solutions; from the French by Marie Howland. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [1887.] c. '86. 8+326+28 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The author is the head of the famous co-operative association known as Godin & Co. and the founder of the Familistère in Guise, France. Actuated by the noble principle that "the great capitalist has no moral right to use his fortune for personal aggrandizement, whether he inherited it from others or built it up himself through industrial enterprise," M. Godin has devoted the best part of his life in exemplifying this doctrine by using his vast fortune for the welfare of the people, with the most gratifying result. These essays were written in 1870—ten years before the legal association under the title Godin & Co. was incorporated.

Good things (The) of Life: fourth series. N. Y., F: A. Stokes & Bro., 1887. c. 64 p. il. obl. D. cl., $2.50.

Goodwin, Christina. After school-days: a story for girls. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] 3+196 p. D. cl., $1.

The opening pages are descriptive of life at a country boarding-school. In the first chapter the principal characters are introduced in a group at the close of the school term, and their conversation gives a clue to their different characters and aspirations. Later chapters develop their different courses of life as shaped by circumstances and inclination. It is not as a story alone that "After school-days" is charming. There is strong moral fibre in it, and there are scattered through its pages apt suggestions as to the vital things of life which cannot but set readers to thinking.

Grandgent, C. H. Italian grammar. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1887. c. 7+124 p. D. cl., 80 c.

The author has attempted to put into convenient form and the smallest possible compass all the grammar that the ordinary student of Italian needs. The endeavor has been made to make the book represent the Italian language of to-day; the exercises being taken chiefly from reading-books lately prepared for Tuscan schools. Still as many obsolete forms are given as students of Italian classics will need.

Grant, Eleanor. His servants who serve. N. Y., Rob. Carter Bros., [1887.] 3–126 p. il. S. cl., 60 c.

The book contains three stories which illustrate the text "His servants who serve;" the first tells how Minnette came to adopt it for herself; the second tells of "May's service" and why a young Irish girl did mission work in Normandy; the third tells how Olympe, or the weak servant, verifies the proverb. The stories seem to be made up of the experiences of an evangelist while working in France and Switzerland.

Green, Anna Katharine. 7 to 12: a detective story. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 2+114 p. il. S. pap., 25 c.

A clever story of a diamond robbery, the events of which all occur within five hours, from "7 to 12." Contains also another short story, "One hour more," relating to the suicide of a young woman in Paris.

Green, Evelyn Everett. Barbara's brothers. Phil., American S. S. Union, [1887.] 447 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Story of life in the quiet country town, St. Hilda, in the west of England. It relates to the family of Dr. Meynal, the leading physician, who has just died; the brothers and sisters, with their mother, have a hard time getting along together and finding a sympathetic outlet for their energies. Their experiences are full of instruction.

Greene, Belle C. A New England idyl. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. 222 p. D. cl., $1.

A typical Vermont farm furnishes the scene of this pretty idyl. Hester Ruggles, a girl of twenty-four, is the support and guardian of her seventeen-year-old, ambitious, pretty sister, her steady, helpful brother of sixteen, and the pet of the family, a boy of eight. Aunt Nancy, the dead mother's sister, is delightfully real. Two love stories are interwoven in the record of the daily events of the lives of poor farmers in poorer years.

Greene, Homer. The blind brother: a story of the Pennsylvania coal mines. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. 6–229 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.

The author received for this story the first prize, $1500, offered by the Youth's Companion, in 1886, for the best serial story. It is both pathetic and dramatic in its incidents, its leading episode dealing with the "Molly Maguires" of the coal region. A member of this gang is seen setting fire to the coal company's property by a small boy, Tom Taylor. Tom's feelings are played upon through his blind brother Bennie's infirmity, and he accepts money to withhold the truth. How his conscience at length reasserts itself is well told. The boy's imprisonment in the mine, with their enemy Jack Rennie, is an unusually strong scene.

Greene, Homer. Burnham Breaker. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] 494 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The story opens in the Burnham coal breaker, Scranton, Pa.; a conversation between Mr. Burnham and a boy named Ralph gives the reader a slight clue to a mystery surrounding the boy's history; this is lost sight of almost immediately in a terrible accident in the mines, and the death of Robert Burnham plunges Ralph into greater uncertainty about his identity; finally he falls into the hands of tricksters, who try to cheat him out of his heritage; upon the success of their plot the interest of the story and Ralph's future depend.

This volume contains services, including a responsive lesson, chants, a hymn of praise, etc., for every Sabbath in the year. Its aim is to furnish pastors and churches with a variety of helps and suggestions, though it does not call for the adoption of a complete system. The services for communion, baptism, reception of church-members, etc., will be of great value to pastors.

These letters of the well-known American sculptor, born in 1805, are both interesting and valuable. They not only reveal parts of the writer's character hitherto unknown outside of his intimate friends—his family affection, patriotism, and freedom from artistic jealousies—but offer most graphic descriptions of art and society in Europe and America, some fifty or more years ago, well worth preserving.

"A better and purer love story is not to be found in any language. There is no sickly sentimentality about it, even its most impassioned love scenes having a fine element at once unique and refreshing. Nadia, the heroine, is a wealthy Russian princess and Kerzof's courtship is a delightful episode that no one can ever forget, and the subsequent career of the married pair, with the unparalleled heroism, sacrifice, and love involved, will touch every heart to its inmost recesses. Vodia and Martha are charming characters, fully worthy of the fascinating novel.

Grey, Maxwell. The silence of Dean Maitland: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1886. 372 p. S. pap., 50 c.

Scene laid in an ancient English country hamlet. Cyril Maitland, the Dean, is introduced at the age of twenty, and is described as a very fascinating man. His twin sister, Lilian, is remarkably well drawn. The "silence" of the Dean concerns a crime committed at the age of twenty-one, for which he lets his most intimate friend suffer penal servitude for twenty years, while he rises in the church until he receives the highest honors, and becomes the leading preacher in England. A powerful analysis of human strength and weakness.

Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry was the younger brother of Commodore O. H. Perry, of Lake Erie fame, with whom he has often been confounded by the latter's biographers. The hero of this book had an eventful life, having served in the war of 1812 and in the Mexican war, and having assisted in extirpating the foreign slave-trade on the west coast of Africa. He did much, too, to raise the personnel of the navy; he was the founder of the naval apprenticeship system, and his methods helped to remove duelling, the grog ration, and flogging out of the American navy. His final triumph was the opening of Japan to the world. Mr. Griffis, who is the author of "The Mikado's empire," "Corea," etc., writes enthusiastically of his subject, who seems to have been a man of exceptional elevation of character.

Gronlund, Laurence. Ça ira; or, Danton in the French revolution: a study. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] c. 5+261 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This is meant to supplement "The coöperative commonwealth," published by Mr. Gronlund in 1884. It is a study of French socialism, as that was of German. The keynote of the work is found in this paragraph referring to Danton: "But while he did not make the revolution, he more than once saved it. He was, indeed, as Carlyle called him, the Atlas who in the most critical period carried the revolution on his shoulders. Moreover, being a more constructive genius than any of his contemporaries, he laid the right foundation for the future; and his policy should have the credit for nearly all the good his successors accomplished, as it would have saved France from all the subsequent penalties she has had to pay had it been constantly pursued."

Intended to arouse fresh attention to the great controversy between the Church of Rome and the evangelical churches. The author "recognizes it as a patent and undeniable fact, that the future of our race lies not with Papists, but with Protestants. Its leading nations this day are not Papal Italy, Spain, and Portugal, but Protestant Germany, England, and America. The nations that embraced the Reformation have never since ceased to advance in political power, social prosperity, philanthropic enterprise, and general enlightenment." The central thought of this work, "that the standard of living is the basis of wages and that social opportunity, or more leisure for the masses, as expressed in less hours of labor, is the natural means for increasing wages and promoting progress," Mr. Gunton acknowledges as belonging to the late Ira Steward, of Boston, whose literary executor he found himself in 1883, when Mr. Steward died. The development and presentation of the idea in this volume is the work of the present author. For on examining Mr. Steward's papers they were found only to consist of disconnected matter, made up of more or less extended notes, none of which were in a condition to be used. Hence it became necessary to work out the whole subject anew. The work is divided into three parts. 1. Increasing production, its law and cause; 2. The law of wages stated and historically established; 3. Principles and methods of social reform.

Against his better judgment this talented young man runs down to "York" for a couple of weeks and gets drawn into a combination of circumstances which he in time controls with "country luck."

The Rev. G. C. Haddock, a minister of the M. E. Church, while located at Sioux City, was determined to see the law relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors enforced. Being an uncompromising Prohibitionist, and fearless almost to recklessness, he brought upon himself the hatred of the liquor men. He was waylaid at night, August 3, 1886, and shot, it is said, by the foreman of a leading brewery, in pursuance of a confessed conspiracy to assassinate him. The book is written by his son, who, in endeavoring to portray the man growing up into the reformer, subordinates chronology to history.

Differs widely from "Jess" and "She" the authors previous novels, in being a story of English home life, and its every day commonplace incidents. The chief theme is love, which has its disappointment and suspense and final consummation. The element of sensation is not however wanting. The story opens with a brutal fight between cousins, one of whom is afterwards virtually his father's murderer.

A remarkable story of adventure and of the supernatural by the author of "King Solomon's mines." Two Englishmen, in an attempt to elucidate a mystery, are irresistibly impelled to make a journey to unexplored regions in Central Africa. Here, after the most astounding adventures, they find a beautiful woman reigning over a fierce but intelligent tribe, who date their origin back beyond the dawn of history. "She" is not only immortal, having already lived for 2000 years, renewing her youth through baths in a fountain of fire, the source of life, but has godlike powers. The story of the Englishmen's sojourn in this wonderful country is most thrilling.

Hague, W:, D.D. Life notes; or, fifty years' outlook. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] c. 11+362 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Contains the result of many years of observation and experience in different fields of ministerial activity, especially in Boston and Providence. Dr. Hague had a vigorous and exact memory, and in the later years of his life found great delight in recalling his earlier experiences. Though loyal to the Baptist church and an able defender of its beliefs and practices, he was catholic in spirit and charitable in his judgment. His retrospect of fifty years brings up men and movements in an important stage in the intellectual and religious life of New England.

"I have been satisfied for some years that the time has come for a new view of the life and character of George Washington, a view to be taken after a careful study of his own memoranda prepared for the history of his own life. As the readers of this book will learn, Washington left, arranged in careful order, perhaps more materials for his biography than any man of his century; but a certain habit of deifying him has thus far prevented writers of his life from approaching the study of the man in the way in which writers would address themselves to most biographical subjects. . . . It has been my aim, using in my narrative chiefly the diaries and the letters of the man himself, to present to the new generation of Americans the human Washington."—Extract from author's preface.

This beautiful helpful story of the twelfth century is brought out in a new holiday edition. The illustrations, which run over 125 probably, are small and imbedded in the text, but they are quite graphic and interpret satisfactorily the romantic and picturesque elements of the book.

Hale, Rev. E: E., ed. Lights of two centuries. N.Y. and Chic., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1887. 6+603 p. por. D. (Standard biographies.) cl. $1.75.

Brief biographies of celebrities in art, literature, and science during the last two centuries; intended principally for the use of schools, but of interest to all readers. Contains the lives of 10 artists and sculptors; 11 prose writers; 10 composers; 10 poets and 9 inventors. Each group illustrated with a page of portraits.

The basis of this work is a large collection of papers left by Benjamin Franklin to his nephew, W: Temple Franklin ; after a long and singular series of adventures these papers were purchased by the U. S. Government in 1881 on the recommendation of Mr. Blaine who was then Secretary of State. The sum paid was $35,000, the papers arriving the next winter in Washington. They embrace the long diplomatic correspondence and many other interesting and important documents relating to Franklin's residence in France. The work is embellished with several portraits of Franklin, and many little sketches of the French celebrities of the period.

Hale, Gertrude Elisabeth. Little flower-people. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. 8+85 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.

Six pretty little stories about "The flower servants," "The flower mistress and her seeds," "The composites and grasses," "The elfin ferns," and "The brownie scouring rushes," through the medium of which it is designed to teach children botany, as they are an equal mixture of fact and fancy.

Hale, J: P. Trans-Allegheny pioneers ; historical sketches of the first white settlements west of the Alleghenies, 1748 and after. Cin., S: C. Cox & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 3-330 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author is the oldest surviving descendant of the Ingles and Draper families, and relates in chronological order the wonderful experiences of hardship and heroism endured by these families and their followers in their frontier explorations and settlements along the entire Virginia border, from the Alleghenies to the Ohio, and still further westward into the inhospitable wilderness. A good picture is given of the savage tribes then in possession. The history that the hundreds of brave actors—of which these mentioned are but types and examples—made by their heroic deeds and sufferings can never be repeated, for, as the author truly says, the conditions can never again exist.

Hale, W: Gardner. The art of reading Latin ; how to teach it. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. 74 p. D. pap., 30 c.

The method described and urged in this pamphlet (now tested by a considerable experience in the writer's teaching) bases itself directly upon the Latin order (the method is of course the same for Greek)—that is to say, upon the actual process of statement of the thought; and shows, in some detail, how it is to-day possible for any properly trained mind of ordinary power to comprehend a Roman sentence without translations, being guided by those same indications of meaning, of one kind and another, scattered through the Roman sentence, which were sufficient, on a single reading or hearing, to convey its full contents to the Roman mind.

Hall, A. C. A. Notes for meditation upon the collects for the Sundays and holy days. Pt. 1, Advent to Trinity. Milwaukee, Wis., The Young Churchman Co., 1887. c. 188 p. S. cl., 60 c.

The notes were written out week by week during the year for the use of two religious communities. The author acknowledges his indebtedness to Dean Goulburn's "Readings on the collects." The points suggested for consideration are invariably drawn from the collects themselves. This volume includes the Sundays from Advent to Trinity. The Sundays after Trinity will form a separate volume next year.

Halse, G: Weeping Ferry : a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 52 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 596.) pap., 20 c.

"Weeping Ferry" gained its name from its girdle of weeping willows; it was the home of Peter Ray, the venerable ferry-man, and his daughter Effie, and also the scene of the leading events of this story. The story is a simple English tale of wrongs righted through the pertinacity of a young lawyer in hunting up facts. He comes to "Weeping Ferry" in the character of a novelist and moth-hunter, and in time gets together the details of a narrative which proves that an apparently obscure girl is the heiress of the Manor-house of Kesterton.

Hamerton, Philip Gilbert. The Saône ; a summer voyage ; with il. by Joseph Pennell and the author. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. 368 p. O. cl., $5.

An account of a voyage made in a canal-boat by Mr. Hamerton and Mr. Pennell, on the river Saône as far as it was navigable. They both made sketches of everything of interest they saw, and these studies are plentifully intermingled with the text. The text is written by Mr. Hamerton in the form of letters. It is both charmingly descriptive and full of suggestive thoughts on art.

Johnny Nelson heard an address in which the speaker referred to the fact that the marking of beautiful pieces of china and services of silver with the royal arms showed that they were intended for the king's use. His application was that all Christians, whether old or young, should so work that they could stamp their service with the royal seal of King Jesus. This thought took hold of Johnny's heart, and the book tells how he struggled to do everything "for His sake."

The story takes place in Pennsylvania, on the banks of the Susquehanna. On his deathbed, which is described in the first chapter, Mr. Honeywood reveals to his daughter a painful secret of her mother and his past life. At his death Alana finds that by his will she is the owner of the "Susquehanna Iron Works," although her father's confidence has led her to believe herself an illegitimate child, sprung from a mother who has been often imprisoned for robbery and other crimes. A strong power throughout the story is John Benham, the superintendent of the works. He loves Alana, and it is through his efforts that a vile plot against her good name and wealth is exposed.

Hardy, T: The woodlanders: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 67 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 572.) pap., 20 c.

Presents, like many other of Mr. Hardy's novels, a study of an out-of-the-way corner of the south of England, and of a phase of industry now almost passed away. The "woodlanders" are the principal characters, people living meagrely on a mere pittance gained by hard manual labor. "Marty South," one of the three heroines, and the lowest in the social grade, is a fine study of unselfish womanhood. Her love, with its tragical close, is the leading theme. The story is full of details of "Little Hintock" and its inhabitants that have evidently been taken from life, and have both unusual interest and value.

The scene is laid in New York City. Elias Bacharach, a Jewish artist, falls in love with a young Christian maiden, who charms him for a time into forgetting the teachings of Judaism. The result is a betrothal, of which Elias speaks fearfully to his uncle, the rabbi Gedaza, who contents himself by giving the doctrines of the Thorah on intermarriage, and prophesying that this event will not transpire. The rabbi's prophecy is fulfilled; Elias is seized on his wedding-day by a strange malady which dulls his sensibilities and leaves him a prey to feelings which cause him to forget honor and lose sight of his love for Christine Redwood. With the recovery of his senses comes a knowledge of his loss and the dramatic ending of a novel which gives a very true picture of Jewish life.

The author is now Professor of Systematic Theology in Yale University, and he dedicates his book "To the students who in successive classes have been under my instruction in philosophy and theology in Bowdoin College and in Bangor and Yale Theological Schools." He explains his reasons for writing this work in his introduction: "While the reasons for believing in God and seeking first his kingdom are always in essence the same, the apprehension of them by men of successive generations must vary in accordance with the progress of knowledge and civilization and the changing condition,opinions, and development of man. Hence in every generation the claims of God in Christ to the faith and service of man must be examined anew." Eighteen-page index.

A little fox-terrier, "Dame Trot," is the historian of this graceful tale of Mount Desert. "Paul Pry," her liege lord, two interesting little boys and their "Mamma" from New York, "Christy Perkins" and his weird old grandmother of Bar Harbor, are the characters. "Dame Trot" is a keen observer, and relates, in a pleasantly satirical way, the doings of the fashionable young men and women assembled at this famous summer resort. There is also a pathetic story about "Christy" which serves as an excellent contrast to the gay doings of the other characters.

Harrison, J. B. The latest studies on Indian reservations. Phil., Indian Rights Assoc., 1887. c. 233 p. S. pap., 25 c.

Armed with official letters from Washington, Mr. Harrison in 1886 visited the principal Indian reservations to examine and report the condition and character of the schools, farming, home-life, and missionary work, and the general and special relations of the Indians to civilization and their progress therein. This little volume contains his report, which is full of interest and most valuable in its collection of facts. By the author of "Certain dangerous tendencies in American life."

Harte, Bret. The crusade of the Excelsior. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 4 + 250 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story opens on board the barque Excelsior, from New York to San Francisco, off Cape Corrientes, Aug. 4, 1854. All the characters are gathered here, and the motive slowly develops itself. There is a charming girl and a love episode, an unhappy young man flying from a faithless and cruel wife, several rich merchants and their wives, and Señor Perkins, a mysterious character, whom no one seems to be able to fathom, and the inebriate captain and the crew. Señor Perkins turns out to be a filibuster bent on "liberating" a Central American state. He seizes the Excelsior, lands a portion of the passengers at Todos Santos, and goes his way. Todos Santos is a long-forgotten little town, a sort of Spanish Arcadia, where a very pretty series of episodes is evolved before the lost passengers are discovered by their mourning relatives. The career of the liberator General Leonidas Bolivar Perkins occupies a large part of the book.

Harte, Bret. The queen of the Pirate Isle; il. by Kate Greenaway. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. '86. 58 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Harte, Bret. A millionaire of Rough-and-Ready; [also,] Devil's Ford. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2–299 p. T. cl., $1.

Two stories of the early days of California in Bret Harte's familiar vein. The old characters of the rough and ignorant miners who strike gold, their beautiful daughters and wives who at once adapt themselves to the situation, their suitors and friends, with the perplexing element of "the other claimant," are all here. The stories are spirited and well told, and rich in description as well as incidents.

Hartley, I: S., D.D., comp. The twelve gates: verses from various authors; il. by R. D. Alexander. Utica, N. Y., W: T. Smith, [1887.] No paging. Q. pap., $2.

Embraces well-selected and original poems on The wicket gate, The gate of tears, The golden gate, The temple gate, The open gate, The closed gate, The entering gate, The beautiful gate, The pearly gate, The holy gate, The gate of the resurrection, and The gates ajar, with five appropriate full-page illustrations from drawings by R. D. Alexander, finely reproduced by photo-lithography. The book is exceedingly rich and dainty in its get-up. It is printed on one side only of fine gilt-edge paper, and bound in rough linen-paper, with the title on front cover in rich gold lettering.

Haskell, T: Hawes. Reports of the judgments of Hon. E: Fox, United States district judge for Maine district, first circuit. In 2 v. V. 1. Portland, Loring, Short & Harmon, 1887. c. 669 p. por. O. shp., $6.

Haskins, D: Greene, D.D. Ralph Waldo Emerson: his maternal ancestors, with some reminiscences of him. Bost., Cupples, Upham & Co., 1887. c. '86 and '87. 11+151 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The substance of this volume originally appeared as serial papers in the August and September numbers for 1886 of the Literary World. A small pamphlet edition of these papers was made and issued by the present publishers. The continued demand for the pamphlet has led to the publication of it in a more permanent form. In this edition much new material, mostly derived from family sources, has been supplied by the author, who is Mr. Emerson's cousin.

Hastings, H. L. Songs of pilgrimage: a hymnal for the churches of Christ. Bost., H. L. Hastings, 1886. c. 13+544 p. D. cl., $1.25; flex., $1.

Contains some of the best-known English hymns, giving author and date of publication, and also music, with composer's name and day of birth and death. Mr. Hastings shows conscientious work and good taste.

Hastings, L: M. Hastings' Minnesota citations. A manual of cases decided in the supreme court of Minnesota and cited in other cases in the same court. Minnesota reports, v. 1–35. St. Paul, West Pub. Co., 1887. c. 427 p. O. shp., $4.

Hatch, Edwin, D.D. The growth of church institutions. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 13+227 p. D. cl., $1.50.

An endeavor to give an answer to questions which are frequently asked in regard to the apparently wide differences between the primitive and the modern forms of some Christian institutions. It is designed less for scholars than for general readers who are interested in theological subjects. Its aim is to be not controversial, but historical. It is a summary of the results at which the writer has arrived from an independent study of original sources.

Hatfield, Marcus P., M.D. The physiology and hygiene of the house in which we live. N. Y., Chautauqua Press [Phillips & Hunt,] 1887. c. 283 p. D. cl., $1.

Our body is "the house in which we live," of which the author writes. In a number of interesting chapters he describes its various organs and functions, and shows the best method of taking care of it, and so preserving our health and lengthening our lives. The book is something more than a mere text-book; well-known facts being stated in such a manner as to at once engage the attention of the general reader.

Hatton, Jos. The great world: a novel; being the confessions and strange experiences of the Hon. Eric Yorke. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 73 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 600.) pap., 20 c.

A story of London and of the double lives led by some of its apparently most respectable people. A great philanthropist turns out a forger, and is discovered to have been connected with the robbery of "The white star," a diamond of a wonderful size found in Africa. A love story, scenes from fashionable life and also from prison life, some detective business, and a criminal trial are the leading incidents.

Hatton, Jos. The old house at Sandwich: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 259 p. D. pap., 25 c.

The "old house at Sandwich," in Kent, England, was always visited by strangers, because Queen Elizabeth had once stayed there. The vicar of the place tells a tourist a story of love, seduction, and crime enacted in the house that makes its modern history even more interesting to travellers. After some years this tourist goes to America, and among Western pork-traders and Indians meets some of the chief actors in the tragedy of fifteen years before. His own life becomes entangled with the schemes to avenge the crimes committed long ago, and a sensational denouement is cleverly brought about.

Miss F. R. Havergal, at the request of her sister, consented to make up a volume of her most simple poems for the benefit of children, but never found time to carry out the idea. Her sister has now made a very suitable selection for the purpose. There is an index to titles, giving the dates when the poems were written and the place of residence of Miss Havergal at the time. It is a representative compilation, including poems written from 1849 until 1878. Twenty-one enigmas and seventeen charades in the author's easy verse are also given.

Havergal, Maria V. G. Cripple Joseph: a story of grace. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. 5–77 p. S. bds., 50 c.

The Rev. Charles Bullock, in charge of the Frances Ridley Havergal Memorial Missionary Fund, in 1880 received a letter from Joseph Harrison, 82 Duke Street, Birmingham, England, enclosing a shilling for the fund, and mentioning that he had seen Miss Havergal's writings in the hospital and had been led by them to change from the faith of the Unitarians to the faith of the orthodox church. This letter was forwarded to Miss Maria V. G. Havergal, who mentions it in her "Memorials" of her sister. She called to see Joseph and sent him a complete set of her sister's works, which were his greatest comfort until he died in 1883. The journal and letters and verses he wrote under the inspiration of Miss Havergal's books are here printed. The profits of this neat little volume, both here and in England, will go to the Havergal Hall Protestant Schools, Limerick, Ireland.

Haweis, Rev. H. R. Christ and Christianity: the picture of Paul (The disciple). N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] 19+283 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The third volume in the five-volume work on "Christ and Christianity." The first volume contained "The story of the four" (Evangelists); the second "The picture of Jesus" (The Master); this treats of "The picture of Paul" (The disciple). The fourth will be "The conquering cross" (The Church); and the fifth "The light of the nations" (Asia, Africa, Europe), giving a history of the chief religions of the world before Christ. Each volume will be sold separately. This biography of Paul is very brightly written. Mr. Haweis is always original, and has an inexhaustible fund of common-sense.

The first volume of the series comprised under the general title, "Christ and Christianity." Deals with the sources of the gospel narrative, and the historic environments of eye-witnesses. Contents: Mark, the citizen's story; Matthew, the publican's story; Luke, the physician's story; John, the fisherman's story; The physician's diary (Acts); The fisherman's cryptograph (Revelation).

Hawes, Herbert H., D.D. Baptism mode-studies. Staunton, Va., Warden & Co., 1887. c. 109 p. T. cl., 35 c.; pap., 25 c.
Quite an exhaustive little study of the various methods of baptism by various denominations. The author's conclusions are most decidedly against immersion.

Hawthorne, Julian. An American penman; from the diary of Inspector Byrnes. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. c. 5+280 p. S. cl., $1.
A successor to those popular novels, "A tragic mystery" and "The great bank robbery." The motive here is the discovery of the leader of a gang of forgers who have been flooding the American market with forged securities. Count Fedovsky, a Russian nobleman with a romantic story, believing himself penniless, accepts a proposition from Byrnes to become a special detective in his service. He goes to Europe in search of the forgers and has a number of thrilling adventures. Vera, a Russian woman, the associate of the thieves, is the centre of a well-contrived mystery.

The basis of this story is the robbery of the Manhattan Savings Institution, on the corner of B'way and Bleecker Sts., N. Y. which took place early in the morning of Oct. 27, 1878. Mr. Hawthorne has thrown his imagination around the narrative, investing it with a great deal of artistic finish. A woman moving in good society is brought into the story, as a partner of the thieves, aiding them in many ways with information, etc.

Hawthorne, Julian. Nathaniel Hawthorne and his wife. New cheaper ed. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. 2 v. il. and por. D. cl., $3; hf. cf., $6.

Hawthorne, Julian. A tragic mystery; from the diary of Inspector Byrnes. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 5+269 p. S. cl., $1.
The first of a series of detective stories, for which Inspector Byrnes, of New York, will furnish the facts and Julian Hawthorne the literary workmanship. The crime upon which the detective work hinges is a murder committed in West 26th St., New York City. The victim is a French wine merchant. Suspicion flies backward and forward from inhabitants of New York's choicest localities to frequenters of its lowest slums. A woman is cleverly pressed into the detective service. A young engraver, sent from England on secret detective service to get at the key to a cipher used between members of secret Irish societies, is the final means of getting at the facts, which are concealed almost to the close in a most ingenious manner.

A companion volume to the popular holiday edition of the "Wonder-book" published two years ago. The Greek myths here retold and illustrated are The Minotaur, The Pygmies, The dragon's teeth, Circe's palace, The pomegranate seeds, and The golden fleece. Mr. Edwards' designs have a classic grace and strength. He contributes many full-page pictures and numerous decorative headpieces. Printed on fine tinted paper, gilt edges; blue cloth binding, with a white cloth inset on front cover, with one of Mr. Edwards' designs in gold, "Theseus slaying the Minotaur."

Hayes, A: Allen. The Jesuit's ring: a romance of Mount Desert. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 3+306 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
The "Jesuit's ring" is presented to Du Thet, a famous brother of the order, upon the eve of his departure for the New World, in 1613, to found a Jesuit mission in Acadie, or New France. He dies at his post on the rocky coast of Maine, and is robbed of his ring before he is buried by a scamp, who soon after loses it. The story opens a century and a half after these occurrences in Bar Harbor, which has meanwhile become a fashionable summer resort. Whittier's poems are freely and appropriately quoted. The great railroad strikes of the summer of 1877 are skilfully brought in. The "Jesuit's ring" is again made use of at the end to round off the pretty thread of romance running through a well-told story.

He; a companion to "She;" being a history of the adventures of J. Theodosius Aristophano on the Island of Rapa Nui in search of his immortal ancestor. N. Y., Norman L. Munro, [1887.] c. 213 p. il. D. (Munro's lib., no. 721.) pap., 20 c.

The general plan of the story strongly resembles that of "She." The hero is a Greek who goes in search of his immortal ancestor, who is found on an island of the Pacific, and who has already existed for 3000 years when discovered. His powers and his surroundings are all supernatural, while the adventures of the hero quite match those of "She" in marvellousness. The doctrine of transmigration of souls and the theosophical theories are seriously incorporated into the story, thereby explaining many inexplicable things.

From a number of passages cited from Shakespeare's plays it is shown that no author has written so feelingly and so appreciatingly on the subject of sleep and its loss. A number of letters purporting to be original are embraced in the volume as serving to throw light upon the causes for the insomnia which the author assumes Shakespeare suffered from in the last years of his life.

Scene laid in one of the Midland shires of England. A rich widow and a young girl of eighteen are the heroines. The "woman's wit" is possessed by the elder woman, who has set her heart on marrying the wild, impecunious Squire of Evesleigh. After being robbed of a valuable set of rubies by a masked villain at a ball given at the Squire's house, she manages by aid of detectives to trace the robber, and then uses her knowledge to make the Squire break his engagement with the younger heroine and become her husband and her slave. The young girl marries happily.

"Forging the fetters" is an English society novel of to-day. An interesting married couple that have been separated for years through an unfortunate misunderstanding come together without knowing each other. The husband is the first to recognize his wife, but a new name he has adopted with a newly inherited fortune and some horrible scars won in India keep his identity secret till he has succeeded in again winning his wife's love. The other stories, also of love and fashionable life, are "Mrs. Vereker's courier maid," and "The Australian aunt."

Designed especially for the use of the pharmaceutical student and for pharmacists in general. It is the outgrowth of a long-felt want by students, for a book especially adapted to their use as a class-book or note book. It presents a short but instructive course in pharmacy, from which all unnecessary matter has been eliminated. The author is instructor in theory and practice of pharmacy at the College of Pharmacy, N. Y. City.

Heermans, Forbes. Thirteen stories of the far west. Syracuse, N. Y., C. W. Bardeen, 1887. c. 4–263 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Thirteen breezy, wholesome stories of actual experience in the Rocky Mountains, on the Pacific Ocean, and in the Sandwich Islands. In their subjects there is great variety, from the first pathetic story of "Shingles" to the last weird, seemingly legendary, yet authentic account of the suicide of Princess Like-like. But throughout them all runs the same thread of keen enjoyment and quiet humor.

Heilprin, Angelo. The geographical and geological distribution of animals. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. '86. 9+435 p. map, D. (The international sci. ser., no. 57.) cl., $2.

In the preparation of this work the author had two objects in view: that of presenting to his readers such of the more significant facts connected with the past and present distribution of animal life as might lead to a proper conception of the relations of existing faunas; and, secondly, that of furnishing to the student a work of general reference, wherein the more salient features of the geography and geology of animal forms could be sought after and readily found. The need of such a work has been frequently felt and expressed.

It is twenty years since "Gardening for profit" was first written, and twelve since the second edition was issued. In a lapse of a dozen years, the new methods of culture, and new and improved varieties of vegetables and fruits, which are constantly coming into use, make a new edition requisite. The present edition has a wider scope than either of the former, embracing not only the forcing under glass of some important fruits and vegetables not before touched upon, but also detailing the methods of culture of the leading small fruits, which properly come under the head of "Gardening for profit."

In these volumes the principal writings of Joseph Henry—the late distinguished secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who made that institution largely what it is—are collected for the first time. Only his published writings are included, and these comprise the record of his researches from 1824 to 1846, during his professional career at Albany and Princeton, and of his scientific work from 1847 to 1878, during his directorship of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. Nearly all of his works are scarce and many practically inaccessible. The subjects treated are electricity, magnetism, heat, light, sound, meteorology, illuminants, etc.

Henry, Mrs. Ma. H., ["Howe Benning," pseud.] One girl's way out. Bost. and Chic., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1887.] c. 368 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

"Howe Benning" aims to teach young girls the sin of a purposeless life, and a way to find their spheres of usefulness. Mirabel Vane, a young society girl, is an apt illustration of her ideas. The unsatisfactory side of Mirabel's butterfly life is portrayed, then she is made to feel the void, and desperately casts about for "a way out." This is shown her during a visit to Highlake, where she solves the problem satisfactorily for Mercy Trask, Beriah, Miss Lumley, and herself.

Heyse, Paul. The romance of the Canoness : a life history ; from the German by J. M. Percival. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 265 p. D. hf. cl., 75 c.

A refined, sympathetic story of a woman's life. The scene is laid in Germany some twenty years ago, the story being told by a young tutor, or at least one who was young when he first conceived his passion for the beautiful canoness. Through his position of instructor he meets her in her uncle's house, and learns to know and sympathize with her troubles. His interest in her never lessens while she lives, and he gives the details of her innermost life. Her marriage to a celebrated German actor gives an interesting inside view of the German stage.

It is now recognized that form should be studied, not only by the eye, but also by the hand ; that touch furnishes "the most direct mode of apprehending things," and "seems to bring us into the closest relation to external things." The form models must be in the hands of every child. The exercises given aim to develop in the minds of the children complete mental images of the type forms, with details of surface, contour, face, edge, corner, etc. ; to give them ideas of proportion, distance, location, position, etc. There are lessons in modelling, cutting, folding, drawing, etc.

Higgins, C: Home rule; or, the Irish land question: facts and arguments. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 32+9–172 p. D. cl., $1.

The fact that this work was written by an Englishman, whose arguments are all in favor of the Irishman, lends it a special interest. It has met with so great a success in Great Britain that the author has been induced to give it to American readers. There is an opening essay on "Home Rule." The subjects of the eleven chapters which follow, given with many facts and arguments, are: Absenteeism (its effects and remedies); Attitude of the press (its influences for good and evil); Eviction (its horrors and tendencies); Peasant proprietary (its beneficial results); Peasant proprietary (its necessity for Ireland); The clergy (views on the land question); Land League (facts and arguments thereon); Coercion and the unwritten law; Obstruction and restriction; Outrages (graphic description of); Appeal to the English people.

Higginson, S. J. A Princess of Java; a tale of the far East. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 3+425 p. D. satine, $1.50.

A great fund of information about the history, geography, manners, customs, and government of Java is conveyed in a delightfully told story of which noble ladies are the heroines. One is the first wife of the Bopati of Java, who, after the marriage of her sister to a rich Dutch merchant, becomes discontented with the imprisonment of the Harem, and decides to have her daughter escape from its iron rules. An excellent plot is secondary in interest to the author's purpose of enlightening readers about a comparatively unknown country.

Two little papers full of good advice given in a succinct, telling manner. The first, "A letter to a young contributor," was published some years ago in the Atlantic Monthly, the second, "Hints on speech-making," appeared in Harper's Magazine for Nov., 1886.

Higginson, T: Wentworth. The monarch of dreams. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 3–52 p. T. cl., 50 c.

"A brief, highly-finished little tale, written and conceived in Thomas Wentworth Higginson's best style. Its hero, lost in dreams, lets stirring life pass by him, only waking when it is too late for him to act. The story rouses in the mind the fading echoes of the departing footsteps of lost opportunities."—Chicago Tribune.

Higginson, T: Wentworth. Women and men. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 5+326 p. S. cl., $1.

The author's name is identified with the intelligent support of the true rights of women. At the suggestion of his friend, Brander Matthews, he has gathered together many of his papers on the subject and added new ones, and the result is this volume of short, pithy chapters on sixty different phases in the lives of women and men. "The woman of influence," "The creator of the home," "Maiden aunts," "Unreasonable unselfishness," "Women's letters," "Mice and martyrdom," "Men's novels and women's novel," "Why women authors write under names of men," are a few of the titles of his subjects.

Lives of Canning, Prime Minister of England, who died in 1827, and was born April 11, 1770 are almost innumerable, whilst few periodicals or magazines of his time are found without mention of him. From all the varied material at his command the author has written a brief unprejudiced biography of one of England's most celebrated men, that will give the general reader all the facts he desires to know.

Hillock, A. Elizabeth. Ned Melbourne's mission and how he discharged it. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., (1887.] c. 342 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Ned Melbourne was the son of a clergyman in the far West, and the nephew of a wealthy New York merchant, who sends for him to come to the city to be a companion and friend to his young daughter, while he, himself, goes abroad for his health. He meets with some curious adventures on his way from his Missouri home to the great metropolis, and makes acquaintances which exert a very strong influence upon his future life. He has no idea of the "mission" he is to perform, and does not realize it until it is performed.

Hodder, Edwin. The life and work of the seventh Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1886. 3 v. 17+525; 7+527; 9+548 p. por. O. cl., $7.50.

Lord Shaftesbury died in 1885, after a long life of usefulness. He was born in 1801. His life is the history of English reform during the present century. Every great movement brought up in Parliament, such as the Colliery bill, National education, the opposition to the opium trade, the establishment of the ragged schools, the protection of poor needle-women, etc., either originated with him or were put through by his earnest and ardent advocacy. He was the sworn foe of oppression in whatever form it might be exercised, and never ceased his fight against it till death ended his career. Mr. Hodder had placed at his disposal the Earl's note-books, diaries, correspondence, etc., that he might give the world the fullest revelation of this noble character. His work has been done well. The result being a delightful volume of both historical and biographical value. Full index.

The lectures illustrate Dr. Hodge's wonderful power of popularizing scientific theology. The subjects treated cover the whole field of theological doctrine, and the treatment is in Dr. Hodge's best vein. The volume is one that not clergymen only but intelligent Christian men and women of the laity will find interesting and instructive. Many topics which are prominent in the discussions of the day, receive ample attention with reference to these discussions. Among these may be mentioned miracles, inspiration, prayer-cure, the "higher life," the state of man after death and the resurrection, and final rewards and punishments.

The author gives a vivid and most minute description of the battle of Gettysburg, the reasons for the invasion, and its results. He has drawn, wherever possible, from official sources, and in matters of dispute, or where difference of opinion prevailed, accorded both sides a hearing. The work concludes with a description of the Soldiers' National Cemetery at Gettysburg, and a short and concise guide to the battlefield. The author has been an eye-witness of much that he describes.

Holder, C: F: Living lights: a popular account of phosphorescent animals and vegetables. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 11+187 p. il. D. cl., $2.

Mr. Holder aims "to interest young people in natural history by the presentation of an attractive—indeed marvellous—phase of nature, and to encourage healthful outdoor observation as well as habits of investigation." . . . "No fairy tale of human invention can relate to us more fascinating scenes than are realized in Nature's carnivals of the sea. Not only is the surface of the ocean, when dashed into foam by the tempests, luminous, but the greater depths, where the water is cold, near the freezing-point and subject to pressure so great that instruments of glass are shattered and reduced to powder, abound in living lights."

Holmes, Oliver Wendell. Our hundred days in Europe. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 5+329 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The visit of Dr. Holmes in 1886 was a triumphal procession through literary and social England. For the time he was the one man whom England delighted to honor, and America rejoiced in every tribute to his genius, his distinction, and his personal worth. The account which he has written of those hundred memorable days is full of interest, not only as recording and recalling their graceful and impressive incidents, but because it abounds in those felicities of thought and utterance which we associate with the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

Holt, Emily Sarah. All for the best ; or, Bernard Gilpin's motto ; il. by M. Irwin. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] 5–128 p. 1 il. S. cl., 50 c.
Bernard Gilpin was a priest with liberal ideas during the reign of "Bloody Mary." He almost lost his life for his zeal in defending the right of his parishioners to read the Bible for themselves. The death of Mary and the accession of her sister, Queen Elizabeth, made many changes in Master Gilpin's parish and had great influence upon the pretty love story of some of his parishioners.

Holt, Emily Sarah. In all time of our tribulation : a story. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1886. D. cl., $1.50.

Holt, Emily Sarah. In convent walls : the story of the Despensers. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bro., [1887.] 384 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
A companion story entitled "In all times of our tribulation" relates part of the Despenser story and leaves Queen Isabella of France just as she has attained what she has long plotted for. The present volume tells how retribution overtook the guilty queen, and why her name is inscribed on one of the blackest pages in English history. The tale is made up of historical facts that occurred in the fourteenth century ; the characters too are nearly all noted personages in England's history. An historical appendix, giving the biography of real characters and a key to the fictitious ones, is a valuable adjunct to the book.

"Our little lady" is a deaf and dumb royal child, said to have been born at Windsor Castle some six hundred years ago. The story is told by a woman who had been nurse to this child. Describes the habits, manners, and customs of those bygone days in minute details.

Eight full-page il. in colors and eight monotone plates with text. They represent scenes and flowers from Grand Pré and other localities mentioned in Longfellow's "Evangeline," with a few short quotations from the poem. The cover is an imitation of alligator skin, with raised lettering in gold.

Home sanitation : a manual for housekeepers. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 80 p. S. cl., 50 c.
The Sanitary Science Club of the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ was organized in November, 1883, for the study of home sanitation. The subjects discussed among the ladies were the situation of the house and the cellar, drainage and plumbing, ventilation, heating, lighting, furnishing, clothing, food and drink, and sanitary work for women. Each chapter is followed by a list of questions to impress its subject upon the memory. A three-page list of the works of reference consulted and a good index make it a useful handbook.

Homer. Iliad. [Greek.] Books I.–III. ; ed. on the basis of Ameis-Hentze edition by T: D. Seymour. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. ed. 4+235 p. D. (College ser. of Greek authors.) cl., $1.35.
Many additions to the German edition have been made by the American editor, to adapt the work to the use of American classes. The Homeric poems have been treated historically, and have been interpreted from themselves. Illustrations have been drawn freely from the Old Testament, Vergil, and Milton. An appendix gives some critical matter that is not in place in an exegetical commentary. An index is provided.

Homer. Iliad ; tr. by G: Chapman, with 24 il. designed by Henri Motte ; with an introduction by H: Morley. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1887. 12+387 p. Q. cl., $15.

Hopkins, Miss I. T. Arrow Head Light. N. Y., Amercian Tract Soc., [1887.] c. 366 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene of the story is in the region of Gable End Point; some of the incidents occur at the "Arrow Head Light," others on board "The Sea Gull," but the most important tells of the calamity that befell a mere lad, transforming him into a helpless invalid, but in no way hampering his desire to do good, or the efforts he made to "let his light shine." The story shows up some of the evils of intemperance.

Hopkins, Mrs. Louisa P. How shall my child be taught; practical pedagogy; or, the science of teaching illustrated. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 11+276 p. D. cl., $1.50.

These papers were published during eight years in the Primary Teacher. They have the virtue of being immediate reports of actual work with a class of children "whose growth," says Mrs. Hopkins, "from childhood to later youth has justified the methods of that early education." A protest against the amount of work claimed for one year called out the appreciative explanation of Col. T. Wentworth Higginson, which is appended to the fifteen papers which make up the volume.

Hopson, Ella Lord, ed. Memoirs of Dr. Winthrop Hartly Hopson. Cin., Standard Pub. Co., 1887. c. 12+239 p. por. O. cl., $1.

Dr. W. H. Hopson was an elder in the Church of Christ, a body of Christians best known to other denominations as Campbellites, from their founder, who came to the United States in 1809 and founded the first church in West Virginia. They profess to reject all creeds and to receive the Bible alone as their authority in faith and practice. The writers of these memoirs was Dr. Hopson's third wife, and their life seems to have been unusually happy and useful. Many letters bound up in the book testify to the high esteem in which Dr. Hopson was held by friends of every creed and faith, and also speak highly of his social qualities.

Houghton, Louise S., comp. Words of peace and rest, Thomas à Kempis, St. Bernard of Clairvaux, Madame Guyon and others. N. Y., F: A. Stokes & Bro., 1887. c. 23 p. sq. D. pap., $1.

House (The) I live in; or, an elementary physiology for children in the public schools; with special reference to the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics, and their effects upon the human system. Cin., Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., 1887. c. 96 p. il. D. (Eclectic educational ser.) cl., 30 c.

In preparing these lessons in hygiene for the use of small children it has been the aim to employ simple language, to omit all scientific terms, and to present only such facts regarding the structure of the body and the functions of its organs as are necessary to form a basis for the proper understanding of the laws of health. Many of the lessons are given in the form of stories.

Housekeepers (The) handy book of useful information. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. c. 5+224 p. S. cl., $1.

The foundation of this book was a bundle of clippings made during the past thirty years by an experienced housekeeper of wide newspaper reading. Many other sources have also been laid under contribution for material, such as the Century Magazine, Good Housekeeping, well-known cookery books, and domestic cyclopædias. The result is an alphabetically arranged list of useful facts that housekeepers will find invaluable. A prettily gotten up book, in white cloth with gold lettering.

Howard, Blanche Willis. Tony the maid: a novelette. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 4+166 p. il. S. cl., $1.

The characters of any importance are only Miss Aurelia Vanderpool, a lady of uncertain age, and "Tony," her maid. "Tony" is a most clever character study, full of fine lines and also a fine humor that seems almost of French origin, in place of being purely American. The scene opens in Luzerne—the whole of the story not straying from Switzerland. Tony's management of her mistress and her affairs and her wise generalship when she herself is concerned are quite new in fiction.

Howard, Cecil Hampden Cutts. Life and public services of Gen. John Wolcott Phelps : a sketch read before the N. E. Historic Genealogical Soc., Dec. 1, '86. Brattleboro, Vt., Frank E. Housh & Co., 1887. c. 2+58 p. S. cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

The author was personally acquainted with the subject of his sketch and had access to original papers in its preparation. He has given in a few pages an admirable idea of the man who originated the plan of arming the negroes as U. S. soldiers in the civil war. An appendix contains extracts from letters written by Gen. Phelps.

The story of a noble life which reaches its consummation through manifold perplexities. The reader's faith in God, in humanity, and in goodness will be increased by studying how John Millington "came out of the shadow."

Howells, W: D. April hopes. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 2+484 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Class Day at Cambridge, a summer at Campobello, some life on a fashionable flat in Boston are among the scenes which serve as a background to "April hopes." Dan Mavering and Alice Pasmer are a pair of jealous, unreasonable young lovers, who go through a diversity of scenes and experiences before they unite their fates in marriage. Mr. Howells is at his best in his delineations of society scenes and characters. "Mrs. Pasmer" and "Mrs. Brinkley" are capitally drawn, as are also their social surroundings and their personal influence upon others.

Howells, W. D. Dr. Breen's practice : a novel. 12th ed. Bost., Ticknor & Co., [1887.] c. '81. 272 p. D. (Ticknor's pap. ser., no. 11.) pap., 50 c.

Howells, W: D. Modern Italian poets ; essays and versions. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 5+369 p. por. D. cl., $2.

This work, Mr. Howells says, has grown out of studies begun twenty years ago in Italy, and continued fitfully as he found the time and mood for them. It forms a review of Italian poetry from 1770 to 1870, and contains critical and biographical sketches of the poets themselves and of their surroundings, with faithful and musical translations of some of their verse. There are 20 sketches and 11 portraits. The binding is a delicate sage cloth on sides with white cloth back and gold lettering ; fine paper, uncut edges, top gilt.

Hunt, Mrs. Alfred. That other person: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. 3+315 p. S. hf. cl., 75 c.
A proverbial London fog brings about a meeting which is supplemented by theatre-goings, an interchange of visits, and an event which seems to transform the lives of Zeph Treherne and Godfrey Doylesford into a game of cross-purposes that misleads, interests, and at times repels. The characters are all typical and play their parts well, one of them, a ghost, giving a touch of the uncanny when he appears upon the scene. The peccadillos of the hero and heroine and the loss of some valuable papers form the basis of the story. By the author of "The leaden casket."

Hunt, Theodore W. Representative English prose and prose writers. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. c. 527 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The author treats his subject in its representative historical periods, its representative literary forms, and in some of its representative authors. English prose is especially discussed, that dates its beginning from the reign of Elizabeth in the pages of Bacon and Hooker, and extends to the present decade in the pages of Carlyle. Although the author has aimed to serve a special educational purpose in college class-rooms, his book will prove stimulating and helpful to all students of English literature.

Many years ago Mr. John Quod, a friend of the editor, prepared to write a history of Long Island. He did not confine his investigations to books alone, but examined the whole country from Coney Island to Montauk Point, and committed the information gained to paper. He did not live to complete the work, and after his death the papers came into the editor's hand, and, at his written request, he has prepared a portion of them for the public. The book is largely composed of the histories and tales of departed worthies, whose names are irrevocably associated with the spots rendered classic by their deeds and adventures. The style is original and attractive.

Jackson, Mrs. Helen Hunt, ["H. H."] Between whiles. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 3–304 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"The Inn of the Golden Pear," the first of the six stories comprised under this title, has its scene laid on the Canadian border; it is a tale of love at first sight; Victorine, a French Canadian, young, pretty, and coquettish, and the daughter of the mistress of "The Golden Pear," deliberately setting a trap for a haughty young Englishman, who is captured without much trouble. This story is an episode in a longer story left unfinished by Mrs. Jackson. The other tales, also dealing with love and courtship, are: "The mystery of Wilhelm Rütter," "Little Bel's supplement," "The captain of the Heather Bell," "Dandy Steve," and "The prince's little sweetheart."

Jacobson, A: Higher ground; hints toward settling the labor troubles. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 3–251 p., S. cl., $1.

The author starts from the premise that all labor troubles are the result of ignorance. His proposition is to tax the rich and thereby get possession of a sum of money to be spent by the state to pay the poor for keeping their children at school. The poorer the man the more would be his need of money and the more likely would his children be to get the benefits of education. He gives full description of manual training-schools, their purpose, and methods. An appendix of 80 pages gives extracts from newspapers, extracts from the laws of different states, etc., etc., all used to prove his theories practicable.

Jak, [pseud.] The giant dwarf: a story for young and old. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. 3+400 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story, an especially good one for boys, has its scene laid in Germany. Kasper, a boy of fourteen, disliking his work—lace-making—as something a boy ought not to do, and impatient under the restraint of a cross old grandmother, runs away from home. His adventures in a big German city seeking work are not encouraging, till he finally meets accidentally the "giant dwarf," who takes a great interest in him. The "giant dwarf" is a man of unusual size and weight above his waist, but who has lost his limbs. He has a story which is ingeniously unravelled. He not only teaches Kasper a good trade, but inculcates many good moral lessons.

Johnny had been named the "professor" by his young friends because he wore spectacles, was fond of studying natural philosophy and chemistry and of performing experiments. The young reader may learn much that is valuable from his numerous experiments given in detail, and may glean considerable amusement from the story of his daily life and that of his cousins and friends.

Jak, [pseud.] Who saved the ship? [also,] The man of the family. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. 403 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author claims that both stories are founded upon facts, and that the most improbable incidents are the truest; his aim seems to be to open up possibilities for young men of limited means, who are not afraid to use their energies. The first tells of a boy, who determined to go to sea at all hazards, although he had a notable voyage, his efforts did not save the ship; the second relates how a mere lad made a home in the West, and finally attained his profession.

This is a life of William Usselinx, b. at Antwerp in June, 1567, gathered from the best sources. The work is completed by a bibliography of his printed works which is fully annotated and another of writings not printed. Index.

Jamison, Mrs. C. V. The story of an enthusiast told by himself. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 5+466 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The "enthusiast" is Felix Markland, the son of an English father and a French mother who both have artist natures. The boy is introduced at the age of three, gazing enraptured on a head of Raphael's. He loses his parents and by the requirements of his father's will is forced to go to England and live among practical, humdrum people. The picture is sold, and for some time the boy is ill in consequence. He makes a vow to recover the picture, and, after receiving a good education, he starts at the age of seventeen to become an artist and find his beloved Raphael. The story is in the first person. It is a close study of the psychology of genius and the influence of heredity. The plot is intricate, but merely a framework for a fascinating artistic study.

The four chapters into which the book is divided deal respectively with four aspects of the subject: 1, The general character of the Homeric poems, and their place in the history of literature; 2, their historical value, as illustrating an early period of Hellenic life; 3, their influence in the ancient world, and the criticism bestowed on them in antiquity; 4, the modern inquiry into their origin.

Jefferies, R: Amaryllis at the fair: a novel. N. Y., Harper & Bros., [1887.] 44 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 577.) pap., 15 c.

The title is euphonious and leaves one in a state of pleased expectancy as to what will follow. What does follow is a charming picture of life at a quaint old farmhouse called Coombes-Oak, where the Idens have lived for generations. The interest centres in Amaryllis, who edifies the readers by attending Ladyday fair and interests them in a charming but very old-fashioned love affair. A pleasant unworldliness lingers about the story, and this with a tendency to moralize and a dry humor are its chief features.

An investigation from the religious standpoint into thought-transference, somnambulism, mesmerism, clairvoyance, spiritualism, apparitions of the living, haunted houses, ghosts, and other phenomena now being studied by the British Society for Psychical Research. While the author places many of these developments among the assured facts of science, others he is unable to decide upon. On the whole, however, he considers the researches of the society good, as they will aid in doing away with superstitions and add to our knowledge.

Johnson, Virginia W. The house of the musician. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 5-286 p. S. (Ticknor's pap. ser., no. 8.) pap., 50 c.

Gerard Grootz, a foundling adopted by a Dutch miller, early displays a talent for drawing. He is discovered by an eccentric scientist and taken to a rich merchant, who furnishes him means to study. At the age of twenty he goes to Venice and takes lodgings in "the house of the musician," a rich old castle whose owner is supposed to have committed suicide. The musician's daughters play a most important part in the life of the young artist. The natural and historical interests of the Sea City appeal strongl to the author of "The Neptune vase." The plot is simple, but the superstitions and legends which are worked into it give it color and charm.

Johnston, Alex. Connecticut: a study of a commonwealth-democracy. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 13+409 p. map, S. (American commonwealths ser.) cl., $1.25.

"Professor Johnston's 'Connecticut' is a model book, uniting entire accuracy of facts with fearless reason and some literary ability. Professor Johnston, now in the faculty of Princeton College, has placed many students under obligation by his 'History of American politics,' 1879, his 'Genesis of a New England State: Connecticut,' 1884, his edition of the 'Representative American orations,' 1884, his 'History of the United States for schools,' 1886, and his contributions to Mr. Lalor's political encyclopædia. But 'Connecticut' is easily and by far his best book, resting in ample studies and careful reasoning. It is not a mere book of annals and disconnected facts, but a history; and it does not treat Connecticut as a State all by itself, but as the active and powerful member of a great family which we call the United States and mankind."—Boston Beacon.

Johnston, W: Arguments to courts and juries, 1846-1874. Cin., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1887. c. 543 p. O. cl. net, $3.

Judge Johnston was elected by the legislature of Ohio as a Judge of the old Superior Ct. of Cin., and served four years on the bench. After a brief political career, he devoted his time and talents for the next 25 years to the practice of law, first at the Cincinnati, and then at the Washington City Bar. It was during this period that all the arguments published in this book, except the first, were made. They cover that portion of his life when he had attained his highest development as a lawyer and advocate. His large experience among men and his keenness of observation had given his penetrating mind a clear view of human nature, and laid the foundation of his remarkable power of controlling juries and convincing the judgments of men.

The first volume of this work was published in 1876. The present volume relates chiefly to the great endemic fevers of tropical and temperate climates, such as: intermittent, remittent, pernicious, and hæmorrhagic malarial fevers. Careful comparisons are instituted between the symptoms and pathological anatomy of yellow fever and typhoid fever, and the various subjects are enriched by the observations and drawings of the author. The chapter which relates to the prevention and treatment of malarial fevers will be found to contain full descriptions of the botanical, chemical, and therapeutical properties of the indigenous remedies of the United States which possess febrifuge and antiperiodic properties, and which may be employed as substitutes for quinine. Includes studies also of albinism in the negro race, Oriental leprosy, elephantiasis græcorum, elephant's leg (elephantiasis arabum). The work is compactly printed, and profusely illustrated with nearly 150 elaborate engravings made especially for it, many of them being colored.

This work, the N. Y. Evening Post says, is the result of an inquiry into the relations between the taxing functions of the Federal Government and of the states. Mr. Jones has pursued the historical method, and traced the changes in the relation of the Federal Government to the State Governments from the foundation of the Union; and, by analyzing the functions and the subjects of taxation, he reaches the conclusion "that while the power of excise taxation is concurrent in the Federal and State Governments over all subjects of it, the exercise of this power is as separate and exclusive in the one or the other as to the purposes it is to be exercised for, as any other power with which each is invested under the Federal Constitution."

Mr. Keller is also the author of a companion volume to this that has met with much success, "The game of draw poker." In a pleasant preface he says: "It is to place before the public, with all possible simplicity and brevity, the rules of this light and entertaining game, and at the same time to offer a few comments that will be instructive to novices and interesting to experts, that I have undertaken this treatise on euchre."

Keller, J: W. The game of draw poker ; including the treatise by R. C. Schenck and rules for the new game of progressive poker. N. Y., White, Stokes & Allen, 1887. c. 4+84 p. S. bds., 50 c.
A brief and simple treatise on poker as a pastime; the game has become so popular as a means of amusement among the better classes of American people, that this little book of instructions and rules is fully justified. Bound in pretty boards covers, with a characteristic design of a "straight flush" in miniature cards, on a pale blue and gold background. By the author of "Tangled lives."

Kelley, W: D. The old south and the new : a series of letters. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1888 [1887.] c. 5+162 p. D. (Questions of the day, no. 45.) cl., $1.25.
Contrasts the industrial and social condition of the people of the southern states to-day with their condition in 1867, when the author traversed substantially the same field he describes in the present volume. The progress in wealth, in the means of individual comfort, and in productive power he pronounces marvellous.

Kennard, Mrs. E: The girl in the brown habit: a sporting novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 57 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 560.) pap., 20 c.
The two young men whose fortunes are the subject of this novel are officers in a "crack" cavalry regiment about to depart for India. The "leave" allowed them before their departure is spent in a well-known sporting county, where their time is occupied in about equal proportions between hunting and love-making. Thrilling incidents in the field and a dashing attempt on the part of each to win a lovely heiress afford pleasant and entertaining reading.

Kennard, Mrs. Nina A. Mrs. Siddons. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 6+354 p. S. (Famous women ser.) cl., $1.
The celebrated English actress finds a sympathetic historian in Mrs. Kennard, who also wrote the life of the great French actress, "Rachel," for this series. She found plenty of material at her command, of which she has made a discriminating use, quoting also largely from Mrs. Siddons' literary contemporaries many quaint and interesting personal details and anecdotes. Many of Mrs. Siddons' letters, not written with any thought of publication, have also been quoted in full, the writer's aim being to make her heroine as lifelike and real to her readers as possible. She has succeeded admirably in presenting not only a truthful and sympathetic portrait of this wonderful tragedienne, but a succinct account of the facts of her private and stage life, and of her most famous personations.

A story of Christian work, not in a large, organized way, but of one person in a small field, chiefly with one family. A young girl comes home from school with a purpose in her heart to make her life useful. She begins on about as hopeless a set of objects as one ordinarily finds. There is a family of neighbors who through drink and indolence have gotten down almost as low as possible. Our young friend with the loving p heart, takes hold first of a ragged boy bel household and puts a little inspiration int through him she reaches his father and drunkards, and through her influence th home are completely transformed.

Kirkland, Jos. Zury; the meanest man in Spring County : a novel of Western life. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 4+538 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Frontier life in the early days of Illinois, most minutely detailed, is the subject of this novel. "Zury" comes as a boy to Spring County, and by his energy and industry and his courageous struggles with privations becomes in middle age a wealthy man. A young New England schoolteacher, Anne Sparrow, is a strong influence upon "Zury." Her rough experience and her spirited, independent character are graphically described.

This in a measure supplements Creasy's "Fifteen decisive battles of the world," bringing the history of military tactics and strategy down to the present day. The twenty-five battles it describes, beginning with the battle of Ayacucho, Peru, South America, Dec. 9, 1824, and ending with the fall of Khartoum, 1885, are taken from the very best authorities on the subject, a list of which the author gives. A map or plan of the battlefield accompanies each description.

The experiences of two boys who undertook the rearing and education of dogs from puppyhood to maturity under the advice and instruction of an uncle, who taught them the proper construction of kennels, the food and care of dogs in health and illness, and the best methods of educating this intelligent animal. The author acknowledges the authorities from which he has gleaned and reshaped his material with the success that always attends his work for boys. The pictures of almost every breed of dog are very interesting and valuable.

Knudsen, C. W. A primer for use in schools and families for teaching correct and distinct articulation in reading and speaking. South Norwalk, Ct., Golden Brothers, 1887. c. 2+72+15 p. 1 il. S. bds., 25 c.

The author aims to teach reading rapidly by a phonetic system which pays special regard to the correct pronunciation and clear utterance of the pupils. He justly asserts that English-speaking people have more frequently an unintelligible, mumbling utterance than the speakers of other languages. He claims that the alphabet used is easily learned, and that the rules for spelling according to pronunciation have been formed so as to retain the ordinary spelling in as many words as possible, so that when pupils are promoted to ordinary books they very easily learn to read them. His idea is not so much to introduce his system of phonetics, as to help pupils recognize at sight the sounds the words should have.

Kokhanovsky, Mme. The rusty linchpin; [also,] Luboff Archipovna; after the Russian of Mme. Kokhanovsky, by M. M. S. and J. L. E. Bost. D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] c. 296 p. D. (The round world ser.) cl., $1.25.

The scene of the story is laid in a little settlement in one of the remote steppe provinces of Russia, in the heart of a productive region. The descriptions of the picturesque scenery of the steppes, the manner in which the estates are carried on, and of the indoor life and amusements of the people are intensely interesting. "The rusty linchpin" is one of the most charming of love stories, and those who wonder at the singular title may be told this much, that a long and almost hopeless love suit is brought to a climax by the breaking down of a carriage through the loss of a linchpin. The volume contains a second story, "Luboff Archipovna," which is pathetic as well as humorous, and sheds light upon some of the curious domestic customs of the Russians.

Korolénko, Vladimer. The vagrant and other tales; from the Russian by Mrs. Aline Delano. N.Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1887. c. tr. 3+285 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Korolénko's name is new to American readers, but in Russia he stands at the head of the younger generation of writers. Like all of the literary children of Gogol, he is a realist. He was born in 1853, on the Polish border. After a struggle with poverty, he became suspected by the police, and while still a student in Moscow was exiled to Siberia. In 1881, having refused to take the oath of allegiance to Alexander III., he was sent to Yakutsk, where he continued three years. He had begun to write in 1879, but it was not until 1885 that he won enduring fame. Most of his popular tales are founded on his Siberian experiences, and it is largely from these that Mrs. Aline Delano (a cultivated Russian lady living in Boston) has selected the representative sketches that make up the volume.

Kron, Karl, [pseud.] Ten thousand miles on a bicycle. N. Y., Karl Kron, University Building, Washington Sq., 1887. c. '84. 107+800 p. 1 il. D. cl., $2.

"The book of 'Karl Kron,' is 'a gazetteer, a dictionary, a cyclopædia, a statistical guide, a thesaurus of facts,' a book of American roads for cyclists. As regards its literary form, it is a rattling affair, the animal spirits of the writer bubbling well into the pages. . . . Two chapters of the book—one devoted to a biography of Curl, 'My bull dorg, the very best dog whose presence ever blessed this planet' (to whose memory the book is dedicated), the other, called 'Castle Solitude in the metropolis,' and giving an account of life in the New York University building—seem quite irrelevant to the volume's purpose and to be introduced without sufficient reason. For the most part, however, the book is packed with information of interest to wheelmen, collected, it is plain, with great labor and, so far as we can judge, accurate. Of especial interest is a biography of Thomas Stevens. . . . The chapters throughout are most frank and unconventional, and many a graphic passage occurs to relieve statistical detail."—The Nation.

Kummer, Rev. Alfred. The sling of David, and other poems; with an introduction by Gen. Lew Wallace. N. Y., Hurst & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 3-174 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The opening piece gives in poetic form the Biblical episode of David and Goliah. The versatility of the author is shown in the other poems in the volume—some picturing the beauty and grandeur of nature, others revealing the inner recesses of the human heart, and others again touching the chords of our spiritual nature, renewing and strengthening the religious feeling.

The study of the human mind from the physiological point of view is the most interesting and fruitful subject that has come before the philosophical student of our day. Professor Ladd's is the first treatise that presents a full discussion of the whole subject brought down to the most recent times. It includes the latest discoveries, and by numerous illustrations and tables, and by gathering material from hundreds of separate sources, it brings before the reader in a compact and yet lucid form the entire subject.

This work, which is a discussion and a defence of Christianity, grew out of a series of letters written by the author reviewing Ingersoll's "tactics and assertions anent Christianity and religion in general" in two articles published by him in the North American Review in 1882. These letters were subsequently collected and published in book-form under the title, "Notes on Ingersoll." Two years after the appearance of the book Mr. B. W. Lacy published a "Reply to Rev. L. A. Lambert's notes on Ingersoll." It is this reply and many of Ingersoll's own sayings that are here discussed. The book is in the form of a dialogue, the author quoting each man verbatim in replying.

The title of this little book explains itself. It is not a church history, but a collection of notes thereon. The most important facts concerning the church of England, from an early day, while still connected with and subject to the church of Rome, till the Reformation made it a distinct organization, are given simply and briefly in paragraphs with a heading in black type.

Lang, Alice. Tim's treasure, and how he found it. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] 3-128 p. il. S. cl., 60 c.
The scene is laid in Greywell, Yorkshire, England. Tim Jackson attempts to quell a fire and save farmer Gregg's hayrick; he is rewarded only with abuse. The fire is the cause of some other disagreeable occurrences, which Tim uses his small powers to adjust, thereby gaining the esteem of his friends and winning what he calls his treasure.

Presents in a plain and simple form the elementary principles of political economy. "It has seemed to be an important part of an elementary treatise on economics," says the author, "to make applications of principles to the leading questions of the day." For this reason such topics as socialism, taxation, the national debt, free trade and protection, bimetalism, United States notes, banking, the national banking system, the labor problem, and cooperation have been treated in a brief and simple manner in pt. 2. Questions and problems are placed at the end of each chapter in pt. 1, with the design of stimulating the pupil to think out applications of principles. There are also nine charts showing westward movement of population in the United States; production of gold and silver, public debt, etc.; and also a teachers' library of works on this and kindred subjects, selected from English, French, and German authors, covering three pages.

Major Lawrence was an officer in her majesty's service who had spent fourteen years of his life in India. At thirty-two he came back to England on a year's leave of absence and settled in Devonshire in a modest cottage he had inherited. Here he renews his acquaintance with his old friend Lady Mordaunt, her son the Earl of Heversdale, and first makes the acquaintance of Lady Eleanor, the young daughter of the earl. This is the beginning of a long story of English domestic life and love full of surprises and clever delineations of people and places.

Follows the preceding volumes of this valuable series in its general method of dealing with its subject. The hights and shades of Irish history from mythical ages to the present day are depicted with much care and authenticity. The story of the people is especially set forth in many dramatic and romantic stories illustrating the characteristics. A good index and list of authorities.

Lea, H: C. History of the Inquisition of the Middle Ages. In 3 v. V. 1. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 14+583 p. O. cl., $3.

The first comprehensive history of the Inquisition based on the results of modern scholarship. The author's purpose has been to investigate the origin and growth of the Inquisition, not from a polemical but a scientific point of view, to discuss a remarkable phenomenon, neither as a Protestant nor as a Catholic, but as a philosopher, who is willing to recognize the admixture of good and evil in all human institutions. Patient research among a stupendous mass of documentary material, thorough familiarity with every detail of the subject, and rare lucidity of expression are evident on every page, and mark it as one of the most valuable works ever produced by an American student. The first volume treats of the origin and the organization of the Inquisition. Author of "Sacerdotal celibacy," "Superstition and force," and "Studies in church history."

Leathes, Mrs. Stanley. Over the hills and far away. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] 5–220 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Begins with the breaking up of an English country home upon the death of mother and father. Four children are scattered to various parts of the land. Little Lion, the sweet, five-year-old-petted mischief, is taken by his London aunt, and the story deals chiefly with his little troubles and sorrows, when he became a secondary consideration instead of the little ruler of his family.

Lee, Edmund. Dorothy Wordsworth: the story of a sister's love. Dodd, Mead & Co., 188[illegible] 226 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A pleasantly written sketch of one of the most charming figures in literary history. Dorothy Wordsworth (born 1771), the "sole sister" of the poet, one year his junior, was his life-long friend and companion, the inspirer of much of his best work, and a real factor in the revival of English poetry. Many of her brother's poems are dedicated to or mention her, and she was the friend of Mary and Charles Lamb, De Quincey, and of all the Lake poets. She died five years after her brother, in 1855. The author has written this delightful book, because, except for the sketch in Prof. Shairp's "Tour in Scotland," no separate memorial of her existed. Poems and extracts from her journals are included.

Lee, M. and C. Goldhanger Woods: a child's romance. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1887.] 176 p. D. cl., 60 c.

The story tells of a visit of the Arbuthnot children to the Lavenders, their sickness, which occurred at Waring farm, Susan's acquaintanceship with Sybil Tempest, and Susan's trip through the "Goldhanger Woods." This is the most exciting event of the book, as the little girl holds an interview with a band of smugglers in their lair.

Lieb, Hermann. The protective tariff; what it does for us. Chic., published by the author] Hermann Lieb, [Western News Co.,] 1888. c. 232 p. D. cl., $1.

This book is the complement of a lecture delivered before the Philosophical Society of Chicago and the Winnebago Club of Rockford, Illinois, and its aim is to show the practical effect of the protective system upon the country. Perhaps the most conspicuous feature of the book is its exact alignment with the message of President Cleveland. The arrangement of the subject is in convenient form and renders the subject easy of comprehension. It will serve as a tariff primer for the learner as well as a text-book for the learned.

Life's problems here and hereafter: an autobiography. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. 7+317 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story of a religious experience based upon fact. "I propose," the author says, "to set forth the way and the means by which my doubts were silenced, difficulties overcome, perplexities cleared up, and I was made to know that God is, that man is immortal, that our personality permanently endures, that a real substantial world awaits each man, woman and child at death, that we shall know each other, and ultimately be united as one family."

Lillie, Lucy C. The colonel's money. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 6+393 p. il. sq. S. (Harper's young people ser.) cl., $1.

The author of "Rolf House" and "Jo's opportunity" here writes a story of an American girl who unexpectedly inherited an English fortune, which necessitated her living in England during the years of her minority. She met with many new scenes and much can be learned of English ways and manners in this pleasant story.

Lincoln, Mrs. D. A. Boston school kitchen text-book: lessons in cooking for the use of classes in public and industrial schools. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 24+237 p. D. cl., $1.

The substance of all the lessons has been worked out in the cooking class-rooms or school-kitchens connected with the Boston public schools. The aim has not been to make a cook-book or a new collection of receipts, but to teach young girls the cooking of every-day simple dishes, and how to obtain a pleasant variety out of limited material. Lessons are embraced upon the first principles of food, heat, fuel, etc. The receipts which follow are provided not only with ample directions, but also with reasons for the directions. By the author of "The Boston cook-book," etc.

Lincoln, Mrs. D. A. Carving and serving. Bost. Roberts Bros., 1887. c. '86. 3–52 p. S. bds., 60 c.

By the author of "The Boston cook-book." A little manual on carving and serving all kinds of meats, game, etc., which "is not offered as a guide for special occasions, company dinners, etc., nor for those whose experience renders it unnecessary, or whose means allow them to employ one skilled in the art. But it is earnestly hoped that the suggestions will aid those who desire, at their own table, in every-day home life, to acquire that ease and perfection of manner which, however suddenly it may be confronted with obstacles, will be equal to every occasion."

Linderfelt, Klas August. Volapük; an easy method of acquiring the universal language constructed by Johann Martin Schleyer; prepared for the English-speaking public, on the basis of Alfred Kirchhoff's Hilfsbuch; with the addition of a key to the exercises and a Volapük-English and English-Volapük vocabulary. Milwaukee, Wis., C. N. Caspar, 1888 [1887.] 128 p. S. pap., 50 c.; cl., 75 c.

Although based on Kirchhoff's "Hilfsbuch," the matter has been greatly changed, in order to adapt it to the needs of English students, the practice of the French school having frequently been adopted on account of its greater simplicity, instead of the Germanisms of the inventor, and all of chapters 12, 13, 14, and 15 are new. The vocabulary contains upwards of 1200 of the most frequently occurring words.

Linskill, Mary. In exchange for a soul : a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 83 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 611.) pap , 20 c.

The scene is laid in a Yorkshire fishing district ; Thorilda Thuyne becomes intimate, through force of circumstances, with Barbara Burdas. In the course of their friendship there are several interesting revelations made ; these, with a wreck, several romances, some wild deeds of the fisher-folk, and the incident that gives the story its title, make the substance of a very readable novel.

Litere, (pseud.) For her daily bread ; with preface by Rob. G. Ingersoll. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. c. 228 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Norma, Flora, and Harry Southstone are left orphans when seventeen, sixteen, and thirteen represent their respective ages. The boy is left in charge of friends and the two girls start from a home on the Mississippi to look for their "daily bread" in Chicago. Norma is energetic ; she lives out as servant, sews, works in a factory, learns stenography and typewriting, and at last succeeds in helping all her family. "The reader of this story," says the writer of the preface, "will get some ideas as to what is encountered by a girl in an honest effort to gain her daily bread. He will find how steep, how devious, and how difficult is the path she treads." Both the sisters have a love history.

Little, Mrs. Annie P. The world as we saw it. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. 11+476 p. il. sq. O. cl., $7.50.

Mrs. Little and her party travelled across the continent to the Pacific, and from thence to Japan, China, India, and so through Asia and Europe to the starting-place again. Their adventures were not remarkable, but they saw much that was interesting, which Mrs. Little embodied in a series of fluent letters. The work is notable for its handsome appearance both inside and outside. The page is set in broad margins, and a number of full-page photographic pictures of various scenes embellish the book. The binding is rich in gilt and a handsome scroll design.

Living voices of living men : practical sermons by bishops and clergy of the church intended for family and lay reading. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. c. 6+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Twenty-six sermons by as many different divines. They are not discussions of doctrine or dogma nor of ecclesiastical subjects ; but they relate to the practical duties of life and to the graces and virtues that should adorn Christian men and women.

Livingston, Grace. A Chautauqua idyl. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] 3+105 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Edward Everett Hale in an introductory note speaks of this little book as a poem, "for poem it is," he says, "excepting that it is not in verse or in rhyme." And he adds : "I cannot but think that if the older and more sedate members of the Chautauqua circles will read it they will find that there are grains of profit in it ; hidden grains, perhaps, but none the worse for being hidden at the first, if they only discover them." By making use of the birds, the flowers, the fishes, and the squirrels as characters, the author tries to show the real underlying spirit of the Chautauqua movement, and she does it very effectively.

The story of a little boy and girl whose father dies as they are crossing the ocean. They are defrauded of their inheritance and are only saved from hunger by the kindness of their old nurse. The brother and sister become separated, and many years pass before they meet again or Carl succeeds in proving his identity and recovering his property. In the meantime he has a long, hard struggle for existence.

Lockwood, Ingersoll, [Irwin Longman.] How to be witty; or, old saws with new teeth; il. by W. T. Longman. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1887. c. '86. 4+117 p. sq. S. pap., 25c.

Longfellow, S:, ed. Final memorials of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 8+447 p. por. and il. O. cl., $3.
In preparing the life of Longfellow, the present editor found it necessary from want of space to omit many of the poet's journals and correspondence of the last fifteen years of his life. These have been embraced in these "final memorials," with many letters of an earlier date for which room was not found in the "Life," besides some which have but lately come into the editor's hands. An appendix intended for the "Life" closes the book, with a bibliography reprinted, with revisions, from the Literary World, a chapter on genealogy, and some miscellaneous matter. Among the illustrations are two new portraits, a view of the poet's study in Craigie House, etc.

Loss or gain? By the author of "A hero-poet." N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1887. 160 p. il. S. cl., 45 c.

Lost reputation (A): a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 39 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 586.) pap., 15 c.
A fatal game of cards cost Graham Murray his reputation and led him to flee friends and country, and lose his identity in the name Francis Mobray. Under this nom de plume he wins new friends, who are the indirect means of his return to Scotland, where he is reconciled to the Laird of Glen Ilvo, and meets his fate, who does all in her power to reinstate Graham into the society that ostracized him.

Lothrop, Mrs. H. M., ["Margaret Sidney," pseud.] Dilly and the captain; il. by F. Childe Hassam. Bost., ... Lothrop Co., 1887. c. 9–228 p. D. cl., $1.

Dilly was a little girl who became tired of hearing continually "children should be seen and not heard." She induces the captain, a boy somewhat older than herself, to start with her and find a place where boys and girls can find out things without asking older people. He has a bicycle and she a tricycle. Their adventures are told by one who understands children. The illustrations are very pretty and the book has a showy cover.

Lottner, H. Vocal calisthenics: a short but concise and comprehensible course of practical oratory exercises; embracing the most effective points furnished on the art by the best teachers, ancient and modern; arranged for speakers and singers for self-training and for giving instruction. Newark, N. J., L. J. Hardham, printer, 243 and 245 Market St., 1886. c. 29 p. O. bds., 40 c.

The title is so comprehensive that further explanation is almost unnecessary. The author, Col. Lottner, has successfully demonstrated the effectiveness of his exercises in giving an elegant bearing, distinct pronunciation, a pleasing animation while speaking or singing, and a practical mode of preparing any piece of poetry or text of song for good delivery, in some of the best schools in this and neighboring cities.

Lotze, Hermann. Outlines of logic and of encyclopædia of philosophy; dictated portions of the lectures of Hermann Lotze; tr. and ed. by G: T. Ladd. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. 6+184 p. D. cl., $1.

Discusses both pure and applied logic. Under the first head come the formation of concepts, the theory of judgment, a system of the forms of judgment, the doctrine of argument or the drawing of conclusions, the figures of Aristotle, etc. The applied logic presents the application of the forms of conception, the adducing of proof, and the process of thought in discovery. The logic is followed by a brief treatise on the encyclopædia of philosophy, in which are set forth the definition and method of theoretical philosophy, of practical philosophy, and of the philosophy of religion.

The lessons in this volume were originally prepared as a guide for the instructors and pupils in the industrial department of the Jamestown (N. Y.) schools, with which the authors are connected, Prof. Love being superintendent. A complete system of manual training having been organized and put in operation, it became necessary that it should be formulated for the convenience of the classes and for the guidance of the instructors in charge of them. This book is the result. It is divided into five parts, the first treating of the claims of manual training, the second of the introduction of industrial or manual training in the Jamestown public schools; the other parts suggesting methods, lessons, and work for various grades of pupils.

A wealth of interesting and excellent wood-cuts is one of the chief attractions in this holiday volume. They are found in the text, as head and tail pieces, as vignettes to chapters, and covering full pages. Next the reading-matter claims one's whole attention, proving what the author says, "that—apart from the human interest which every land inhabited by man possesses in greater or lesser degree—Holland has claims upon the attention and interest of such weight, that she is as well entitled to be studied as Germany and Egypt, Australia and Norway," the countries to which previous volumes of this series were dedicated.

This exquisite poem, which describes the search for the Holy Grail, is admirably suited to the Christmas season and lends itself peculiarly well to illustration. Some of the most celebrated of American artists—J. W. Alexander, Bruce Crane, F. W. Freer, R. Swain Gifford, Alfred Kappes, H. S. Mowbray, Walter Shirlaw, and F. Hopkinson Smith—have contributed to the illustrating of this poem. It was produced under the supervision of F. Hopkinson Smith. Has a new portrait of Mr. Lowell, from a charcoal drawing by Alexander, and nine full-page il. engraved on wood by Frederick Juengling (India prints, mounted), and others in the text. The cover design is by Mrs. S. W. Whitman.

The authors assert that the politics and the personages of the story are purely fanciful. Sandham Morse, who afterwards becomes the "Right Honorable," is first introduced in Australia, which he is just leaving after filling a government secretaryship for some years. At the moment of departure he meets Kooràli, the daughter of the new Premier, who sums up her experience of life in the words: "I have always been happy. I mean always to be happy and to make people glad." After a break of ten years the second scene of this drama of high life opens in England. Sandham Morse is married and at the zenith of his power. Kooràli, also married, comes to England with an unscrupulous, ambitious husband and two boys. Events succeed each other rapidly. The inside workings of the political machinery are sketched by a practised hand, and a pure and touching love story is interwoven.

McCaskey, J. P., comp. Franklin square song collection, no. 4: Two hundred favorite songs and hymns for schools and homes, nursery and fireside. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] c. 184 p. O. cl., $1; bds., 60 c; pap., 50 c.

Another charming collection of words and music from the best sources. The volume is arranged like the previous ones, each song or hymn being complete on one or two pages, so that the leaf need not be turned, except in search of new matter. The space often occurring on a page after a piece of music is filled in with notes and paragraphs relating to music or kindred subjects, almost thirty pages of interesting reading-matter being thus gained McClellan, Carswell. The personal memoirs and military history of U. S. Grant versus the record of the army of the Potomac. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 4+278 p. map, D. cl., $1.75.

"It is the 'Personal memoirs of U. S. Grant' in their relation to the record on which they purport to be founded" that the writer makes the subject of his work. He was special aide from 1862 to 1864 on the staff of General Andrew A. Humphreys. He takes Gen. Humphrey's work—an acknowledged authority—"The Virginia campaign of 1864 and 1860," and making it the basis of his criticism, points out numerous historical errors and errors of judgment recorded by Gen. Grant relative to the campaigns and the generals in command. The work is a valuable addition to the history of the war.

Another story of the South by the author of "Oblivion" and "Princess." It opens in a little village, Melrose, at the foot of the Cumberland Range in the northern part of Alabama. Dr. Monteith's death, brought about through a stern sense of duty in fighting an epidemic of typhoid fever, leaves Jean an orphan. Jean, like her father, has a morbid sense of duty, and nearly sacrifices her life and happiness in carrying out one of his last requests.

McCosh, Ja., D.D. Psychology: the motive powers; emotions, conscience, will. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 6+267 p. D. cl., $1.50

The first volume of this work, on the cognitive powers, treats of the operations of the senses, and especially of the sense of perception, this branch of the subject being illustrated with cuts and being fully discussed from the physiological side. The second volume brings the work to a conclusion with an exhaustive discussion of the motive powers of the mind, including the conscience, the emotions, and the will.

McCosh, Ja., D.D. Realistic philosophy defended in a philosophic series. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. '82 to '87. 2 v. 5+252; 5+325 p. D. cl., $3.

Dr. McCosh thinks the time has come for America to declare her independence in philosophy. He says "all national philosophies have to partake of the character of their nation." He sums up the various philosophies of the world and then proceeds: "A genuine American philosophy must reflect the genius of the people. Yankees are distinguished from most others by their practical observation and invention. . . . An American philosophy must be Realistic. It will be a Realism opposed to Idealism on the one hand and agnosticism on the other." The first volume is expository of this philosophy and the second is historical and critical. A reprint of Dr. McCosh's Philosophical Series.

McCray, Florence Thayer. Environment: a story of modern society. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. 404 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Stoneham, near New York, is the scene of the story at first; it afterwards changes to New York. The usual scenes of love and courtship, and worldly gossip and social episodes make up a readable narrative. Incidentally it illustrates the fearful evils of the drinking customs, which the author claims are stealthily creeping into fashionable life and among ladies of wealth and high social standing.

McCullagh, Archibald, D.D. Beyond the stars; or, human life in heaven. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. c. 2–106 p. D. cl., $1.

"The child of affliction" the author calls this little book. It grew out of questions which rose to his mind, as he stood beside the lifeless body of the "dearly beloved wife" to whose memory he has dedicated it. It deals with the condition of the blessed dead immediately after their departure out of this world, and aims to afford "light and consolation to those whose hearts have been saddened and whose homes have been desolated by death." The writer is pastor of Ross Church, Brooklyn.

Macdonald, G: God's words to his children: sermons spoken and unspoken. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. 6+286 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The discourses here given have appeared from time to time in various English periodicals, and are now grouped together in compact form, twenty-four in all. They were selected and edited for this publication by one of the best-known orthodox divines in America. The purpose had in view has been to bring them within the reach of the readers who are not supposed to be possessed of the volumes or the periodicals in which Dr. Macdonald's more serious work might be expected to appear. Dr. Macdonald is the well-known author of "Malcolm," "Donal Grant," and other novels.

Macduff, J. R., D.D. Morning family prayers for a year; founded on selected passages of scripture from the Old and New Testament. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., [1887.] 9+598 p. sq. D. cl., $2.

A book of "Family prayers," issued by the author thirty years ago, has now reached a circulation of 55,000. The present manual was prepared in response to the request of those using the first book for a new volume on the same plan. The special points of this book are its brevity, the alternation of prayers upon passages from the Old and New Testament, the prayers being made to bear directly on the daily portion of scripture which precedes them.

Mace, Frances L. Under pine and palm. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 6–222 p. O. cl., $2.

A collection of short poems, some of which have appeared in Harper's Magazine and other periodicals. The Nation says: "Mrs. Frances L. Mace, in 'Pine and palm,' ranges from the mountains of Maine to the delights of 'the New Italy'—which she finds in Southern California—and writes with a good deal of grace and vigor in both latitudes." Printed on rough-edged linen paper, wide margins, top gilt. The cover is prettily decorated with a design of the pine and the palm in gold.

Embraces three well-known works of travel, by the same author, viz., "A thousand miles in the Rob Roy Canoe on rivers and lakes of Europe," "The Rob Roy on the Baltic, a canoe cruise through Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Schleswig-Holstein, the North sea and the Baltic," and "The voyage alone in the yawl Rob Roy, from London to Paris, and by Havre," etc. Can be had either complete in one volume, or separably in three.

McGuffey, W: H. McGuffey's alternate readers. Cin., Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., [1887.] c. 4 books, ea., il. D. (Eclectic educational ser.) bds., First, 80 p., 15 c.; Second, 144 p., 25 c.; Third, 176 p., 35 c.; Fourth, 224 p., 40 c.

The "Alternate readers" furnish additional reading where such reading-matter is desired, alternating with any series in use. They may also be used independently, as a regular series. The selections are new, instructive, and interesting. They are based upon the same principles as McGuffey's Revised readers. In grading, the thought involved in the text has been considered first. The clear type and ample illustrations render the books attractive.

Mack, Rob. E. Queen of the meadow; il. by Harriet M. Bennett. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1887.] c. No paging, il. sq. O. bds., $2.

Mack, Rob. Ellice, ed. Treasures of art and song arranged by R. E. Mack. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1887.] c. No paging, obl. O. cl., $5; Japanese cf., $6.

Pictures and verses printed in monotints by the celebrated Ernest Nister, of Nuremberg. The original poems are by Graham R. Tomson, F. E. Weatherly, Theo. Gift, and G. Clausen; Tennyson's "May queen" and some poems of Miss May Kendal, Austin Dobson, and T. B. Aldrich are also inserted; the illustrations, which are both figure and landscape pieces, are by Mary L. Gow, Fred Hines, Julius Luz, George Clausen, Robert and Lizzie Mack, and others.

Mackay, W. P., D.D. The seeking Saviour and other Bible themes. 6th thousand. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. 6+247 p. D. cl., $1.25.

McMaster, J: Bach. Benjamin Franklin as a man of letters. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 7+293 p. por. D. (American men of letters ser.) cl., $1.25.

The tenth volume in this valuable series. Benjamin Franklin was born 1706 and died 1790; consequently lived through 84 of the most important years in the history of his country. The trained historian to whom the writing of his biography has been entrusted with the excellent judgment shown throughout by the editor of this series, has written a fair, dispassionate statement of facts, showing the great talents and the great faults of the father of printing in America. The literary style of Mr. McMaster makes the most trivial details strangely interesting. A very good etching of Benjamin Franklin forms the frontispiece.

McMinn, Rev. Edwin. A German hero of the colonial times of Penn., or, the life and times of Henry Antes. Moorestown, Burlington Co., N. J., Rev. Edwin McMinn, 1886. c. 305 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

It shows the peril of emigration from Germany in the colonial period; the peculiar religious characteristics of the German settlers; the special work of Henry Antes in moulding the lives of the Germans so as to harmonize with the genius of the colony; his earnest work toward the unification of all who were Christians—and the founding of Bethlehem by the Moravians under his leadership.

Magruder, Julia. A magnificent plebeian. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 2+228 p. S. cl., $1.

The "magnificent plebeian" is an ideally beautiful young lawyer who owes it to the exertions of his older sister, an uneducated factory-girl, that he has been able to educate himself and make a place for himself among refined surroundings. He steadily refuses all invitations from his partner to be introduced to society, as he expects this sister, who has been married and is a widow with one child, to come and live with him, and knows that he cannot introduce her to his partner's friends. The plot is slight. The romantic love of the plebeian for a beautiful aristocrat gives the author of "Across the chasm" a chance to make as finished a study of contrasts in social conditions as in her former book she made of Northern and Southern character.

The aim of the book is to tell the story of one of the [illegible] greatest men that ever lived, to tell very briefly of his [illegible] personal achievements, and to show how long his work [illegible] and how far his influence extended. The rise of Alexander was a great turning-point, when an older volume of history was finished and a new one began. The book begins with him without much retrospect and tells what be founded and what he did for the advance of the world. Important events are selected from the innumerable raids and campaigns, and distinct pictures are left in the reader's mind. About fifty illustrations, good maps, and full index.

Major, H. Up the Nile: a book for boys and girls. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1888 [1887.] 256 p. il. S. cl., 90 c.

An imaginary journey up the Nile by Mr. Joseph Drummond, an ivory merchant of London, his daughter "Daisy" with her maid, a learned professor who discourses about ancient Egypt, and "Septimus," a relative of Mr. Drummond who is studying for the church. An interesting résumé of the history and scenery of modern and ancient Egypt is thus afforded to young readers. Nicely illustrated.

Malet, Lucas, [pseud. for Mrs. Harrison.] Little Peter: a Christmas morality for children of any age; il. by Paul Hardy. N. Y., Appleton, 1888 [1887.] 6+168 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A "morality" in former times was a play in which abstract ideas, such as faith, feeling, conscience, charity, etc., were the characters. Little Peter had a black curly head and round eyes and sweet red mouth. He lived in a forest inhabited by charcoal-burners, and his favorite friends were a deformed charcoal-burner and his black cat "Cincinnatus." Little Peter was of a romantic, poetic nature and he heard voices everywhere, and sun, moon, and stars, the animals of the forest and all his emotions were to him speaking companions. Humor and pathos are blended with rare taste in this child's book by the author of "Colonel Enderby's wife."

Malot, Hector. A speculator in petticoats; tr. by Mary Neal Sherwood. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1887.] c. tr. 18-342 p. sq. S. pap., 75 c.

The heroine, Madame Fourcy, belongs to a class which the last Empire made no uncommon one in Paris— a class of feminine speculators who watched the money market, and the rise and fall of stocks and securities, with as keen an eye and as clear a head as their husbands and fathers. Her cool head, her beauty and ability, her utter lack of principle, and her entire conviction that she is doing her best for the advancement of her husband and children make up a mass of contradictions that rivet the attention of the reader. Fourcy himself wins our admiration; his quick sense of honor, his keen sense of right and wrong, his faith in his wife and devotion to his family are depicted with pathetic power.

Marshall, Emma. Daphne's decision; or, which shall it be? a story for children. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1887. 3+396 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The story of a young English girl who has been raised in the most self-indulgent manner. She is at fourteen a selfish, ill-tempered, disagreeable girl, with no thought that is not centred in self. Her little cousin Dorothy, who comes to live with her, and Violet Pennington, the rector's daughter, both have a great influence in softening her character. But she goes through many sad trials before she learns the lesson of living for others.

Marshall, Emma. Mistress Matchett's mistake: a very old story. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1887. 348 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
Mistress Matchett was the adopted daughter of Lady Muncaster, whose fixed belief in birth led her to rear Marjory in the peculiar manner she deemed fitting for a high social rank; the little lady proved an apt scholar, and after absorbing much false pride commits a mistake that causes sorrow until she remedies it in her own quaint way. The date is 1817; the book deals with three distinctive classes of society, and introduces some incidents of the celebrated labor riots that occurred in England at this time.

Marshall, Emma. The story of John Marbeck; a Windsor organist of three hundred years ago: his work and his reward. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1887. 6+148 p. il. D. cl., $1.
The most important events in the story took place at the time when King Henry VIII. married Katherine Parr. Marbeck is fearless in claiming his right to read the Bible to the people. His little blind daughter, his shrewish wife, his best friend, the sculptor Paul, and the girl Paul loves, who becomes lady-in-waiting at Windsor Castle, are all influenced by the strong, brave, poetic organist, who combined all the courage of a reformer and martyr with the tenderness of a woman.

Bartholomew kept a second-hand book-shop and was [a] rough, soured old man. Little Beckie goes to him to b[uy] a book for her father's birthday and tells him her father is sick and she takes care of him. A fire burns up Bartho[l]omew's books and he is taken home by Beckie to h[er] father's house, who soon afterwards dies, leaving the chi[ld] to Bartholomew. She afterwards loses this protector als[o] and is then adopted by a good, motherly woman, wh[o] teaches her to be an earnest Christian.

Marston, Philip Bourke. Garden secrets; wi[th] biographical sketch, by Louise Chandler Mou[l]ton. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 3–104 [+] por. S. cl., $1.
The photograph of Mr. Marston, which opens the v[o]ume, and the sympathetic sketch of his sad life by M[rs.] Moulton, add materially to the value and interest of th[e] little volume of verse. The young poet's place in liter[a]ture is too well defined not to gain for this collection t[he] same appreciation in this country it received in Englan[d]. Mrs. Moulton quotes a letter of Rossetti's in which [he] wrote: "Only yesterday evening I was reading your 'G[ar]den Secrets' to William Bell Scott, who fully agre[es] with me that it is not too much to say of them that th[ey] are worthy of Shakespeare in his subtlest lyrical moods."

Explains and illustrates some of the most practical and most easily made of improved farm appliances; they are such as secure greater comfort to domestic animals, provide supplies of wholesome water, economize labor, and assist in despatching much of the important work on the farm. The hints and suggestions offered are the result of practical experience

Aims to be a practical work showing the "evolution" of the fence from the road-barrier of logs, brush, or sods to the latest improved forms of barbed wire. A chapter on fence law condenses the various judicial decisions on the subject. The author claims the little work is the only one of its character. Large numbers of works have been devoted to farm buildings, while farm fences, which have cost more than all these structures, have as yet received no special consideration.

Martin, Mrs. Herbert. Amor vincit : a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 51 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 585.) pap., 20 c.

The love story of two young people, who, betrothed in their youth, remain faithful through many adverse circumstances. The heroine, known first as Lois Stanley, is supposed to be poor and friendless; the miller's son, Alan Moore, loves her. Lois turns out to be the long-lost daughter of Sir Francis Lancaster, and is transported from her humble village home to the temptations of fashionable London life. Her father refuses to let her marry Alan, and he goes to Zululand. But love triumphs and all ends well.

The author is one of the most distinguished living authorities on the kindergarten, and in the present work she devotes much space (pp. 329–563) to an account of Professor Preyer's famous investigations as to the development of the soul in infants. Fröbel and others concluded very properly that instruction and education must begin with the young child ; Miss Marwedel concludes that it must begin with the new-born infant and its parents. The real essence of her book lies in the educational light it throws upon infancy. She pleads for the sacred rights of infancy, not on the ground of expediency, but as an inherent right that cannot be violated with impunity.

For the Rutherford children the attic was the centre of interest in an historic old homestead; it contained all the family heirlooms, and its annual cleaning was hailed with pleasure by Allie and Daisy, who fairly gloated over the marvellous furniture and quaint costumes of generations of their ancestors. In the old room all the important incidents occur. Jim is unjustly suspected, and Amy suddenly recovers her jewels; this deepens the mystery, and contributes a later-day mystery to the old garret.

The papers in this volume have been written at intervals of time considerably apart, most of them for the present work, the rest for other publications. They are all rich in information and anecdotes and possess the special literary qualities of Mr. Mathews' other works. The chief papers are: Character of Napoleon I; William Wirt; Bulwer; Alexander Dumas; The weaknesses of great men; The London pulpit; The House of Commons; The advantages of ugliness; Cynics and cynicism; Causes of divorce; Immoral novels; The value of fame, etc., etc.

Over seventy poems by English and American writers on the subject of books. A number of the poems were written or translated expressly for the collection, as "Ballade of the bookworm," by A. Lang; "My Shakspere," by H. C. Bunner; Catullus' "To his book," translated by A. Lang; "The forgotten books," by T: S. Collier; "The Sultan of my books," by Edmund Gosse; Horace's "To his books," translated by Austin Dobson; "The "book battalion," by G: Parsons Lathrop; "On the fly-leaf of a book of old plays," by Walter Learned; "From the fly-leaf of the Rowfant Montaigue," by F. Locker; "A ruined library," by Walter Herries Pollock; and "The collector to his library," by Austin Dobson. The book is nicely gotten up, with broad margins, uncut edges, dainty vignettes, and an opening cut of "the bibliophile."

Maude, J: E: The foundations of ethics; ed. by W: James. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. c. 6+220 p. D. cl., $1.50.

From the introductory chapter we take the following paragraph, which explains the aim of the work: "In our study of ethics we shall discover that most writers on ethics have reached the truth, but have been prevented from seeing it clearly and from freeing it from error by the mere misuse of words. Our task, therefore, consists merely in unravelling; we lay no claims to any higher sort of originality."

Few English clergymen are better known in this country than Frederic D. Maurice, whose untimely death, some years ago, deprived not only England, but the Christian world, of one of its ablest religious teachers. He was bred a Unitarian, but subsequently became a member of the Church of England, and, in 1828, was ordained a clergyman. He devoted a great deal of his time to the social and religious needs of the common people. The present volume, made up of excerpts and extracts from his sermons, writings, and correspondence, has unusual and permanent value. It is a treasure-house not of jewels, but of things useful for every-day life; ideas which go straight home, and make the reader think. There is no useless display of rhetoric, or attempt at brilliancy, but it is the true, honest talk of a true, honest man, with a purpose in it.

Meredith, G: The shaving of Shagpat : an Arabian entertainment ; [also,] Farina. New ed. Bost., Robert Bros., 1887. 6+412 p. D. cl., $2.
"The shaving of Shagpat" is said to be the author's first work of fiction. Shagpat is a rich clothier in Persia, who has never been shaved. The wit, humor, and originality of Meredith and his wonderful command of language are shown to great advantage in this "Arabian entertainment." The other story, "Farina," is located on the Rhine in mediæval times, and the author is just as successful in producing the local coloring of Germany. The plot of both stories is too intricate to be detailed in a short notice.

Meriwether, Lee. A tramp trip : how to see Europe on fifty cents a day. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. '86. 5–276 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.
Being desirous of seeing something of low life in Europe, Mr. Meriwether donned the blouse and hobnailed shoes of a workman, and spent a year in a tramp trip from Gibraltar to the Bosphorus. From the moment he embarks on the Independente, the Italian steamer for which he secured a steerage ticket, until his return to New York, the spirit of the narrative is sustained, each page bringing to the reader new incidents, amusing and valuable experiences, and droll descriptions of the people he met, who were as frequently from high life as low life. The writer lived entirely with the workingmen of the country he tramped through. His experience, consequently, is valuable from a political stand-point, as it embraces many facts regarding wages and living, which could only be obtained by personal observation. An appendix contains a comparative tariff table and a comparative wage table. Some hints to pedestrians complete the attractive volume.

Four young girls are the principal characters ; they resolve to neglect no opportunity to help those they come in contact with, and bravely carry out their resolution. "The motive," the author says, in writing the story, "has been to encourage young girls, in whom lie dormant the noblest possibilities, in developing all that is generous, unselfish, and true."

Metcalf, W. H. A summer in Oldport Harbor: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 285 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Oldport is a quaint old town on the Connecticut shore of Long Island Sound, it gives its name to the adjacent harbor, and is surrounded by several islands. On one of these the heroes decide to sojourn for a summer. Their friends learning this fact bear down upon them in numbers. The result is a sufficiently large party to supply some humor, several romances, and an adventurer who contributes a great deal to the chronicles of a summer.

The cup-bearer of King Henry II. tells the notable events and introduces the principal personage of this reign, but he dwells longest upon the strange life and death of Thomas à Becket and finally reveals the secret which created enmity between the king and his chancellor.

Meyer, Conrad Ferdinand. The monk's wedding: a novel; [from the German by Miss Sarah H. Adams.] Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. tr. 1+169 p. D. cl., $1.25.

As Dante is the narrator of this story, told at the court of Verona for the amusement of the Prince and Princess, it may be imagined its scene is laid many hundred years back, even before his day. He evolves the story from an inscription on a grave he had seen many years previous when with the Franciscans at Padua. It read thus: "Here sleeps the monk Astorre beside his wife Antiope. Both buried by Ezzelin." The plot is very simple —the story one of love and revenge; the style is flowery and redundant. The binding is something new and quite attractive, being of a silky looking gray and white cloth, with a white label with red lettering on front cover.

Minor, T: C. Athothis: a satire on modern medicine. Cin., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1887. c. 3+194 p. D. cl., $1.25.
Some of the methods of modern medicine are satirized in a clever and ingenious way. Dr. Paulus Androcydes discovers the art of recalling a mummy to life that has been an inmate of his study for years. This mummy is Athothis, an Egyptian, who discourses in a learned way not only of medicine in the past, but of the transmigration of souls, showing how under various shapes in different periods of the earth's history he was enabled to penetrate wonderful secrets of science. Dr. Paulus is reduced to an invisible spirit for a time through his arts, and together they visit many sick-beds. Here are very sharply pointed out some of the errors and absurdities of modern medical treatment.

Taking as his principal characters a wealthy Chicago speculator and his wife and daughter, and placing them in Europe, first at Monte Carlo, then at Paris, and finally in London, at all of which places they are courted for their wealth, the author has an excellent opportunity for contrasting the manners and opinions of Europeans and Americans. This is done quite impartially. If the reader at one moment feels his countrymen are being shown up quite ruthlessly, the next he is appeased by a genuine compliment. The same fairness is shown to the other side. The English are especially the theme of many shrewd paragraphs. The story is quite fresh and attractive as a story, having two interesting love episodes. Names of real personages are used so freely that the book created quite a sensation on its first appearance recently in London.

Gives in a clear and concise style a remarkably interesting account of this most important period of modern history. The political and social condition of Europe at the beginning of the sixteenth century, the civil wars and internal development of England during the reign of Henry VII., the more European policy of his successor with the alliances and rivalries of Henry VIII., Francis I., and Charles V., the revival of classical learning, and the early Reformation are all vividly portrayed. This volume fills the interval between "The houses of Lancaster and York," and "The age of Elizabeth," of the same series.

Moodey, Martha Livingston. The tragedy of Brinkwater: a novel. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 2–238 p. S. cl., $1.

The "tragedy" is a murder, and the tracking of the murderer makes the story. Sharp detective work, court scenes, prison scenes, and a final most unexpected clearing up of mysteries follow each other in interesting succession. The character of Mrs. Farrell, step-mother to the murdered man, is original; and the girl engaged to the suspected murderer is very sweet and womanly.

Work intended rather for the devotional than the analytical student of New Testament history. Presents the words of the evangelists in one continuous narrative. Marginal references have been added in this edition, showing where every passage may be found. An index gives the subject of every verse and shows where it may be found in each gospel. The chapters are dated for daily reading, and the whole history can be read exactly four times during the year.

Moore, T: The epicurean: a romance. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887, 4–262 p. S. (Leisure hour ser., no. 200.) cl., $1.

A prose romance written by Moore in 1827. The scene is laid in Egypt, where the hero Alciphron, an Epicurean philosopher, is converted to Christianity by an Egyptian maiden, who suffers a horrible martyrdom. It is from this work Rider Haggard is said to have obtained his idea of "She." The two works will be found however to be totally different.

Morgan, T: J. Educational mosaics: a collection from many writers (chiefly modern) of thoughts bearing on educational questions of the day. Bost., Silver, Rogers & Co., 1887. c. 274 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Selections on educational topics from the writings of more than two hundred authors, most of whom are modern. Bits of wisdom, philosophy, experience, etc., are grouped together in imitation of mosaic pictures. Is intended as suplementary reader for higher classes, or for critical study, analysis, and parsing in Normal and Grammar schools. Index of authors.

Morley, H: English writers: an attempt towards a history of English literature. V. 1. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 12+367 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Prof. Morley published in 1864 the first volume of a work entitled "English writers;" this was followed in 1867 by a second volume, bringing the story down to the invention of printing. It is upon the basis of these volumes, now out of print, that this work is planned. Beginning at the beginning again, the scheme includes perhaps twenty volumes, not more, to be issued half-yearly. The whole narrative will be continuous, the volumes, however, complete in themselves, and each separately indexed. They will be grouped also in sections, which may be read as distinct histories of periods. The work will embrace the author's mature judgment of men and books, and the results of his lifetime of study, and will far exceed the original work in scope and comprehensiveness. The present volume contains a general introduction, a review of the origin of early English literature, and the narrative down to and including Beowulf.

Morris, C: The detective's crime; or, the Van Peltz diamonds. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. 3-243 p. D. (Globe detective ser., no. 2.) pap., 25 c.

An ingenious device is to make the man who robs Mrs. Van Peltz of her diamonds play the part of a detective, who comes to put her on her guard against an unnamed suspected party. For a long time the pretended detective remains unsuspected and retains his plunder, and is able partly to carry out his scheme of winning a girl he loves by injuring the character of her betrothed.

Morris, C: comp. Half-hours with American history. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. '86, '87. 2 v., 512; 3-544 p. D. cl., $3.

To the subjects of "Colonial America" and "Independent America," bringing the latter volume down to the end of the civil war, the work is dedicated. It consists of extracts from historians presented in chronological succession; they are divided into historical eras, and joined by connecting links, each giving in brief outline a sketch of the intermediate events.

Morris, C: The stolen letter; or, Frank Sharp, the Washington detective. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. c. 3-199 p. D. (Globe detective ser.) pap., 25 c.

Although continually overstepping the limits of probability, the manner of finally putting "the stolen letter" into its owner's hands is told in exciting and interesting chapters. The letter contained an avowal of love to the wife of a furiously jealous man, and was stolen by a scheming Washington politician to be used to force the lady to whom it is addressed to influence her husband in favor of the thief. The stealing of some valuable government papers in charge of the thief gives the detectives a chance to turn the tables and secure the letter.

Morris, E. D., D.D. Is there salvation after death? A treatise on the gospel in the intermediate state. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, [1887.] c. 3+252 p. D. cl., $1.25.

To quote from its introductory: "The aim of this treatise is to discuss, mainly in its more obvious and vital aspects, the important question here propounded, and to supply such answers as the testimonies of Scripture, the witness of Christian symbolism, the evidence drawn from Christian theology, and the tests of religious experience may combine to furnish. In other words, what is here prepared is a solution, practical rather than speculative, of the serious problem now presented for consideration in various quarters, whether what we term the 'gospel has any place or mission in the intermediate state."

Morris, G: S. Hegel's philosophy of the state and of history: an exposition. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1887. c. 11+306 p. S. (German philosophical classics.) cl., $1.25.

"The attempt is made to present, in substance, the argument of two of the masterpieces of German philosophy contained in the works of Hegel. The limitations of space have compelled the author to abstain from comment or criticism, whether offensive or defensive, or the doctrine expounded."—Preface.

Morris, Herbert W., D.D. Natural laws and gospel teachings. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1887.] c. 195 p. D. cl., 90 c.

This book was prepared to meet the attacks made upon the Christian faith. The author aims "to offer abundant proof that the foundation of our faith still standeth strong, and to present facts that will enable the Christian reader to give a scientific as well as a Scriptural reason for the hope that is in him."

Morris, Mowbray. Claverhouse. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. 4+222 p. S. (English worthies ser.) cl., 75 c.

A memoir of John Graham, Viscount of Dundee, better known under his territorial title of "Claverhouse." It is the result of a re-reading of the best authorities by Mr. Morris, and an earnest endeavor to point out the true character of the man known by his friends as "Bonnie Dundee," and by his enemies as "Bloody Claver'se." If he has not made a hero out of him he has shown that he was not a hard or a cruel man, but merely carried out the instructions of his superiors. The personality of the man, and the epoch of history to which he belongs, make this one of the most interesting volumes of the series. Contains a list of authorities.

It is two hundred years and more since these meditations were written. Heinrich Müller was born in 1631 in Lubeck. He was many years pastor there of the Lutheran church. In spite of the lapse of time there is singularly little that is antique even in the style of this little collection of thoughts on "the unchanging verities of human nature and the gospel." Printed in pica type.

The title of this volume indicates its purpose to set forth the truths to which it refers in the direct light of human life and common experience. The subjects of the fourteen discourses are: The witness from experience; Christ's treatment of unwilling skeptics; Truth through and by life; Life not vanity; The gospel of the body; The defeat of life; The two prayers of Job; Trust and righteousness; The twofold force in salvation; Faith essential righteousness; Evolution and the faith; immortality and modern thought; Man the final form in creation; Music as revelation.

Munroe, Kirk. The flamingo feather. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 6+255 p. il. S. (Harper's young people ser.) cl., $1.

The story opens in 1564 and tells some of the early history of Florida, although it deals chiefly with the unsuccessful expedition sent out by the French Admiral Ribault, under the command of Laudonniere, and the romantic adventures of his nephew, Rene de Veaux, whose valorous deeds endeared him to the Indians, and won for him "the flamingo feather," which had heretofore been worn by Hasse, the bow-bearer.

Munsey, Frank A. Afloat in a great city: a story of strange incidents. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 2+287 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story opens at night on the lights and gayety of Broadway, New York, but the scene swiftly changes to a squalid den at Cherry St. and the East River, where a revolting scene takes place between a street Arab and two personages of shady repute; after this Ben the Arab again repairs to Broadway, and becomes involved in difficulties which lead to his being smuggled on board a vessel bound for Australia; his adventures from thenceforth include two wrecks, an unexpected discovery, and an accession to wealth.

Murfree, Miss Mary N., ["Charles Egbert Craddock," pseud.] The story ot Keedon Bluffs. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 2+257 p. S. cl., $1.

Although written for young folks, this can scarcely be called a "juvenile;" while it possesses an element that will interest young readers, it is of equal interest to older readers. It is again a study of life and character in the mountains of Tennessee, embued with the special warmth and picturesqueness of description characteristic of all Miss Murfree has written. The war has been over many years when the story opens, and it is a new generation of boys who are made the heroes. Listening to their elders' reminiscences, they learn that a box of money is supposed to be hid on Keedon Bluffs, put there for safety in war times. It is on this episode and the attempt to regain the box the story turns.

Murray, D: Christie, and Herman, H: One traveller returns. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1888 [1887.] 2+314 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A picturesque tale of ancient Wales and the early Christians, and the descent of the Romans upon Britain. The scenes are laid in the midst of a tribe of Druids or sun-worshippers, of which Feltor is king and Vreda queen. Vreda has secretly embraced Christianity, and loses her life through poison administered by a jealous woman, who is commanded by the arch-Druid to do the deed. "Vreda" is the traveller who returns from the "undiscovered country," and who in another form and under another name awakens her people to a sense of their sins and prepares them to accept Christianity.

Deacon Tubman, a jolly, fat, good-natured man, is presented with a woollen night-cap on New Year's morning by his housekeeper, "a typical spinster not overburdened with fat." This so rejoices the Deacon that he is possessed to make others happy, goes to call upon his pastor and makes him leave his books and spend the day skating, sleighing, and driving with his parishioners. The other stories are "The old beggar's dog;" "The ball;" and "Who was he?" The first story is illustrated by Thomas Worth, the two next by A. B. Shute, and the last by J. H. Snow.

Musick, J: R. Calamity Row; or, the sunken records. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1887. c. 5–265 p. D. (Globe lib., no. 37.) pap., 25 c.

Calamity Row is supposed to be situated along the river on the east side of New York City. A beautiful young girl who waits on customers in a fifth-rate thread-and-needle store, is the heroine, and her parentage is established after a complicated story by means of the "sunken records." Four young physicians play prominent parts. A chapter is devoted to a description of a dissecting-room in a medical college at midnight, which gives gruesome details that lead to the identification of the heroine's mother. A fair description is also given of second-class New York boarding-houses.

The scene is laid in the south just before and during the late war; the story is a sensational one of a slave's revenge and the many terrible consequences following it.

Has undergone a thorough revision and been brought up to the present standard of knowledge. The general plan and classification of previous editions have not been changed. The more important recent additions to our acquaintance with the existing or extinct fauna of the world have, however, been noticed in the text, and fresh illustrations introduced where they appeared desirable.

Noble, Annette Lucille. After the failure; or, a loss and a gain. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 336 p. 1 il. S. cl., $1.15.

Doris was suddenly thrown out of a home of luxury and compelled to think and act for herself. Many a young girl in such circumstances would have given up in despair, but she did not. Her misfortune was the making of her. She met it calmly, with common-sense and with readiness for hard work, and she grew in it into rich beauty and strength. This is the pith of the story, but there are others in it who have misfortunes also, who meet their misfortunes in varying ways, with varying results.

Norman, H: Bodyke: a chapter in the history of Irish landlordism; reprinted, with several additional chapters from the Pall Mall Gazette, and il. with sketches from instantaneous photographs by the author. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 78 p. D. (Questions of the day, no. 42.) cl., 75 c.

Bodyke is a little village near Limerick in Ireland, which was the scene last spring of the wholesale eviction of the peasant tenants of the O'Callaghan estate. Mr. Norman was an eye-witness of the dreadful scenes enacted, telegraphing them on the evenings of their occurrence to the Pall Mall Gazette. It is from this journal the contents are reprinted, with some additional matter.

Norris, W. E. Major and minor: a novel. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 2 v. 2+322; 2+323-618 p. S. (Leisure hour ser., nos. 205 and 206.) cl., $2; pap., 50 c.

The title is meant to describe the two sons of Sir Brian Segrave, of Kingscliff—"Major" being the elder and heir, and "Minor" the younger. The whole story turns upon the elder being disinherited. He is a good fellow, but dreamy and impracticable; in a moment of anger against him brought about by money matters, his father makes a new will in favor of "Minor," which he almost immediately regrets. But his sudden death makes good his rash act, and transposes the positions of the two young men. Their individual fortunes, told with all the keen insight into the shams of life of which Mr. Norris is master, fill two good-sized volumes.

Ohnet, Georges. Edmée (Les dames de Croix-Mort). N. Y., F. Warne & Co., 1886. 3-189 p. D. (Library of continental authors.) pap., 35 c.
This novel has run through eighty editions in France. It is from the pen of the well-known author of Le maître des forges. It is the story of the Countess Régine de Croix-Mort, a rich and beautiful French widow, and her daughter Edmée. A second marriage that the Countess contracts with an unprincipled fellow, who is attracted by her money, is the dark shadow in Edmée's life.

Ohorn, L. M. The angel of the village; tr. by Mrs. Mathews. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1888 [1887.] c. 3-253 p. S. cl., $1.25.
A story of life in a manufacturing village. The proprietor of the factory is obliged to reduce wages, and much suffering ensues. The "angel of the village," a charming young girl, and her father do all they can to quiet the dissatisfied workingmen. The plot of the story turns upon the contests between the oppressed workingmen and their tyrannical employer. A good description is given of a strike at the factory.

It is followed by Mr. Oliphant's experiences as traveller and diplomatist in Italy during the revolution of 1848, in Greece, in the United States and Canada, in the Crimean War, in India during the mutiny, and in China during the war of 1857. Then come reminiscences of sporting in Ceylon, an episode with Garibaldi, an adventure in Montenegro, an account of the attack on the British Legation in Japan, a visit to Poland during the n, to Schleswig-Holstein during the war of

to the convents in Moldavia. Mr. Oliphant's s are innumerable and his manner of telling pels the reader's strongest interest.

. Laurence Oliphant's work is the result of the per-bservation of the writer during a recent residence of r four years in the Holy Land. It is the most distinct eresting account yet published of the country and its
, of the remains of antiquity to be found there, and questions which explorers are called to consider re-ng them. The author carries the reader over por-of the country crowded with associations that do not e their interest from any single age or race or na-
, but from events and persons that fill a conspicuous e in ancient history, sacred and profane, and also in history of mediæval and modern times. The book has

It is not a mere text-book, but, so far as it extends, it is a complete treatise, and so of service as a reference book. It differs from the standard text-book in this: It goes to the very bottom, and states and proves every important principle with Euclidian vigor. In the language of the preface: "Many fundamental principles were found to be omitted by elementary writers because too difficult for a beginner, and by subsequent writers because already known." These breaks this book fills up, and gives a proof, logical and complete, of every general proposition. Along with this rigorous treatment are precise definitions, varied illustrations, direct and simple rules [illegible] examples.

Our wedding souvenir. Troy, N. Y., Nim[illegible] &
Knight, 1887. c. No paging, il. O. cl., [illegible] 5;
Amer. seal, $8; full tree cf., $10.

Primarily intended for memoranda and souvenirs connected with weddings or a wedding. There are blank pages for the signature of the bride and bridegroom, for the words of the marriage certificate, and the signature of the witnesses; places to paste pictures of the various parties, etc., etc. All the pages are beautifully printed in tints and then decorated with views, sprays of flowers, etc., in colors. The sketches are by Li K. Harlow and the floral designs by Antoinette A. Bassett, Lydia F. Emmett, Eleanor E. Greatorix, Clara Goodyear, and Lizzie Harlow. The volume, aside from its useful purpose, is a beautiful holiday souvenir—the art work, printing, paper, etc., being very fine.

The story of an English girl, who is placed by her father in a fashionable boarding-school at Paris to finish her education. Her mother is an invalid, and Sir John Stanhope takes her, by the physician's advice, to Madeira. Mabel is thus left entirely to the influence of the school, which is presided over by a selfish, heartless Frenchwoman. The account of the school and the pupils and teachers is very realistic. Mabel falls under the influence of the Catholic Church, and becomes a Romanist. Being reunited with her parents, after two years, she confesses this fact to her father, and is cruelly turned out of doors. She again returns to Paris, seeking the protection of her former teacher only to be repulsed and shown the door. Her subsequent career, until finally forgiven by her father, is one of great poverty and temptation and other trials.

A story of the Russia of to-day. Narka is a Jewess who becomes a Nihilist through the revengeful spirit roused in her from a series of cruel and unjust deeds viseed by those high in authority upon her relatives. She next becomes entangled in politics in her efforts to save her foster-brother, Prince Basil Zorokoff, who is suspected of having committed a murder. She loves him deeply and recklessly risks her life for him, but he is quite unworthy of her devotion. The story of a conspiracy and the accompanying scenes is well told. A charming picture is also given of Russian home-life.

An amusing story of rather broad humor in which the characters are a widowed father, three lovely daughters, and a maiden aunt, who have been left a large fortune. They had previously to this been living on a farm in New Hampshire. Their increased means and new elegant surroundings expose them to the wiles of fortune-hunters, and some very funny episodes are the result.

Stephen Searle's father was rector in the parish of Arneford, Southshire. The reverend gentleman's one aim was to complete his book. Mrs. Searle's dominant desire was to see her youngest son, Fred, in an exalted position; to encompass this she sacrifices Stephen's interests, and the lad is forced to shape out a new course for himself; his efforts of self-repression take up most of the story, although the theme is really the keeping of the promise which determines his own career and induces Margaret Nethercote to share his fortunes.

Address delivered Thanksgiving Day, November 25, 1886. "The relations between labor and property constitute the problem of our generation," says the author, and then proceeds to show how each member of society should consider himself personally responsible for the existing "army of the discontented," and should meet and deal with them "in the sincere spirit of personal equality and cordial fraternal interest."

Parks, Leighton. His star in the east: a study in the early Aryan religions. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2+292 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The substance of this book was first embodied in a course of lectures delivered before the Lowell Institute in the winter of 1885, on Christianity and the early Aryan religions. Since then the work has been carefully revised and considerable matter added, especially to the last chapter, which relates to the future of the church. The

The theme of argument throughout this study is that the "Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" has been seen in the East, and that the true way to make disciples of all nations is by declaring unto them Jesus as Agni, Brahma, Buddha, or Sosios, as he was first declared to the Jew as the Christ. Rector of Emmanual Church, Boston.

Besides an unusual number of recipes comprised under the headings always found in cookery books, embraces chapters on "An ideal kitchen," "Kitchen furnishing," "Care of utensils," "About food," "What all housekeepers should know," and bills of fare suited to all occasions, such as weddings, parties, gentlemen's suppers, etc.; Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Lenten fare. Index. The plain receipts have been distinguished from those for rich food by an asterisk.

Parry, Emma Louise. Life among the Germans. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 340 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author went abroad to study, and made herself for the time one of the people. She dwelt among them, lived in their families and spoke their language, entered into their ways of living, and by so doing learned to understand their spirit and traits of character to an extent that could have been done in no other way. She chose, too, a remarkably fortunate time for her sojourn. Her going was immediately after the consolidation of the empire, and she was there during the fourth centenary year of the birth of Martin Luther, so that she had the best of opportunities for witnessing the imposing celebrations which took place in honor of the great reformer. The result of her experiences forms a series of admirable pictures and studies of the German people.

The author has endeavored to present the most recent information relating to the subject, at the same time not overlooking important truths established by past experience. Having been actively engaged in practice for upwards of thirty-four years, and nearly two-thirds of that time a medical teacher, he has studied to write a book which will be alike useful to students and practitioners. The work contains a number of handsomely executed engravings, some of which are original and a number which he claims have never before appeared in any American treatise on the subject.

This voyage to the little-known Caribbees was made in the spring, when the vigor of the American climate drives many people to a more genial clime. Mr. Paton has made a book that will not only be indispensable to all who contemplate making the journey, but will be likely to induce many others to set forth for the purpose of seeing for themselves the region he has so graphically described. From the narrative the reader acquires a series of suggestive pictures of the beautiful islands at which the traveller stopped—St. Kitt's and Dominica, Demarara, on the main land of British Guiana, and the towns on the adjoining island of Trinidad.

Payn, Ja. A prince of the blood: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1838 [1887.] 3–270 p. S. cl., 75 c.

The prologue introduces Arthur and Cicely Forrester, cousins. Arthur wishes Cicely to marry him. She says she will send him a history of a relation of hers, whose face Arthur has admired, and that he will then understand why she fears to marry him. The story describes an ocean voyage and shipwreck in the Indian Ocean. A young girl, engaged to be married, is saved. "The prince of the blood" is a native Malay, who almost makes her forget her European lover. The heroine of this story appears in the epilogue as the fairy godmother who smoothes the path of the young cousins and makes all end happily. The author's descriptions of scenery and of women's hearts are as telling as ever.

Containing also instructions to presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and committeemen as to their duties, as well as the official forms of reports, resolutions, etc. The whole based upon the best authorities, including Cushing, McPherson, Roberts, Fish, and other well-known writers on parliamentary law and practice, so arranged and simplified as to be readily understood.

Peabody, Andrew P., D.D. Moral philosophy: a series of lectures. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 4+337 p. S. cl., $1.50.

The author, professor of Christian morals in Harvard University, had three purposes in view in preparing these lectures. 1. To present with scientific accuracy, yet in a popular form, the fundamental principles of moral philosophy. 2. To show its inseperable alliance, at every point, with religion, and especially with Christianity. 3. "To illustrate the principles of ethical science as they are developed in its own and in human history, as they are involved in questions of current or recent interest, and as they are applicable to the concerns of daily life." The author's style is simple, yet scholarly, and he brings a wealth of anecdote and illustration to render his subject atractive to the general reader.

Peard, Frances Mary. Madame's granddaughter: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 44 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 602.) pap., 15 c.
Notwithstanding the dislike Madame Merrillon inspired she made her marked individuality felt by all who surrounded her. Marcelle, a strong character in herself, so completely succumbs to the elder lady's strange influence that her personality becomes merged in Madame's and she is known as "Madame's granddaughter." Madame Merrillon's ruling passions are greed and sordid meanness; these and remarkable shrewdness become prime factors in a plot to assure Marcelle's future and secure Lambert Solignac's fortune; her plan failing, she has recourse to revenge, which causes strange scenes to ensue, and brings about an unexpected termination of the story.

Peard, Frances Mary. Prentice Hugh. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1887.] 10+296 p. il. D. cl., net, $1.05.
The story opens in the beginning of the fourteenth century with a street broil, from which Hugh Bassett comes forth victor; after this incident, a sea voyage and wreck and the death of Hugh's father are passed hastily by, and he takes his place as apprentice to Elyas Gervase, the stonecutter, whom Bishop Bitton employed to transform Exeter Cathedral; the lad's career as a carver in stone is the theme of a tale which introduces many personages famous in English state and church history. The style of binding makes it an attractive gift-book.

Peard, Frances Mary. Scapegrace Dick. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1887.] 4+288 p. il. S. cl., $1.05.
The story opens in the Vale of Taunton, Somersetshire, with a wordy encounter between Madame Repton and her stepson Dick, whose pranks won him the soubriquet "Scapegrace Dick;" unjust treatment, an inordinate love for a seafaring life, and heroic admiration for Admiral Blake cause Dick to forsake his family, who were Royalists, and enlist under Blake. After a short career on the Victory, the flag-ship, Dick is transferred to the Garland, which was worsted by the Dutch ship Brederode. Dick thereby becomes a prisoner to Holland. His sojourn in that country covers a very critical period in the 17th century, and introduces Rembrandt and several other noted personages, who were intimates of young Repton.

A very excellent edition of this standard work, which, better than any other extant, gives us a valuable insight into the every-day life of the times of the later Stuarts (1660–1669). It is an exact reprint of the Bickers (London) edition, well printed on fine tinted paper from large open-faced type, double-leaded. Contains four fine steel portraits and is well bound in plain cloth.

Borneo, an island of Oceanica, belongs to the Dutch, and is garrisoned by European soldiers. Four men, disgusted with their hard lines and hard fare, desert, after making ample preparations for their flight. They are pursued, of course, but after many months of dangerous adventure they succeed in escaping, having traversed the entire island from south to north. The book is primarily one of adventure—but also gives a very thorough description of the natives of Borneo, their habits, ways of living, etc., with many glimpses of its wild, luxuriant scenery and foliage. The illustrations, 10 in number, are full-page pictures. Richly bound. Intended as a book for boys, being adapted from a well-known work of travel.

The book is well named "A flock of girls," as it is a collection of short stories entirely about girls. "Tacy" tells how a young girl learned to curb her will; "Jim," how a pretty Miss rid herself of an obnoxious name; "Violet," of a young girl's visit among fashionable people; "Kate Oxford," how an inexperienced girl made a living by the use of a special talent; and so each tale contains an amount of healthy and pleasing reading for young girls.

This treatise was discovered by Luther, who first brought it into notice by an edition which he published in 1516. He wrote a preface for a second edition, in which he says "that next to the Bible and St. Augustine, no book hath ever come into my hands, whence I have learnt, or would wish to learn more of what God, and Christ, and man, and all things are." No fewer than seventeen editions of the work appeared during the lifetime of Luther, and it has continued to be a favorite handbook of devotion in Germany, where it has passed through more than sixty editions, and has also been widely circulated in France, and the Netherlands, by means of Latin, French, and Flemish translations. A manuscript of it was discovered in 1850 at Wurtzburg, which bears the date 1497, from which the present translation has been made.

Phelps, Elizabeth Stuart. The gates between. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2+223 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Again Miss Phelps carries her readers into the unseen world. Her hero is a physician—a busy, famous man—who marries late in life. His work by degrees so encroaches upon his home life, that his wife sees less and less of him, and he is so nervous and irritable, that he is often almost cruel to her. One evening, after a few harsh, hasty words, he flies out of the house, jumps into his buggy, is run away with and killed. After this comes his probation. For a time he wanders about the earth a disembodied spirit, friendless and alone. After a period as he improves spiritually he is translated to heaven. His meeting here with his son and finally with his wife, are told with much realism, and with an evident intention of pointing a moral at inattentive impatient, husbands.

Phelps, Elizabeth Stuart. Jack the fisherman.; with il. by C. W. Reed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 3+59 p. sq. O. cl., 50c.

First appeared in the June number of the Century. The scene is laid in Fairharbor, which seems to be Gloucester, Essex Co., Mass. Jack was a fisherman and the son of a fisherman. Miss Phelps is a literary artist, but seldom has done so effective a piece of writing as in this realistic picture of the curse of heredity, which is full of humor, tenderness, irresistible pathos. The illustrations are new, and are by C. W. Reed. The binding is a combination of rough paper and white cloth, which is striking.

The scene is laid in Sandhole, a town of mushroom growth, which owes its prominence to the finding of petroleum; the hero, idly visiting the place, is induced to become a partner of an enterprising friend, who shows him the feasibility of sinking a well in a lot called "The devil's hat;" here the events of the story revolve themselves, and the reader is interested and puzzled by the conduct of Joyce Selden, Ogden's falling in love with Patrice, and a happy reunion. The author's style is at once humorous, cynical, and pathetic; he seems to have an aptitude for character sketching which is displayed in Joyce Selden, "Tickley Bender," Major Dibbs, and the Hon. Hewson Dilster, who is natural enough to be a portrait.

This work was prepared by the author for the purpose of collecting and presenting in a compact form all those recipes and so-called "trade secrets" which have been so extensively advertised and offered for sale. It is not by any means a clap-trap book, though it exposes many clap-traps. It contains a large amount of valuable information that cannot be readily found elsewhere, and it gives not only the formulæ, etc., for manufacturing an immense variety of articles, but important and trustworthy hints as to the best way of making money out of them. The author had the assistance in his work of an experienced and skilful pharmacist.

The little community of Rising Branch offered a fair specimen of the average new American settlement. The hands working on the new railroad and in the new woollen mills are among the chief characters. For some time a few of the elder people struggled to direct the energy of the younger members into useful channels. Uncle Joseph and his wife Samantha, after losing all their children, begin to labor to reform their little town, and finally by their influence the "white church" is built and decided improvement felt in the habits and morals of the dwellers in Rising Branch.

A description of the aims, methods, failures, and successes of evangelistic work as conducted to-day, with suggestions for future improvement. Short sketches are given of the life and work of Whitefield, Howard, Spurgeon, Shaftesbury, Moody, Bliss, McAll, McCauley, and others. The author is a minister in Philadelphia.

Pierson, A. T., D.D. Keys to the word; or, help to Bible study. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1887.] c. 14+148 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Offers methods for the more perfect study and understanding of the Bible, "the result of the author's search for keys to unlock the word of God." A brief sketch is given of each of the books of the Old and New Testament —as to where and when they were written, by whom and for what purpose, etc.; also the spiritual meaning of each as the writer understands it, which is given as the "key-word to unlock its mysteries."

A rich country-seat in Gloucestershire, England, is the home of Mr. Shenstone, a man of poetic nature, who devotes his time to farming; his foolish, fashionable wife, and his daughters Mab and Joyce, the heroines of a story of which the burden is: "We are all too ready to lay down the law and pass sentence on every matter under heaven. . . . A prayer for mercy for ourselves, a cry of pity for the whole human race, these are the only words that fall fitly from our lips." The oldest daughter possesses the power of clairvoyance. The labor question and Irish organizations are brought in. The plot is involved and interesting. By the author of "Judith Wynne," etc.

ıe story here told is one of surpassing interest, and ger than fiction, the exact truth of which, however, impossible to doubt. The episode recounted is of civil war, the narrator having taken part in the exition. A score of Federal soldiers in disguise penetted 200 miles from their own lines to the heart of the nfederacy, and seized a crowded railway train within ε lines of the enemy's camp. Their intention was to ırn the railroad bridges on an important line, and ieir success would have dealt a deadly blow to the onfederate cause. Only the unexpected encountering f two extra trains as they flew northward prevented heir accomplishing all they proposed, and this obstruction gave rise to a thrilling chase on the railroad. The subsequent fortunes of all the party are full of an intense interest.

Poe, Edgar Allan. The poets and poetry of America : a satire ; (by "Lavante," published in Phila., 1847;) with an introductory argument to prove that "Lavante" was Edgar Allan Poe; appendix of notes by Geoffrey Quarles. N. Y., Benjamin & Bell, 1887. c. 36+33+11 p. S. pap., 50 c.

The original of this poetic satire was signed "Lavante," and was published in Philadelphia in 1847. It was discovered by a gentleman who hides his identity under the name Geoffrey Quarles. The original publisher was William S. Young, who did business at No. 173 Race Street thirty years ago. Of course the publishers do not vouch for the authenticity of the satire, but the editor does, and he argues very ingeniously to prove his belief. He covers thirty-six pages of type with his argument and gives eleven pages of notes in fine print to the same end.

Porter, Rose. A modern Saint Christopher; or, the brothers. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1887.] c. 231 p. D. cl., $1.25.
Nathan Parret lived in the Colonial days of New England; previous to his leaving the colonies for France, Nathan had heard the legend of Offero read; Patty Gaylord, who was present at the time, put the query, "Nathan, will you be like St. Christopher?" Victor Parret sneered, "A modern St. Christopher." Nathan's reply was an enumeration of the masters he intended serving; like the saint of old he tests their weakness early in his career, then a noble deed crowns him with the approval of his friends and merits the name of the olden time saint, which is lovingly given by Hester Gaylord.

Preston, D. S. Columbus; or, a hero of the new world : an historical play. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 8+99 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This play has received the endorsements of James Russell Lowell, Edwin Booth, William Winter, and others as being "extremely interesting," having "very decided merit," and affording an opportunity for "picturesque acting." It deals with the events of Christopher Columbus' life and his discovery of America. The scene of the first, third, and fifth acts is at Granada; of the second at sea; of the fourth in the tropical regions of the new world. There are over 37 characters.

Preston, Harriet Waters. A year in Eden : a novel. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. '86. 3+420 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A painful story of an illicit love which has its "spring," "summer," "autumn," and dreary "winter." The heroine is a young New England girl, with an unknown Italian mother; her passionate, undisciplined nature leads her to cast off the sincere love of a young man, worthy and suitable in every way, and to accept that of Philip Winslow, a married man. Winslow is a man of wealth and position, married to a woman far his superior, mentally and morally. His wife's virtues become irksome to him, and she quickly discovers that she has not married him for love. They are mutually unhappy, and he seeking Monza Middleton, at last persuades her to go away with him to Italy. This is the central motive, but others cluster around it, and some good character sketches, especially of the twin-brothers Arthur and Stuart Bryce, are introduced. By the author of "Troubadours and trouvères," etc.

Preston, Margaret J. Colonial ballads, sonnets, and other verse. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 9+259 p. S. cl., $1.25.

By the author of "Cartoons," "Silverwood," "Old song and new," etc. The Commercial Advertiser says: "The ballads chronicle incidents in the history of Virginia and New England. They are spirited and moving, and their motives are clear cut and well wrought. We cannot, however, yield to them the significance attached to the sonnets and shorter lyrics. These are thoughtful, suggestive, and at times arrive at grandeur. A number of them refer to the lives of the old masters, their homes and families, and all breathe a wholesome ethics and a noble humanity, with the breadth of scholarship and true culture."

Preston, Margaret J. A handful of monographs, continental and English. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1887.] c. '86. 2-229 p. D. cl., $1.

Interesting reminiscences of travel by the author of "Silverwood," "Cartoons," etc. The titles indicate their scope and show that a great deal of pleasant literary matter is mingled with vivid description. The names of a few of the papers are: In the track of the "Golden Legend;" Alpenglow at Chamouny; The skull-caps of Cologne; The oubliettes of Chillon; The best thing in Paris; An afternoon at Kenilworth; In the footsteps of Wordsworth; The haunts of Sir Walter; The Doré gallery; Conclusions about democracy in Europe.

Contains a collection of cases concerning a period of ten years, within which the law relating to trade-marks has received much attention from the courts, and the principles thereof have been simplified. "We may venture to express a hope," the authors say, "that this collection of the late cases, arranged as nearly as practicable in the order of their date, and containing learned discussions upon the law relative to trade-marks in nearly all its branches, may assist the profession and the courts in working out the problems submitted to them." The cases have been gathered from over one hundred and fifty volumes, many of them inaccessible to the practitioner.

Prince, J: T. Courses and methods : a handbook for teachers of primary, grammar, and ungraded schools. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1886. c. 10+344 p. D. cl., 85 c.

A practical work, giving a brief plan of studies which may be pursued in elementary schools—both graded and ungraded—with a simple and direct statement of good methods of organization, teaching, and discipline. While designed primarily for untrained and inexperienced teachers, it is hoped that the hints and directions will commend themselves to all as based upon correct principles of teaching. Pt. 2 treats of methods of teaching the various subjects usually taught in primary and grammar schools, including many topical outlines which have been tried in the school-room and found helpful. Pt. 3 contains plans of organization, with reference to school-buildings, apparatus, reference-books, classification, programmes, etc. It also treats of the means of moral training and school government.

Pyle, Howard. The rose of Paradise. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] 4+231 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
According to the sub-title, "Being a detailed account of certain adventures that happened to Capt. John Mackra, in connection with the famous pirate, Capt. Edward England, in the year 1720, off the Island of Juanna in the Mozambique Channel; writ by himself, and now for the first time published." An immense ruby of fabulous value, that is stolen from Captain Mackra, is the central motive of the story; his adventures in search of it are startling and original.

Pyle, Howard. The wonder clock; or, four and twenty marvellous tales, being one for each hour of the day; written and il. by Howard Pyle; embellished with verses by Katherine Pyle. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 13+318 p. O. cl., $3.
By aid of a dream-cap the author has stepped into Wonderland and found all manner of queer and forgotten things "which had been laid away nobody but Time and his grandmother could tell where." These he tells about in twenty-four fairy stories, one for every hour of the day and night. The illustrations are spirited, and many of the head and tail pieces are unusually pretty.

Q., [pseud.] Dead Man's Rock; a romance. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] 5+364 p. S. (Cassell's rainbow ser., v. 1, no. 6.) pap., 25 c.
An old-fashioned tale of a discovered will, buried treasure, pirates by land and sea, life-long revenge, foul murder, lost reason, theatrical triumphs, suicide, gambling, combination clasps, mysterious inscriptions, journeys from London to India, weird sounds, etc., told with such spirit and force that the most blasé novel-reader is carried away and reads eagerly to the end—a most unexpected one.

Quackenbos, J: D., M.D., Newberry, J: S., M.D., [and others.] Physical geography; prepared on a new and original plan; il. with maps, diagrams, and eng. in colors, and including a separate chapter on the geological history and the physical features of the United States. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 140 p. Q. bds., $1.60.
The services of ten well-known specialists and scientists were obtained in the preparation of this geography. The following are some of its most noteworthy features: The most recent views in regard to vulcanology and earthquakes are presented, with illustrations to the present year. The theory of ocean currents is clearly unfolded in the light of the latest discoveries. The subject of climate receives peculiarly full and interesting treatment, as also that of clouds and precipitation. The general motions of the atmosphere are made plain by the application of Ferrel's law; while the perplexities environing the consideration of cyclonic storms are more thoroughly disentangled than in any other American school-book. The chapters devoted to geology, botany, zoölogy, and ethnology, are as fascinating as they are instructive. The text is lively and readable throughout. An ample bibliography of the subject is introduced, adding greatly to the value of the work. The mechanical parts of the work deserve the highest praise.

Question (A) of identity : a novel. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. '86. 3-271 p. S. (No name [third] ser.) cl., $1.

Twin sisters, so much alike that John Beckley, the husband of one, is never quite sure whether it is Leah or Rachel he had married, are the heart of a singular mystery, which is left unsolved even at the close of the book. The scene is first laid in London; afterward it changes to a New England village, where the larger part of the story takes place. It is the ordinary one of love and marriage, the dark shadows being found in the tragical story of the twins, and in the unscrupulousness of a sanctimonious old deacon, who takes "liberties" with the bank account of a friend.

Rabelais, François. Three good giants whose famous deeds are recorded in the ancient chronicles of François Rabelais; comp. from the French, by J: Dimitry; il. by Gustave Doré and A. Robida. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] 22+246+12 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The feats of Grandgousier, Gargantua, and Pantagruel are set forth in a style calculated to interest youthful readers without injury to their morals. The illustrations of Doré and Robida have been adopted.

Raffensperger, Mrs. A. F. Fritz's ranch : a book for boys. N. Y., American Tract. Soc., [1887.] c. 195 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.

Ragozin, Zénaïde A. The story of Assyria from the rise of the empire to the fall of Nineveh, (continued from "The story of Chaldea.") N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. 18+450 p. il. D. (The story of the nations ser.) cl., $1.50.

The author has the honor of being a member of the Société Ethnologique, corresponding member of the Athenée Oriental, of Paris, and member of the American Oriental Society. She has put within a few hundred pages a wonderful amount of historic knowledge. The history of "Assyria" is only a continuation of her volume on "Chaldea" already published in this series. Considerable space is devoted to human sacrifices as an institution. The volume has many illustrations, good maps, and a full index.

Reber, Franz von. History of mediæval art; tr. by Jos. Thacher Clarke. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. tr. '86. 31+743 p. il. O. cl., $5.
"It has been the great desire of the author to present a history of artistic evolution more logical and more consequential than those with which he was acquainted. He trusts the book will prove of interest to those readers whose desire it is to obtain a general view of the artistic development of the Middle Ages."—Introduction. The author is Director of the Bavarian Royal and State galleries of paintings, and professor in the University and Polytechnic of Munich. The translator is already known by the good work done on the author's "Ancient Art" published by the Harpers in 1882. The glossary of technical terms is intended to supplement the very full glossary given in that volume. Four hundred and twenty-two illustrations make clear the author's text, and add to the attractive appearance of the volume. The plates have been made in this country, and the edition to appear in England will be printed from these American plates.

Recent French art; or, selections from the portfolios of Meissonier, Santai, Leloir, and others; with biographical text comp. by Warren F. Kellogg. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1887. c. No paging, F. cl., $7.50.
Sixteen photo-etchings; three are from Meissonier, namely: The quarrel, Bad humor, and a portrait. The others are: The dancing girl, by Leloir; Farm life, by Dupré; A merry party, by Garnier; Sketching and The nurse, by Kaemmerer; Not guilty, by Zamacois; Paying the harvesters, by L'hermitté; The communicants, by Breton; Louis XVI. and the blacksmith, by Fichel; The sailor's wife, by Butin; The night before an execution, by Santai; Souvenir of the Orient, by Vauquelin.

Reddall, H: F: Who was he? six short stories about some of the mysterious characters and well-kept secrets of modern times. N. Y., Phillips & Hunt, 1887. c. 300 p. D. cl., $1.
The subjects of these stories are Louis the seventeenth, "the lost heir of the Bourbons;" "The unknown of the Bastile," designated in French state annals as "the man of the iron mask;" Kaspar Hauser, the foundling of Nuremberg; The wandering Jew; Junius and the Junius quest; and the youth who fell from crown to kitchen, and some similar strange stories.

Redway, Jacques W. Butler's physical geography. Phil., E. H. Butler & Co., 1887. c. 2+127 p. il. and maps. Q. (Butler's geographical ser cl. $1.08.
Embraces the latest discoveries in geographical science. In the chapters on vulcanology, ocean hydrography, and meteorology, there is much new material. The contents have been so arranged that the leading principles are found in the text, while other relevant matter of instructive nature has been placed in the notes. The paper, print, maps, and illustrations are all excellent.

Reed, Sir E: J., and Simpson, E: Modern ships of war; with supplementary chapters and notes by J. D. Jerrold Kelley. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887] c. 8+284 p. il. sq. O. cl., $2.50.
The articles which make up this book were originally published in Harper's Magazine. No changes of any moment have been made in the text; the notes bring down the data to date, and the appendices contain the needful additions which the limited space of a magazine made it impracticable to include. Sir Edward J. Reed was chief constructor of the British Navy, and Edward Simpson is Rear Admiral in the U. S. N., and was President of the U. S. Naval Advisory Board, while J. D. Jerrold Kelley, Lieut. in the U. S. N., has already made himself known as author of "The question of ships," "Armored vessels," etc. Fully illustrated. The cover design is appropriate and striking.

Rees, J. Rogers. The diversions of a bookworm. N. Y., G: J. Coombes, 1887. 4–258 p. S. cl., $1.25.
Contains essays on "The bookworm's study," "Some other folks' studies," "An ideal study," "The companions of the bookworm: friends in the flesh," "Other companions of the bookworm, dreams and books," "The loved books of some other folks." By the author of "The pleasures of a book-worm."

Reeves, J: The Rothschilds: the financial rulers of nations. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887. 11+381 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
An interesting account of the celebrated Jewish family of bankers of this name, from its first humble beginnings, in the early days of Mayer Amschel Rothschild, its first financier, until the present time. The volume opens with an eloquent defence of the Jewish race, and closes with a chapter of Rothschildiana which is a succession of witty anecdotes.

Reid, L: H. Living for the master: sermons. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. c. 355 p. D. cl., $1.25.
These sermons have been selected with the hope that they may prove acceptable for general use. It is intended that nothing shall be found here that is not held in common by the great body of Christ's disciples. The writer will be thankful if they shall prove useful for private reading, or convenient for lay reading in congregations temporarily without a pastor.

Reid, T. Wemyss. Gladys Fane: a story of two lives. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 76 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 565.) pap., 20 c.
The scene is laid in Fanesford, an old Northumbrian country-seat, the home of Gladys Fane, until her own wilfulness exiled her from country and friends, and she went abroad, to cling to a will-o'-the-wisp chance of happiness which eluded her grasp.

Richard the Third and the primrose criticism. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887. c. 4—164 p. D. cl., $1.
James Russell Lowell is quoted as saying of the play of Richard III.: "The absence of certain things in the play to my mind seems to indicate that it is not Shakespeare's work. I find myself in the position of poor Peter Bell, seeing little more than an ordinary primrose where I perhaps hoped to see a plant, a flower of light." This the author calls "primrose criticism" and devotes a chapter to showing its fallacy. Then a chapter is given to the historical basis of Richard III., and the last to the histrionic Richards, including: Kean, Cooke, Macready, Booth, and Garrick. He concludes: "The primrose criticism merits our thanks for having prompted the fresh investigation, which has strengthened our confidence in the Shakespearean authorship of Richard III."

Two families lived opposite each other in Oldford, a pretty little country town. The one was rich, the other poor, and both possessed a similar number of children of almost the same ages and sexes. With everything to amuse them, the young Ermingtons were always dull and bored, whilst the young Southeys got no end of fun out of simple pleasures and the cheerful performance of their duties. A friendship is finally struck up between the two families which benefits both. Much time is spent in the woods studying the ways of animals and insects, and woodcraft generally, the reader obtaining in a pleasant style considerable information in natural history.

In this pleasant volume of verse the utterances of a true lover of nature and of song may be recognized. The author, who is professor of English literature at King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, is a native of New Brunswick, and he finds in his own land and surroundings his best inspirations. There is nothing better in the book than those poems which describe the picturesque landscape of certain portions of the province. In "The Tantramar revisited" the local color is true and strong.

As the sister of Francis I. and the author of the "Heptameron" Margaret of Angoulême will be best remembered. Though a conspicuous figure of her time, a brilliant and ambitious woman—she had neither a lovable nor atttactive character. It is not, however, as an "individual" that the author has tried to depict her, but "as an influence, as an inspiring spirit, as an organic part of the history of her time."

The double "verily" occurs twenty-five times in St. John's Gospel. The author believes that these twenty-five sayings and their context form a connected whole, embracing a complete scheme of Christian doctrine. He divides them into four sections: 1, The kingdom of heaven on earth, to which belong three; 2, The nature and power of the Son, which includes four; 3, The gifts of the Son to his people, to which are given seven; 4, The service the Son expects from his people, which embraces the remaining eleven verses. He gives in brief outline the special teaching of each word prefaced by this double "verily."

"The story of a ranch," published last December, showed the author's love of wild Western scenery and unconventional life. On a thin thread of story she now strings descriptions of the magnificent scenery of Yellowstone Park. "The three Tetons" are mountains, and the efforts made by the travellers to reach them furnish opportunity for much bright conversation. The strip of land still granted to the Mormons is also pictured and some of their theories discussed facetiously.

"In an opening chapter Mr. Roosevelt rapidly sketches the personal traits of the pioneers in the New West. This is a background for the study of the growth of Missouri, in which Mr. Benton played so important a part. Only one chapter is devoted to Benton's life before his entry into the Senate. The rest of the volume is a sketch of the great political movements in which the Senator from Missouri played an important part, from Monroe's second term to the election of Buchanan. Chief among them are the struggle with the Nullifiers, the war on the Bank, and the anti-slavery agitation. Mr. Roosevelt expresses great admiration for Benton's sturdiness, force, and honesty."—New York Evening Post.

As in her larger work, the "Philadelphia cook-book," the recipes are clearly and simply given, while an exhaustive index affords easy reference to every subject.

Cragsby Castle, on the river Tay, near the Grampian Hills, had been the home of many generations of Campbells; the owner at the date of the story was Sir William, who felt the necessity of retrieving his fallen fortune, and tried to do so by compelling his daughter to marry Malcolm Dalziel. Upon Lady Marion's answer the interest depends, although Nurse Elspeth's stories and the moral conveyed are worthy of notice.

A translation of a famous French book, Les Etudes de Maitre Pierre sur l'agriculture et les forets, consisting of a series of conversations between a village schoolmaster and a peasant, Master Peter, in which they discuss a scheme proposed by the French government to put an end to the devastation wrought by the freshets—the proposal being to replant the hills with trees. As this means a temporary possession of the pasture lands, the peasants object, looking no further than their present interest. The lesson the study teaches is designed to be taken to heart especially in America, and to demonstrate how disastrous to our agricultural interests is the destruction of our woodlands.

Under the general title of "The theological educator," a series of manuals (of which this in the first) are under way. They are designed to give a solid and trustworthy grounding in all branches of theological study, and will be written by men recognized as authorities on their subjects. They will be adapted to the needs of those preparing for examinations in theology, as well as for popular instruction. The present volume embraces the moral evidence and the miraculous attestation of Christianity.

Rowell, J. C. The sonnet in America. Oakland, Cal., Pacific Press Pub. House, 1887. 24 p. O. pap.

An admirable review of the work of American sonneteers by a fastidious critic conversant with all the niceties of this form of poetry. Appended to the pamphlet is a list of sonnets that have appeared in 191 American magazine volumes, viz.: of the Atlantic, Californian, Century, Critic, Harper's, Overland, and Scribner's. In all about 170 poets are represented.

Royce, Josiah. The feud of Oakfield Creek: a novel of California life. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 4+483 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The author of "California" in the American Commonwealth Series has used his knowledge of the geography, history, and peculiar customs of that state as a background for a remarkable character study of human plans and motives. The well-worn subject of a ground-claim making lasting trouble between families is here used to bring into relief the strong individualities of four men and three women. The editor, Boscowitz, and Margaret Eddon, the loved, unloving wife, are specially well drawn. Several important social questions are discussed. The story is worth a careful reading.

Rutherford, R. C. Henry George versus Henry George : a review. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 5+329 p. S. pap., 50 c.
An examination of the theories of Henry George, aiming to show that he is illogical and self-contradictory. This the writer seeks to prove by quoting Henry George against himself, where he apparently gives opposite views on the same subject almost on the same page.

Sâimath [pseud.] The Fawcetts and Garods: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 88 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 566.) pap., 20 c.
Although the Garods and Fawcetts occupied adjacent estates there had been a feud of long standing between the families and there was a saying extant in the North Country that friendship could not exist between a Garod and Fawcett. Robert Fawcett was more liberal and tried to fraternize with his reputed enemy, but his attempt brought about a succession of events, which ended in the desolation of his home.

Saint Francis was born in 1182, in the little town of Assisi in Umbria. The "Little flowers" are a series of legends which were collected some two hundred years after his death, having been handed down by word of mouth until that time. They form an excellent biography of him and his disciples, told with quaint simplicity and grace. The translator has tried to preserve the naivet. and antique flavor of the original. The work has long been a famous and favorite classic in Italy and France.

Salmonson, M. From the marriage license window : an analysis of the characteristics of the various nationalities ; observations made and incidents told ; facts from every-day life. Chic., J: Anderson & Co., printers, [M. Salmonson,] 1887. c. 206 p. D. cl., $1.
The author, being the marriage license deputy for Cook Co., Ill., has had ample opportunity to make observations from his window upon the parties who apply for permission to marry. These observations, embodied in a series of chapters, are both amusing and instructive. Besides many curious facts and anecdotes, the author sets forth his views on marriage and other kindred subjects.

Saltus, Edgar. The anatomy of negation. N. Y Scribner & Welford, 1886. c. 6+226+1 p D. cl., $2.
Mr. Saltus asserts from the beginning that he has not attempted to prove anything. His sole aim seems to have been to collect within the same cover, either in condensed form or through the medium of illustrative extracts, the opinions of the philosophers, the seers, and the teachers of the past and present, from Kapila to Leconte de Lisle, regarding the object and purpose of life. That it is negation his book seems to prove in spite of himself. Like "The philosophy of disenchantment," of which it is the complement, it is pessimistic throughout. Completed with a bibliography.

Saltus, Edgar. Mr. Incoul's misadventure : a novel. N. Y., Benjamin & Bell, 1887. c. 6–216 p. D. cl., $1.
Mr. Saltus' well-known pessimism strongly colors the present story. The subject is the marriage of a rich New Yorker—a widower—to a penniless young girl of good family, who makes no pretence of loving him. Their brief married life, spent in Europe, with its tragic ending, is described with the fine literary skill of which he is master. The book is nicely gotten up on fine linen paper, uncut edges, broad margins.

Samuels, S: From the forecastle to the cabin. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 13+308 p. il. and por. D. cl., $1.50.
Captain Samuels, of the Dauntless, gives in this volume "a terse and exact account of his personal experience" from the day he ran away from home and shipped as cabin-boy till he became commander of his own vessel. While his book is rich in thrilling and unusual adventures of the sea, it also points out the more dangerous temptations which beset a boy who enters upon a seafaring life.

Sanders, Lloyd C., ed. Celebrities of the century; being a dictionary of men and women of the nineteenth century. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 5+1077 p. O. cl., $5.

Makes good a real deficiency, namely, that of a fairly adequate and exhaustive dictionary of recent and contemporary biography, including foreign as well as national celebrities. The greater lights or the century have been treated with some fulness; those of minor importance with conciseness. The aim has also been to make the articles something better than mere strings of facts and dates, while avoiding on the one hand flippant expressions of individual opinions, on the other empty eulogy. As a rule those who merely survived the year 1800 have either been excluded or treated with great brevity. The wants of the average reader have been consulted as far as possible in drawing up the lists of names—utility rather than completeness being the object chiefly kept in view. The editor has had an able staff of assistants in his work. A handsome double-column volume.

Sappho: memoir, text, selected renderings, and a literal translation by H: Thornton Wharton. 2d ed. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1887. 1+213 p. por. D. bds., $1.75.

Saunders, F: The story of some famous books. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. c. 12+208 p. S. (Book-lover's library.) cl., $1.25.

The author of "Salad for the solitary," in the progress of a somewhat desultory though extended course of reading and research, collected many notes and incidents connected with the making of famous books. These are collected in the present volume and illustrate in a most interesting manner the literary evolution of Sidney's "Arcadia," Moore's "Utopia," Fox's "Book of Martyrs," Browne's "Religio Medici," Pepys' "Diary," "Robinson Crusoe," "Gulliver's Travels," and other celebrated works.

Savage, M. J. My creed. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1887. c. 4–204 p. D. cl., $1.

In an introductory sermon on "Outgrowing the old beliefs" Mr. Ellis thus defines the scope of the course of sermons which follow, as, "first, to deal with this transition, to indicate some of the main outlines of the change from the old belief to the new one; then to take up and answer the question as to what we have left, what are the great fundamental beliefs which, so far as we can see, are so much a part of the nature of things that they are not likely to be disturbed or to pass away."

Savage, Minot J. These degenerate days. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1887. c. 41 p. T. cl., 50 c.

A poem: written on reading Lowell's "Credidimus Jovem Regnare" in the Atlantic for Feb., '87.

Savage, M. J. Bluffton: a story of to-day. 2d ed. Bost., G: H. Ellis, 1887. c. '78. 248 p. D. cl., $1.50.

First appeared in 1878. It is based mainly on Mr. Savage's own experience of the gradual passage of an earnest young minister from the orthodox to the Unitarian faith. The form is autobiographical. Mr. Savage is a prominent Unitarian clergyman in Boston.

Sawyer, Wesley C. Complete German manual for high schools and colleges. Chic., J: C. Buckbee & Co., 1887. c. 332 p. D. cl., $1.20.

"The completeness claimed for this manual does not consist in an exhaustive treatise upon the grammatical analysis of the German language; . . . it consists rather in adapting to the needs of the English-speaking student who has studied the grammar of his vernacular the amount and kind of theory which he needs, and nothing more, in combination with the amount and kinds of material for practice and drill which will most readily yield the desired efficiency in the use of the language." —Preface.

Scartazzini, Giovanni A. A handbook to Dante; from the Italian, with notes and additions by T: Davidson. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1887. c. 9+315 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This handbook, written by the first of living Dante scholars, contains everything necessary to enable the student to study intelligently the supreme Christian poet—"the voice of ten silent centuries." It is divided into two parts, the first treating of Dante's life; the second, of his works. In neither is there omitted any really important fact. To every section is appended a valuable bibliography, and these bibliographies, taken together, form an excellent catalogue of a Dante library. The work supplies a real desideratum in English literature, which is singularly deficient in works on Dante, suitable for students. The translator's notes and additions will, it is hoped, add to the value of the book for American students.

Schaff, Philip, D.D., and Jackson, Rev. S: Macauley, eds. Encyclopedia of living divines and Christian workers of all denominations in Europe and America; being a supplement to Schaff-Herzog "Encyclopedia of religious knowledge." N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. c. '86. 6+271 p. O. cl., $3; shp., $4; hf. mor., $5.25; full mor., $7.

Contains, in alphabetical order, biographical sketches of contemporary divines, celebrated preachers, Christian workers, theological professors, church dignitaries, and editors of prominent religious periodicals. It was prepared as a supplement to the Schaff-Herzog "Encyclopedia," as that work excluded men now living. Every endeavor was made in the preparation to secure the greatest possible accuracy, proof having been sent for revision to each living person named. Besides living celebrities, the volume includes sketches of divines who have died since the completion of the "Religious encyclopædia" (1884), and a few others who were inadvertently omitted from that work.

The author, a lieutenant in the U. S. navy, was one of the officers of the Tacony sent by the United States government in February, 1867, to the waters of Mexico "to protect American interests." The Tacony was moored off the city of Vera Cruz, where she remained from March 28 to July 24, 1867—a most eventful period for the Mexicans. The operations on the coast are described, together with the action of the German, French, and English vessels congregated around Vera Cruz. By the aid of correspondence and conversations with officers who were present, and by scrutiny of various executive documents and departmental files the author has gathered a large amount of interesting history connected with the closing scenes of Maximilian's short reign in Mexico.

Schurman, Jacob Gould. The ethical import of Darwinism. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 188[illegible]. c. 13+264 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The object of the present volume is to distinguish between science and speculation in the application of Darwinism to morals. One of the opening chapters gives very properly an exposition of the Darwinian theory comparing and contrasting it with the more general doctrine of evolutionism, whose history and meaning are also briefly traced. Then follow chapters on the philosophical interpretation and the ethical bearings of Darwinism. The fifth chapter is devoted to an examination of the ethical speculations which Darwin grafted upon his biological science.

Schurz, C: Life of Henry Clay. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 2 v., 4+383; 4+424 p. S. (American statesmen ser.) cl., $2.50.
The period during which Henry Clay lived was not only one of the most eventful in our national history, but its many antagonizing issues and bitter discussions served to bring into prominence men who only needed the occasion to prove themselves great. Clay was a giant among giants, such men as Webster, Jackson, Randolph, Calhoun, and Gallatin being his supporters and adversaries. Mr. Schurz has told the story of his life, and the many matters of public interest that his wonderful eloquence aided in shaping, with the candor and earnestness for which he is noted. The war of 1812, the Missouri compromise, our French and Indian difficulties, President Jackson's vigorous administrations, etc., etc., are a few of the questions reviewed.

Sergeant, Adeline. Jacobi's wife: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 85 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 591.) pap., 20 c.

An old-fashioned "tale of true love that never did run smooth." A cultivated, weak aristocratic villain and an escaped convict divide the honors in their successful attempts to make many lives miserable. The story begins with a shipwreck in which the convict abandons his wife and child. She vows revenge and spends seven years of her life in finding out his whereabouts and frustrating his villainous plots, thus proving the good genius in the lives of many noble men and women. Ranch life in South America is incidentally described, but the greater part of the scene is laid in a country district of Old England.

Seybert commission. Preliminary report of the commission appointed by the University of Penn. to investigate modern spiritualism in accordance with the request of the late Henry Seybert. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 159 p. O. cl., $1.

The late Mr. Henry Seybert during his lifetime was known as an enthusiastic believer in modern spiritualism, and shortly before his death presented the University of Penn. a sum of money sufficient to found a chair of philosophy, and to the gift added a condition that the university should appoint a commission to investigate "all systems of morals, religion, or philosophy which assume to represent the truth, and particularly of modern spiritualism." The present report details the commission's investigation of rappings, slate-writing, materialization, answering questions in sealed envelopes, and other so-called spiritual manifestations. In all they found a fraud of the grossest kind.

"It might seem to a superficial observer that there are cookery books and housekeeping manuals in abundance already before the public. But a practical attempt to apply the most of these to the every-day wants of the average household proves that there is need of a safe guide for the housewife who must do her own work, or teach and direct unskilled help. It is the object of this work to supply this long-felt want. Therefore, we have given the most of our space to plain, practicable rules, suitable for common use. We have given a list of the articles needed, at the head of each receipt, so that it can be seen at a glance whether the ingredients called for are at hand, and what sort of material is required."—Preface.

Plain chant is that species of music which the Catholic Church has consecrated to the public celebration of the divine worship. This little treatise supplies a concise and easy explanation of the rules of this chant. It is divided into three parts. The first treats of the notation of plain chant, the second of the structure and peculiarities of the ecclesiastical modes or tones; the third of psalmody.

Skene, F. M. F. A strange inheritance: a
per's handy ser., no. 112.) pap., 25 c.
The hero, Hugh Malcolm, is introduced to the reader on board ship on his way back from Australia to Scotland, where his uncle has recently died. Hugh's uncle had been the "laird of Dunree," and naturally he expects to be his heir. He finds himself disinherited, however, all of Dunree being left to public charities, with the exception of a small tract of land in which his ancestors are buried—this forms his "strange inheritance." Hugh has to earn his living, and becomes the agent of Dunree, through the influence of one of his father's old friends.
Living thus on the very spot, link after link in the chain of the thrilling story of the causes of his being disin-herited comes into his hands. The tale is well told, and is full of surprises and exciting details. Twin-girls of great beauty are here the heroines of two episodes of

It was a time-honored custom in Port Sagg to hoist a flag on the old windmill every time a ship was sighted in the bay. This ensign also heralds the chief events of the story, and generally signals that the vessel in port is the Bermuda, whose captain has a prominent part in the book; the scene is a quaint old seaport town, the characters have a wide scope, and the plot, although not intricate, rivets the attention throughout.

Inchfawn lies in the mountain district of Ireland. The old squire has lived an easy-going, spendthrift life, and at last is evicted from his estate by a parvenu who had loaned him heavy sums of money. His son and daughter devote themselves to the poor, and try in every way to get them to emigrate. The romantic element is subordinate to the author's plan to interest readers in Irish life and Irish character.

The boys of Cary Farm were five in number; all brothers, healthy, fun-loving, and always ready for a good time. The farm was on an Iowa prairie, with plenty of horses and cattle, and endless chances for riding and hunting and nut-gathering, and all kinds of out-door sports. The boys found plenty to do, both in the line of work and play, and how they did it is right jollily told. Their "April fool" escapades, their celebration of the Fourth of July, the visit of Santa Claus to the farm one happy Christmas, and the description of the general, every-day life at the farm, make up a series of chapters which most boys will read and read again.

Sonnets of Europe; a volume of translations, selected and arranged, with notes, by S: Waddington. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 23+280 p. T. hf. cl., 75 c.

The editor offers this little volume as a fairly representative selection of translations of sonnets by prominent poets from foreign sources. Many of the sonnets are two and three hundred years old, while a greater portion of the translations are of comparatively recent date, and by such writers as Symonds, Andrew Lang, Edmund Gosse, Austin Dobson, Longfellow, etc. There are sonnets from the Italian, French, German, Spanish, Portuguese, Swedish, Polish, Greek, Dutch, and Latin.

Sonnets of this century; ed. and arranged with a critical introduction on the sonnet by W: Sharp. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 81+335 p. T. hf. cl., 75 c.

In his interesting introduction Mr. Sharp says: "There are two leading reasons for now issuing a new collection, to show how much of the poetic thought of our own time has been cast in the mould of the sonnet, and how worthy that mould is of the honor; and to meet, by the formation of an anthology, of which the first and only absolute principle is the inclusion of no sonnet that does not possess—of course in varying degree—distinct poetic value, the widespread and manifestly increasing appreciation of and liking for this metrical form." The sonnets are arranged alphabetically by authors' names.

Sons and daughters; by the author of "The story of Margaret Kent." Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. 3–473 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Sycamore Hill, easily recognized as a fashionable suburb of Philadelphia, is where the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Reese is situated. Mr. Reese has married wealth, and is treated by his wife with both indifference and contempt. His only solace and resource is the Sycamore Shakesperean Society, which meets weekly at his house. The debates of this society are exceedingly clever and amusing, and offer a timely satire upon the doings of kindred associations. Mrs. Reese not only rules her husband and the house, but her only daughter Miriam, who has been brought up to marry position, and who, with many attractive traits, has a singularly morbid and suspicious nature. Every wooer who approaches her she believes drawn to her by her fortune. Her love story and those of several of her friends, both male and female, with the social doings of Sycamore Hill, in which is mixed a good deal of talk and gossip, are the main motives of the book.

Sophia-Adelaide; a chapter in contemporaneous history; from the French. Chic. and N. Y., Belford, Clarke & Co., 1887. c. tr. 3–199 p. por. D. pap., 50 c.

The writer of this romantic history claims to be the eldest daughter of Queen Victoria. She tells a most startling story of babies changed in their cradles, by which a child of the Prince Consort by a morganatic wife took her place, and is now known as the Princess Victoria, wife of the German Crown Prince, while she (the writer) has been raised in obscurity, and is now friendless and penniless. The story is well told, but is not sustained by proof.

In this volume Mr. Dennis has brought together extracts from Southey's correspondence selected from the great mass of material at hand, and covering every period of the poet's life. Its aim is to give a clear idea of the man and of his literary and social environment during the nearly seventy years of his existence, and, as a matter of course, contains innumerable references not only to his own works, but to those of his intimates—Wordsworth, Coleridge, Lamb, and others.

Sparhawk, Frances C. Little Polly Blatchley. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 6+189 p. il. sq. O. cl., $1.
From a certain Christmas-eve, when six-year old Polly and her chum, May, make a bargain to stay awake all night and see Santa Claus, this little heroine's nursery and school experiences are told. Polly has literary aspirations, and at an early age writes a drama of the Revolution, which is performed for the edification of her family. After this she attempts to write a prize story, of which several chapters are given. A good story for little girls.

Sparhawk, Frances C. Miss West's class in geography. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] c. 129 p. pap., 30 c.; bds., 50 c.
Lessons on trees, vegetation, heat and moisture, waters, sheds, sun and rain, cities, etc., etc. The natural method is pursued, the lessons being made very interesting by the means of objects and amusing conversations.

Spear, J: W. Out of the toils. N. Y., Phillips & Hunt, 1887. c. 389 p. D. cl., $1.25.
The scene is laid in the interior of Pennsylvania; the author tells some rather revolting incidents to illustrate the cause and effect of intemperance, and impress upon readers the necessity of prohibitionary measures from a social standpoint.

Spence, Rev. H. D. M., Exell, Rev. Jos. S., Neil, Rev. C:, eds. Thirty thousand thoughts, being extracts covering a comprehensive circle of religious and allied topics. In 7 v. V. 5. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1887. 5+512 p. O. cl., $3.50.
The character of the work is given in the following paragraph: "In order to place the entire range of literature under contribution, scores of the workers have searched thousands of volumes; especially of the Fathers and the Puritans; books of biography, books scientific, classical, philosophical, foreign; university lectures, and all the great reviews of the age. The volumes contain illustrative extracts and quotations, choice and carefully selected literary gleanings of the highest order, anecdotes aiding to define moral and religious truths, historical parallels, similitudes—in brief, useful and suggestive thoughts gathered from the best available sources, on all subjects." With the present volume the subject of Christian dogmatics is concluded. Much thought and pains have been expended in the selection of the extracts for this volume. In the place of cold and uninviting dogmatic utterances, there have been inserted quotations of Christian truth, earnestly and lovingly proclaimed. For complete title to the whole work, see "Weekly Record," P. W., March 15, 1884, [633.]

Spencer, Mrs. G: E. Calamity Jane: a story of the Black Hills. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 172 p. D. (Cassell's rainbow ser. of original novels.) pap., 25 c.
Charles De Pew, a brilliant young New York lawyer, makes what his uncle terms a mesalliance and is forced to seek his fortune in the West. After an adventurous journey the young couple locate in Deadwood, where stirring incidents occur that make Mrs. De Pew the heroine of the town and cause the reader's attention to be pretty evenly divided between the recountal of her brave deeds and the bold escapades of Calamity Jane, "A noted desperado" of frontier life. By the author of "a plucky one."

Brief practical homilies on Scripture themes, the most of them based on appropriate texts of Scripture; they possess all the characteristics of the renowned author—spirituality, directness, vitality, and experimental richness and fulness.

Spurgeon, C: H. Pleading for prayer, and other sermons preached in 1886. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros., 1887. 5-384 p. D. cl., $1.
17 sermons. The titles are: Pleading for prayer; Retrospect—the Lord hath blessed; The sermon of the seasons; Why they leave us; The three hours of darkness; Mysterious meat; Rejoice evermore; Zealous, but wrong; Who found it out?; The personal Pentecost and the glorious hope; A seasonable salutation; Secret drawings graciously explained; In Christ no condemnation; Concerning death; Love's complaining; Our sympathizing High Priest; Our ascended Lord.

Spyri, Johanna. Gritli's children: a story for children and for those who love children; from the German by Louise Brooks. [2 v. in 1 v.] Bost., Cupples & Hurd, [1887.] c. tr. 196+201 p. S. cl., $1.50.
Some of the characters of Rico and Wiseli reappear. Gritli has died and her two children receive great kindness from a lady who is travelling for the health of her only child. Fred's love of beetles and bugs and his manner of frightening his sister Rikli with his specimens adds an element of humor to a rather sad story. All the children introduced show special talents, upon which the author dwells instructively.

Spyri, Johanna. Swiss stories for children and for those who love children; from the German by Lucy Wheelock. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. tr. 94 p. D. cl., $1.
This charming collection of stories "for children and for those who love children" will be eagerly welcomed by all who have already made acquaintance with Madame Spyri's work. There is a purity, a tenderness, an exquisite simplicity in these pictures of peasant life which remind one of Hans Christian Andersen. Nothing can be more pathetic than the story of "Toni," the first in the volume. In fact, there is a touch of pathos in all the author's work, for she sympathizes deeply with the poor people who have so hard a struggle to live, and especially with the children, who have to begin to help almost in their infancy.

Stables, Gordon, M.D. On special service: a tale of life at sea. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, [1887.] 4+362 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
The author of "The cruise of the Snowbird;" "Stanley Grahame;" "From pole to pole," etc., wrote this story for The Boys' Own Paper. The hero is a Scotch boy whom his mother destined for the church, but an old sailor uncle imbued him with a love of the sea, procured him a commission, and started him in the English navy at the age of thirteen. Life in the training-ships, and several important naval engagements are graphically described.

Pt. 1 is devoted to organization; 2, to saving the young; 3, to religious meetings; 4, social meetings; 5, pastor's aids; 6, financial. Under "financial" the author has incorporated "How to pay church debts, and how to keep churches out of debt," a useful little book now out of print.

Standard Hoyle (The): a complete guide and reliable authority upon all games of chance or skill now played in the United States, N. Y., Excelsior Pub. House, [1887.] c. 2+ whether of native origin or foreign introduction. 532 p. D. cl., $1.50; bds., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

The publishers claim for this Hoyle that it is one of the most complete ever published, containing a greater number of games in actual usage, with the explanations in regard to the playing of them, than any other work of the kind. A faithful endeavor has certainly been made to present all the best known games of cards, thirty-five new games popular in some portion of the country appearing, with the other well-known games of skill and chance. The explanations of how the various games are to be played are very full, and well illustrated with diagrams and pictures of cards.

Stanley, Arthur Penrhyn, D.D. Historical memorials of Westminster Abbey. 1st Amer. ed., from the 6th London ed., with the author's final revisions. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. 3 v., 41+239; 8+214; 8+302 p. O. hf. cl., $7.50; hf. cf., $12.50; full cf., or mor., $18.

In this work, full of researches as interesting to Americans as Englishmen, the late Dean of Westminster aims to illustrate the history of the Abbey by memorials similar to those he published in former years in connection with Canterbury Cathedral. The foundation of the Abbey, the pageants which have taken place there from time immemorial, the coronations, marriages, funerals, etc., with a full account of their historical meaning and also a description of the graves of royal personages there buried, fill the first volume. The second and third are devoted to a history of the monuments and to the various additions and changes made in the Abbey before and since the reformation. While strictly following the author's arrangement, this edition is issued in three volumes instead of one, as in England. It also contains in addition to the illustrations of the original edition three etchings. The work is a very handsome one. The page is small, margin generous, type large, and all other mechanical details all that can be desired.

These recollections are only just now given to the trade, the first and second editions published in 1885 and '86 having been sold privately by Mr. Stanton. The present edition has been very much enlarged, making the volume three times its original size. The book is rich in curious information and anecdotes about celebrated men in politics, letters, law, journalism, etc. Also gives a clear account of the different political movements that Mr. Stanton witnessed in the course of a long life.

Stevenson, Rob. L: Memoir of Fleeming
Jenkin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. 6+
302 p. D. cl., $1.

Mr. Jenkin occupied the chair of engineering in the University of Edinburgh when young Stevenson was a student in that institution. Thus began an acquaintance that ripened into the warmest friendship, and continued until Mr. Jenkin's death a few years ago. His character and temperament were of different fibre from most men's. Descended, as the author says, from "the wild Jacksons and facile Jenkins," his nature was essentially noble and outspoken, and retained in his mature years all the generous impetuosity and intellectual ardor of youth. His profession before he entered the University of Edinburgh, ocean telegraphy, took him much upon the sea, and gave him many difficult problems, in the solution of which he was always eager to make art and science coöperate. Mr. Stevenson sketches his character with the touch of a master, and with sympathetic insight, telling us incidentally much about his own youthful thoughts.

If we except "A child's garden of verses" this is the first volume of poetry from the celebrated author of "The strange case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and other popular works of fiction and description. The dedication to the numerous physicians who have attended him in his search through the world for health is quite pathetic. The poems are exquisite in finish and redolent of the fields and woods and sea. A number are in Scotch dialect. The book is well printed on fine paper and daintily bound in brown paper and cloth.

Stewart, J: H. A digest of the decisions of the courts of law and equity of the state of New Jersey, from 1876 to 1887, embracing all the cases reported in the regular reports of the state, and also in the reports for the district and circuit courts of the U. Stickney, J. H. A second reader. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1886. c. 6+248 p. il. D. (Classics for children.) bds., 50 c.

Follows the same general plan as the First Reader. Stories, continued through several lessons, are occasionally introduced to prepare for the reading of books; classic tales occur at frequent intervals both for their own sake and the simplicity and purity of their diction; the poetry is chosen in large part for such memory exercises as will make it a permanent possession; love of nature and interest in natural history are encouraged, and lessons of life and conduct taught insensibly by healthful example.

Stickney, J. H. A third reader. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1886. c. 7+328 p. il. S. (Classics for children.) cl., 55 c.

The selections are mainly literary in character, and in the narrative style. The poetry is chosen in large part from standard authors. The aim to lead pupils to the reading of books, both in poetry and prose, shows itself in fewer short, disconnected lessons, and greater continuity of subjects.

Stillman, W. J. On the track of Ulysses; together with an excursion in quest of the so-called Venus of Melos: two studies in archæology made during a cruise among the Greek Islands. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 8+106 p. il. Q., $4.

Reproduces, with additions, three articles under the above title which appeared in the Century Magazine, and also an article on the Venus of Melos. The articles embody in a very distinct form a great deal of archæological research by the author, not merely restating what other observers had written, but based on his own observations in the several localities described. The volume is handsomely gotten up in holiday style, with the original illustrations which appeared in the Century.

Stinde, Julius. The Buchholz family: sketch[illegible] of Berlin life, pt. 2; from the 42d Germ[illegible] ed., by L. Dora Schmitz. N. Y., C: Scribner[illegible] Sons, 1887. 2+243 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The spiteful revelations and malicious remarks of M[illegible]n. Buchholz concerning her friends and family are c[illegible]on-tinued in this volume, giving an additional picture [illegible]e of middle-class German life. The characters of the first p[illegible]part reappear, but there is no regular story, each sket[illegible]etch being a separate study complete in itself.

Stinde, Julius. Frau Wilhelmine; the conclu[illegible]ding part of the "Buchholz family;" tr. by Harriet F. Powell. N. Y., C: Scribner's So[illegible]ns, 1887. 2+267 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Just the same chatty narrative of homely details [illegible] of every-day life. Mrs. Buchholz celebrates her silver w[illegible]ed-ding, has great trouble with her servants, describe[illegible]s a ladies' coffee-party, winter evenings, building proje[illegible]cts, the return of her children from school, various little [illegible] tiffs with her dear Carl and the final reconciliation all ro[illegible] und and the settling down in the quiet home. A very plea[illegible]ant farewell appearance of the Buchholz family.

Stinde, Julius. Woodland tales. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 4+199 p. D. cl., $1.

Stockbridge, J: C., comp. The Anthony memorial: a catalogue of the Harris collection of American poetry with biographical and bibliographical notes. Providence, R. I., [Dr. J. C. Stockbridge,] 1886. 320 p. por. O. pap., $5; cl., $5.50; hf. mor. or full shp., $7; Q. in sheets, $10; cl., $11; full tky. mor., $15.

A catalogue under authors of what is said to be the largest collection of American poetry extant. The collection was begun by Albert G. Greene, of Providence, R. I., and continued by Caleb Fiske Harris, of Warwick, R. I., and H: Bowen Anthony, of Coventry, R. I. Mr. Anthony afterwards presented the collection to the library of Brown University, where it now is. The collection is certainly quite a remarkable one, the bibliographical notes making the catalogue of unusual value. The work is very handsomely printed.

Stockton, Frank R. The bee-man of Orn, and other fanciful tales. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 3+193 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Contains besides the story which gives the title "The griffin and the minor canon;" "Old Pipes and the Dryad;" "The queen's museum;" "Christmas before last;" "Prince Hassak's march;" "The battle of the third cousins;" "The banished king;" and "The philopena." This makes the third of the bound volumes of Mr. Stockton's stories. "The bee-man of Orn" has a germ of philosophy as well as a touch of satire in it. Most of the stories are elfin fancies and droll extravaganzas, and Mr. Stockton is at his best in them all.

Stockton, Frank R. The hundredth man. N. Y., Century Co., [1887.] c. '86, '87. 2+432 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Has been running as serial this year in the Century Magazine. "It had come to the hero, Horace Stratford, that in every hundred books on a kindred subject, in every hundred crimes of a similiar kind, in every hundred events of a like nature, and in every hundred men who may come within one's cognizance, there is one book, crime, circumstance, or man which stands up above and distinct from the rest, preëminent in the fact that no one of the others is or could have been like it. Horace Stratford's immediate occupation was the discovery of a hundredth man among his present friends and associates." The scene shifts between a country farm and a New York restaurant, managed by a proprietor who aims to keep incognito. The author's inexhaustible humor makes some of the situations very telling. The heroine has profited by the "higher education of women." Unselfishness is the distinguishing characteristic of "the hundredth man," and Mr. Stratford discovers him nearer home than he had looked for him.

Storer, F: H. Agriculture in some of its relations with chemistry. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 2 v., 9+529; 7+409 p. O. cl., $5.
Written in the interest of persons fond of rural affairs, and of students of agriculture. The book makes no special appeal to chemists or to students of chemistry. It is based upon lectures, suggestive rather than encyclopedic, which have been delivered annually by the author at the Bussey Institution during the past sixteen years (1871–1887). These lectures, which have been many times altered and revised, were addressed to small classes of students of two distinct types, viz., first, young farmers and sons of farmers, familiar with the manual practice of agricultural operations, who were desirous of studying some of the sciences which bear most immediately upon the art of farming; and secondly, city-bred men, often graduates of the academic department of the University, who intended either to establish themselves upon farms or to occupy country-seats, or to become landscape-gardeners.

Stories from the Persian: Abdûlla of Khorassan; Ahmed the cobbler. Cambridge, C: W. Sever, [1887.] 79 p. S. pap., 60 c.
These tales are taken from Sir John Malcolm's "Sketches of Persia," published in 1827, a book which Prof. F. J. Child calls "one of the most agreeable books in the English language." They were recited to Malcolm when he was on a mission to Persia, by story-tellers who enjoyed royal favor. Translated into Malcolm's flowing English these Eastern legends lose nothing of their weird combination of simplicity and splendor.

Of comparatively recent English editions, that of 1836, with its ponderous memoir by the poet's worthy relative, the Rev. Alfred Suckling, is somewhat scanty, omitting many verses which are given here; while that of 1874, on the contrary, is objectionable because of its retention of many lines and whole poems which are altogether unfit for modern readers, and which do not appear in this volume."—Preface.

The author of "Aldersyde" again tells a story of beautiful Scotch scenery and Scotch people who speak their vernacular. The birth of twin boys costs their mother's life. The father, persuaded that his wife has only "gone before," takes comfort in his boys and brings them up, one to be a clergyman, the other a farmer. Both show scholastic tastes and the farmer becomes a reporter and afterwards an author. The two girls who play their parts in the brothers' lives are exquisitely pictured. The "Gates of Eden" would seem to be the state of happiness in which the reader leaves the chief actors at the close.

The scene of this poem is Britain in mythical days, "Locrine" being one of the kings of that undated period. Mr. Stoddard in the Mail and Express says of the work and its author: "It resembles nothing that he has ever done, nothing that anybody has ever done, but it is a legitimate verse-growth, and the one above others, as it seems to us, which is best adapted to its dim, shadowy, remote subject, which is neither wholly myth nor wholly history, but the curious blending of both which we call tradition. . . . We have not thought highly of Mr. Swinburne since he took to writing rondels, songs of springtides and so on, but if he ever was a noble poet, as we all believed, he is a noble poet again in 'Locrine.'"

Symonds, J: Addington. Renaissance in Italy: The Catholic reaction. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 2 v., 12+430; 6+433 p. O. cl., $7.

The history of social, intellectual, and moral conditions in Italy during the seventy years of the sixteenth century which followed Charles V.'s coronation at Bologna, forms the subject of this work. It is what the author calls "a logically-necessitated supplement" to the five former volumes of the "Renaissance in Italy," namely, "The age of the despots," "The revival of learning," "The fine arts," and "Italian literature" (2 v.). While the treatment is analogous to that used in the early volumes, Mr. Symonds found it "needful to enter more minutely into details regarding facts and institutions connected with the main theme of national culture." The Catholic revival was by its nature reactionary. "In order to explain its influences, I have," he says, "been compelled to analyze the position of Spain in the Italian peninsula, the conduct of the Tridentine Council, the specific organization of the Holy Office and the Company of Jesus, and the state of society upon which those forces were brought to bear." A list of books covering two pages indicates the most important sources consulted and referred to.

On arriving at that place he boarded his uncle's yacht, and, acting upon impulse, concealed his identity and shipped as a sailor. In discharging his duties on board the Au-revoir he incurred the displeasure of Percy Prettyman, who discharges him. This act of Percy's brings about strange complications, but in the end it enables Flagler to render his relatives an inestimable service.

Theophilus Trent is a young schoolmaster from the East, who settles in North-western Michigan in its early days. His experience as the principal of the Bodkins Institution is extremely amusing and also full of information. Theophilus' courtship, marriage, and wedding-tour are pleasing episodes in the narrative, and we only take leave of him when ill-health forces him to return to the East and forever take leave of Oak Openings. Scenes from early life in the settlements give a special interest to the story.

Rev. C: F. Deems, the pastor of the Church of the Strangers, contributes some very interesting matter to this work, especially the account of the manner in which the church was bought for him by the late Commodore Vanderbilt. Besides the history of the church there are many valuable hints and suggestions to the clergy culled from the church's experience. The reader will find the topics, such as the "Prayer and mothers' meeting," "Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor," "Sisters of the stranger," "Internal economy," "The Sunday-school," etc., etc., thoroughly treated.

Taylor, U. Ashworth. The city of Sar[illegible]as. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1887. 4+244 p. S. (Leisure hour ser., no. 208.) cl., $1.

It is not expressly stated whether the scene is Fr[illegible]nce or England, nor which queen held court at the pa[illegible]ace while Morgan, the heroine, was lady-in-waiting. Mo[illegible]gan loved Aimon, who deserted her. Noel, a misshapen [illegible]an, who played the violin divinely, loves Morgan, and in her own words "brought her soul into being, but could not nourish the pure creation of his hands." The book [illegible]s a poetical study of woman's love. The conversations be-tween Morgan and Dorotheus, the student, are fu[illegible]l of thought. He is an ideal character. "The city of the Sarras," "the spiri ual place," is "wherever man's spirit lives in its purity," after overcoming all that is o[illegible] the earth, earthy."

The material is simple and usual enough, still the writer has succeeded in making a strong, pathetic story, full of local color and careful, striking pictures of the people of the lonely, remote Shetland Islands. The story is told by Thomas Jack, the parish clergyman, who comes a stranger to the parish of Eastwick in his six-and-twentieth year, some forty years ago. A secret marriage and a murder are the leading incidents—the young girl "Britta" being the heroine throughout. With 8 page il. by W. Lockhart Boyle.

Uniform in style with "The day dream." Both text and engravings have decorative frames in flowers and arabesque of exquisite design from the pencil of Charles Copeland. They are printed in a delicate tint in the new style of monochrome shown in "The day dream." Over forty full-page pictures illustrate the familiar story of Enoch Arden. Edmund H. Garrett, the artist, visited the Isle of Wight, where the scene of the poem is laid, for the express purpose of taking sketches on the spot. His landscapes all bear the impress of faithfulness to nature, while the numerous figures are extremely strong and graphic. Everything has been done to make the volume one of the exceptional ones of the season.

Tennyson, Alfred, (Lord.) Enoch Arden, and other poems; ed., with notes, by W. J. Rolfe. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 5–166 p. il. S. cl., 75 c.

About half of the text of this book consists of "Enoch Arden" and the two longest of the poems—"Aylmer's field" and "Sea dreams"—published with it in 1864. The other half is made up of selections representing fifty-six years of Tennyson's literary career—from 1830, when "Mariana" appeared in the first volume to which he put his name, down to 1886, when the new "Locksley hall" was given to the world. In the notes the various readings of the poems have been given. With the editor's own comments, extracts from the criticisms of others are embraced.

Thackeray, W: M. A collection of letters of Thackeray, 1847–1855; with pors. and reproductions of letters and drawings. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. '86, '87. 8+189 p. O. cl., $2.50.

The letters which form this collection were written by Thackeray to Mrs. Brookfield and her husband, the late Rev. W. H. Brookfield, from about 1847, and continuing during many years of intimate friendship, from the time Thackeray first lived in London, and he was in especial need of sympathy on account of the breaking up of his home and the loss of his wife through the malady which had fallen upon her. "Vanity Fair" was not yet written when these letters begun, but he had attained fame the world through before the correspondence ceased. The letters are amusing, tender, and full of clever hits at persons and events. They show Thackeray at his best, and as we have had few chances of knowing him. The volume is in large clear type on fine white paper, with wide margins and uncut edges. The facsimile of letters and reproductions of drawings are interesting.

Thomas, Miss Bertha. Elizabeth's fortune: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1887. 76 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 564.) pap., 20 c.

The heroine begins life selling oranges outside the British Museum in London; her honesty in restoring a pocket-book dropped by its owner makes her a member of the household of the Rev. Barnabas Dulley, curate of St. Hilary's, Bloomsbury. Here, as maid-of-all work she succeeds in picking up a little education and knowledge of the world. These advantages, and her good looks, and some natural talent, make her quite a success on the stage to which she finally drifts. A great deal of space is given to life behind the curtain. Its little bickerings and jealousies, the successes attained only through hard work, the strange characters of the green-room recruited from all classes, are admirably depicted. A special freshness is a characteristic of the book. The author has both wit and humor. Elizabeth's fortune is concerned with other things, however, beside the stage.

Thompson, Sir H. Diet in relation to age and activity. From the 10th English ed. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1888 [1887.] 5+94 p. S. cl., 50 c.

A republication from the Nineteenth Century. The author does not lay down strict rules of diet suitable for all alike, but shows good, strong common-sense in his advice to all to study well the habits of life and work, mental and bodily, also the age and personal peculiarities of people to whom rules of diet are laid down. He believes that almost all people eat too much and exercise too little. He also thinks far too much meat is eaten, especially by those past middle life. He speaks strongly upon the misuse of bodies and brains by a large proportion of humanity.

This volume is a criticism of that portion of Dr. Hall's book. The author is Professor of Sciences in Garfield University, Wichita, Kansas. He says: "The book, of which this little volume is a review, is written with remarkable volubility and in utter disregard of all logical arrangement. . . . Dr. Hall's fury against 'current science' is very great." Appenxid giving a thesis on "The measurement of chemical affinity," with tables etc.

Mr. H. G. O. Blake makes his selections on the plan he has followed in "Early spring in Massachusetts" and "Summer," the two books already published from the journal of Thoreau bequeathed to Mr. Blake by Thoreau's sister Sophia. He brings together passages under the same day of the month in different years, hoping "to make an interesting picture of the progress of the seasons in Thoreau's year." It was not merely nature in the ordinary sense, plants, animals, the landscape, which attracted Thorean. He continually manifests a human interest in natural objects, and thoughts of an ideal friendship are forever haunting him. The season covered is from Dec. 11 to Feb. 23, during the years from 1841 to 1861.

Tilley, W: Ja. Masters of the situation; or, some secrets of success and power. Chic., S. C. Griggs & Co., 1887. c. 7+338 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author discourses charmingly in a dozen chapters on "Promptness," "Individuality," "Application," "The single eye," "Habit," "Health," "Enthusiasm," "Manners," "Wait," "Opportunity," "Genius," and of "Masters of the situation."

Tinseau, Léon de. Hélène [Madame Villefran jeune]; tr. by J. E. Simpson. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1886. 3–208 p. D. (Library of continental authors.) pap., 35 c.

The action alternates between Paris and Smyrna, affording a glimpse both of French and Oriental luxuriousness. The story is one of love and of simple, every-day incidents—the hero going through a few adventures of travel before winning his lady-love. Translated from the 24th edition.

Todd, Rev. Rob. W. Methodism of the Peninsula; or, sketches of notable characters and events in the history of Methodism in the Maryland and Delaware Peninsula; introduction by Rev. J: Hurst, D.D. Phil., Methodist Episcopal Book Rooms, 1886. 336 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Toland, Mrs. M. B. M. Eudora; a tale of love; il. by H. Siddons Mowbray and W. Hamilton Gibson; with decorations in text by L. S. Ipsen. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. O. cl. or vellum, $2.50; ivory surface or mor., $3.

Eudora is a beautiful young girl who has a sweet voice and whose favorite song is Tennyson's "Brook." Attracted by her singing, the hero first meets her and then begins a "tale of love" that is told by her girl-friend. H. Siddons Mowbray and W. H. Gibson have illustrated the poem and L. S. Ipsen has furnished some of his decorations as head-pieces. It is handsomely bound in the same style as "Ægle and the elf," by the same author, published last season.

Tolstoi, Count Leon N. The Cossacks: a tale of the Caucasus in 1852; from the Russian by Eugene Schuyler. Rev. ed. N. Y., W: S. Gottsberger, 1887. c. tr. 6+313 p. S. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Tolstoi, Count Leon. In pursuit of happiness; from the Russian, by Mrs. Aline Delano. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. tr. 2+193 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Four stories of peasant life in Russia; each one points a moral showing that happiness is surest found in living correct lives and doing good to others. The names of the stories are: "Where there is love there is God," "How much land a man needs," "The two pilgrims," and "Illyás."

Tolstoi, Count Leon N. The invaders, and other stories; from the Russian by Nathan Haskell Dole. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. tr. 3+343 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Tolstoi, Count Leon. Iván Ilyitch, and other stories; from the Russian by Nathan Haskell Dole. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. 8+311 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"The short stories here presented form about one-half of the twelfth volume of Count Tolstoi's collected writings. None of them date back more than three years. They represent the latest phase in the evolution of the author's peculiar views. . . . With the exception of 'The death of Iván Ilyitch,' which is a sombre and powerful study of the insidious progress of fatal disease, as well as a study in religious philosophy, all of these fifteen tales were written as tracts for the people, illustrated in many cases with quaint wood-cuts."—Preface.

Tolstoi, Count Leon N. My confession; [also,] The spirit of Christ's teaching; from the Russian. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1887.] c. tr. 9+242 p. D. cl., $1.

This work, written in 1879, forms an introduction to the author's "My religion." It is a confession of his religious experience, and of the effect it had upon his life. He went from belief to the most utter unbelief, and again back to orthodoxy; but out of this latter state grew the phase of mind which he describes in "My religion," which he claims to be the essence of Christ's teachings, though the churches do not accept it as such. "The spirit of Christ's teaching," with which the volume closes, is a commentary on the essence of the gospel.

Tolstoi, Count Léon. Katia; from the Fren[illegible]ch Authorised ed. N. Y., W: S. Gottsberger, 1[illegible]87 c. tr. 2+193 p. S. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

Katia is a young Russian girl and an orphan. [illegible]The story opens in the old country-house of Pokrovski, w[illegible]here Katia, Sonia her sister, and Macha the governess are [illegible]still living some months after the mother's death. Ser[illegible]gius Mikallovitch, a friend of their father and their g[illegible]uar-dian, visits them here. He is much older than Katia, [illegible]but he takes the young girl's fancy, and they finally m[illegible]rry. Though loving each other sincerely they both waver w[illegible]hen exposed to the temptations of the fashionable w[illegible]rld, Sergius through jealousy, Katia through a liking [illegible]for another and younger man. What would seem at first t[illegible]o be the beginning of a tragedy ends in a renewal of vow[illegible]s, a calmer domestic affection taking the place of the old passion.

Tolstoi, Count Leon N. A Russian proprietor and other stories; from the Russian by Nathan Haskell Dole. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1887. c. tr. 5+349 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Consists of early stories of Tolstoi's written between 1852 and 1859. That which gives its name to the volume is a portion of a novel planned but never finished. As it is undoubtedly autobiographical, besides containing some vivid character sketches, it has been included. A marvellous account of a gambler's career, a pathetic and at the same time amusing experience with a Tyrolese singer in Lucerne, a powerful study of an insane musician, are among the points of interest in "Lucerne," "Recollections of a scorer." "Albert," "Two hussars," "Three deaths, and "A prisoner in the Caucasus."

Tolstoi, Count Leon. Sebastopol; from the French by Frank D. Millet; with introduction by W. D. Howells. N. Y., Harper, 1887. c. 3–241 p. por. S. cl., 75 c.

W. D. Howells in his introduction gives the key-note to the purpose of Tolstoi's various works. He says: "Then I came to 'Peace and war,' that great assertion of the sufficiency of common men in all crises, and the insufficiency of heroes; I found some chapters in the 'Scenes at the siege of Sebastopol,' and I read them with a yet keener sense of this truth." The "scenes" given took place in December, 1854, and in May and August, 1855. The descriptions of the hospitals and sufferings of the wounded, their brave heroism and love of "our cause," are written with Tolstoi's pre-Raphaelite pen. He exclaims, "Russia will long preserve the sublime traces of the epoch of Sebastopol, in which the Russian people were the heroes."

Tolstoi, Count Leo. What people live by; tr. by Mrs. Aline Delano. Bost., D. Lothrop & Co., [1887.] 5–83 p. il. O. cl., $1.

Tolstoi, Count Leon N. What to do? Thoughts evoked by the census of Moscow; from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1887. c. tr. 4+273 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Two thousand young men are employed in taking the census of Moscow. The author insists that "all our directors and enumerators should join to their business of the census a task of assistance—of work in the interest of the good of these people, who, in our opinion, are in need of assistance, and with whom we shall come in contact. The object of a census is scientific. A census is a sociological investigation, and the object of the science of sociology is the happiness of the people." The book contains a powerful chapter addressed to women, "in whose hands, more than in those of all others, lies the salvation of the world."

Tomkinson, E. M. Sarah Robinson, Agnes Weston, Mrs. Meredith. N. Y., Cassell & Co., 1887. 128 p. pors. D. (The world's workers ser.) cl., 50 c.

Short popular biographies of three Englishwomen, whose lives were spent in good works. The first was known as "the soldier's friend," the second as "the sailor's friend," and the third as "the prisoner's friend."

Towle, G: Makepeace. The nation in a nutshell: a rapid outline of American history. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 4–147 p. T. cl., 50 c.

As the title describes it, "a rapid outline of American history." Each chapter covers a period—the concluding ones relating to the presidents, and the progress made in literature, in the arts, in science and invention, and the political changes.

Towle, G: Makepeace. Young people's history of Ireland. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1887. c. '86. 7+314 p. il. S. cl., $1.50.

The introduction by John Boyle O'Reilly dwells upon the need of a good history of Ireland for American readers, among whom so large a Celtic element exists. He hopes in time to find Irish history taught in American schools with the history of other nationalities. That it is ignored in English schools is not singular, but it would seem necessary that the young of other countries should know something of the history, beauty and wealth, ethnology, philology, geography, and romantic legends of one of the most discussed and most abused countries on the face o' the globe. Mr. Towle's style is popular and attractive. He brings the story down to to-day, including the latest movements under Gladstone and Parnell for Home Rule.

Towne, E: Owings. Aphorisms of the three threes. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1887. c. 2–38 p. D. cl., $1.

The title of the book is derived from the fact that its contents are made up of the utterances of the members of a small club of nine Chicago business men at their meetings, held "every ninth night after the first night of each and every of the nine months following the ninth month of the year. The members are "seated in threes at three-legged tables." The 162 aphorisms have been gathered from their after-dinner conversations.

Townsend, Virginia F. Life of Washington. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1887. c. 2–267 p. por. and il. D. cl., $1.25.

This brief biography claims to be "a woman's way of looking at George Washington." While adhering strictly to the truths of history, Miss Townsend has endeavored to set the great scenes and crises in the career of Washington in a picturesque and dramatic form before her readers.

Trotter, Ada M. Bledisloe; or, Aunt Pen's American nieces; an international story. Bost., Cupples & Hurd, 1887. c. 6+324 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Bledisloe is a country village in the western part of England. The rector's family, consisting of a weak, extravagant wife and nine children, and two young girls who come from America to establish their claim to some English property, are the characters. For the sake of saving her father from disgrace the eldest daughter of the rector decides to marry a rich old nabob, but courage fails on her wedding-day and the story ends with hopes of a happier union. English manners, scenery, and amusements are well described.

Trowbridge, J. T. Peter Budstone, the boy who was hazed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1888 [1887.] 4–187 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

"Captain Sam," "Pete's" younger brother, is as much the hero as "Pete." His untiring devotion to poor "Pete," who had lost his wits through a brain-fever brought on by a brutal "hazing" received at college, is quite pathetic. The Budstone family are extremely poor—the result of a series of misfortunes for which they are not to blame. The neighbors attempt to put "Pete" in the insane asylum. He is quite harmless, and dearly loved by his family, so "Sam" attempts to hide him from the authorities. The boys' adventurous journey and their meeting with the man who had been the cause of "Pete's" misfortune are full of excitement.

Trowbridge, Oliver R. Illinois and the nation; how they are governed. For the use of schools, [etc.] Chic., A. Flanagan, 1887. c. 187 p. D. cl., 75 c.

True stories of American wars, from old records and family traditions. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 5–259 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Twelve stories which have been written by several different authors. They deal with the Indian wars, the Revolutionary war, and the war of 1812. The incidents have mostly been gathered from the traditions current in the towns along the shores of Connecticut and Massachusetts. Each story is illustrated.

Tuckerman, Arthur Lyman. A short history of architecture; with il. by the author. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 8+168 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"I have written this short history of architecture to meet the requirements of those who wish to become acquainted with the main facts without having to read voluminous works. . . . The plan I have adopted has been to trace the origin of each style, its characteristic points, and its connection with those which preceded and succeeded it, without introducing technical terms or any but the most important dates. . . . I hope this volume may be of interest to the general reader and may find its way to schools."—Preface.

*Tufts, J: W., and Holt, H. E. Normal music readers: Introductory third reader. Bost., Silver, Rogers & Co., 1887. cl., 50 c.

Tulloch, J:, D.D. Sundays at Balmoral: sermons preached before Her Majesty the Queen in Scotland. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. 6+224 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

Dr. Tulloch's son is the editor of this volume of sermons, 12 in number, found among his father's papers, and preached before Queen Victoria at Balmoral. They are earnest, unsectarian sermons, each carrying a special message or lesson, as the titles show—"Christ and the higher nature;" "Loving-kindness;" "Christian Agnosticism;" "Individual responsibility;" "Practical religion," etc. The portrait of Dr. Tulloch shows a very attractive, sympathetic face.

Tulloch, W. W. The story of the life of Queen Victoria told for boys and girls all over the world; rev. by Her Majesty. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1887. 5+277 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is the son of Principal Tulloch, who was for many years one of Her Majesty's chaplains in Scotland, and is himself minister of Maxwell Parish, Glasgow, and editor of Sunday Talk. A number of disconnected events in the history of the Queen are told in very simple language for boys and girls all over the world. The book has been revised by the Queen, and the author has since added a chapter giving a résumé of progress during the fifty years of her reign.

Tupper, F: Allison. Moonshine: a story of the reconstruction period. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [1887.] c. '84. 233 p. S. (Lovell's lib., no. 895.) pap., 20 c.

Two gentlemen of Gotham; by C. & C. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 3+344 p. S. cl., $1.

Percy Aylmer and Sydney Harleston belong to the most fashionable New York circle. They are the heroes of this story, and though their adventures include some scenes of gaming and deep drinking, they are on the whole innocuous. Love and flirting occupy a large part in the story, with descriptions of luncheons, dinners, and receptions of the most gorgeous kind. A Russian prince, and two Wall St. kings, add interest and variety to the scene.

Two gentlemen of Boston: a novel. Bos[illegible]t., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 3-481 p. D. [illegible]l., $1.50.

"The story concerns an orphan girl who is ill-trea[illegible]ted by her father's second wife, whom she believes for a l[illegible]ng time her real mother. This woman deserts her, [illegible]and eventually reappears as a celebrated actress, when [illegible]the true story of the girl's parentage is revealed. The hero[illegible]ine has a pair of lovers—the 'two gentlemen of Bosto[illegible]n,' one of whom is good and noble, and the other a fa[illegible]cinating, heartless man of the world, who is capable of l[illegible]oving no one but himself. . . . The story shows, in m[illegible]any places, the result of the author's reading of other no[illegible]vel-ists, though there is no servile imitation in any c[illegible]ase. One of the characters bears a resemblance to R[illegible]ose Dartle, in 'David Copperfield,' and here and there we have a slight suggestion of 'Jane Eyre.'"—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

Tyler, Moses Coit. Patrick Henry. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 8+368 p. S. (American statesmen ser.) cl., $1.25.

Heretofore Wirt's "Life of Patrick Henry" has been the most elaborate chronicle extant of Virginia's famous orator and patriot. Founded largely upon tradition and recollections of old people it is now admitted to have been on many points erroneous. One of the leading objects of Prof. Tyler's work seems to be to correct the many misstatements of Wirt. This he is able to do with authority, having had placed at his disposal, an unusually large collection of unpublished letters and manuscripts besides having the vast amount of material concerning Henry, which has appeared in print, since Wirt finished his book in 1817. The heroic figure with which every school boy is acquainted loses none of its romance or glory in the hands of the present biographer.

Tymms, T. Vincent. The mystery of God: a consideration of some intellectual hindrances to faith. 2d ed. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1887. 14+358 p. O. cl., $2.50.

An endeavor to consider the chief intellectual hindrances to Christian faith which are prevalent in our day. The book does not give an exposition of Christian doctrines. At the outset the author disposes of "the most fundamental objections to Christianity and thence ascends, step by step, until at length objections which proceed from Theists who are 'almost Christians' are considered." Several pages upon animal suffering have been added to the former edition of this work.

The third volume in the series in which the "Standard operas" and "Standard oratorios" have been its predecessors. The same method has been followed in the arrangement and presentation of the author's scheme. Short sketches of the music and stories of the cantatas are presented, together with biographies of their composers. The sketches are prefaced by a comprehensive study of the cantata in its various forms, from its early simple recitative or aria style down to its present elaborate construction. Particular attention has been paid to cantatas by American composers.

Viola Rydall was always on the lookout for romantic adventure, but she never had this ambition gratified until she arrived at Lulham Market, where the strange story of the village dancing-master and the initials V. R. on her valise deluded the people into believing she was Queen Victoria travelling incognita. Viola had reasons for continuing this farce, and upon her action entirely the interest of the story depends, although the reader will be amused as well at the part Paul Grayling plays.

Van Dyke, H:, D.D. The story of the Psalms. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. 6+259 p. D. cl., $1.50.

After a chapter devoted to the collected Psalms considered as the Hebrew hymn-book, a compilation of songs to be used at worship, written at various periods by various authors, the writer gives an analysis of eighteen of the most universally read Psalms, aiming "to bring them in close connection with the men who wrote them—men of like passions and sins and trials and hopes and aspirations with ourselves." Contains a list of authorities consulted.

Van Dyke, J: C. Principles of art. Pt. 1: Art in history; Pt. 2: Art in theory. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1887. c. 291 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author is librarian of the Sage Library, New Brunswick, N. J., and was formerly editor of The Studio. He says art is but an index of the age in which it is produced. He divides art into three stages. In the first art is "imitative, decorative, or symbolic;" in the second, "classical and symmetrical;" in the third "emotional, intellectual, and individual." The treatment is popular and avoids scientific terminology. It will interest artists by its peculiar views and the intelligent reader by its condensed history, apt ideas of art, and graphic style.

The pioneer church belonged to the denomination of "The Disciples of Christ," and was founded in the county of Sommerset, in West Virginia, in 1817. This sect has no creed but the Bible. It has always worked hard for the cause of education. Its founder was Alexander Campbell, and its members are still known as Campbellites. President Garfield, Judge Black, and many well-known men were devoted to the interests of this denomination.

Annals of Augusta county, Virginia, with reminiscences illustrative of the vicissitudes of its pioneer settlers ; biographical sketches of citizens locally prominent, and of those who have founded families in the Southern and Western States ; a diary of the war, 1861–'65; and a chapter on reconstruction. Richmond, Va., [J. W. Randolph & English,] 1886. c. 7+374 p. maps, O. cl., $2.50.
The basis of these annals was prepared as a contribution to the "Historical and geographical atlas of Augusta county," issued by Waterman, Watkins & Co., of Chicago. This augmented result is intended as well to correct former errors as to relate the history more fully from the first settlement of the county in 1732 to 1871. The author is a member of the Virginia Historical Society. The work is a dignified presentation of history, interestingly written, and beautifully printed. A full index is added.

Waite, Arthur E: The real history of the Rosicrucians, founded on their own manifestoes, and on facts and documents collected from the writings of initiated brethren. N. Y., J. W. Bouton, 1888 [1887.] 8+446 p. D. cl., $2.50.
The author claims that the facts and documents of the Rosicrucians have hitherto been absolutely unknown to English readers, although the literature connected with the subject is both varied and extensive. He has therefore "essayed to collect the mass of material which exists for the elucidation of this curious problem of European history and to depict the mysterious brotherhood as they are revealed in their own manifestoes." His researches have been extensive and have enabled him to give either in full or abridged the contents of innumerable tracts and ms. bearing upon the subject. Among these are translations of the "Fama Fraternitatis" and the "Confessio Fraternitatis," from which are deduced the religious opinion of the Rosicrucian fraternity.

The first edition of this work was published about 15 years ago. This edition contains the general introduction by Calvin E. Stowe, D.D., and a new introduction to the Chautauqua edition by H. B. Ridgaway, D.D. The work is acknowledged as a strong weapon against religious scepticism.

Walker, Jerome, M.D. Health lessons: a primary book. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 194 p. il. D. cl., 56 c.

In this little book the aim has been to teach health-subjects to young children in a truthful and interesting way, and by somewhat different methods than those usually employed. While there is special teaching as to the effects of alcoholic stimulants and of narcotics upon the human system, they are presented in such a way, in connection with other subjects, as is believed will appeal most forcibly to the imagination and the reasoning powers of children, and leave the strongest impressions upon the mind as to the evils attending the use of these things. The lessons have been tested in ten-minute talks and reviews to the primary classes of the Brooklyn Training-School for Teachers.

Wallingford is supposed to be one of the suburbs of Philadelphia. A young architect and a young physician with ambitious aspirations are the heroes of a story which gives quite an insight into the trials and temptations which beset these young men when they come to New York City to study. The doctor's wife and the girl to whom the architect finally decides to give himself are carefully drawn characters. The time is the present hour, and many of the city news items of the day are used in shaping the plot.

Walsh, W. Pakenham, D.D. Echoes of Bible history. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 10+330 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Gives in a cheap and permanent shape a continuous account of the many recent discoveries made in Eastern lands, more especially in Chaldea, Egypt, and Palestine, which have thrown light and corroboration around the Bible narrative. The accounts and descriptions of these discoveries being for the most part either locked up in expensive volumes, or else contained in the journals of learned societies, are rendered practically inaccessible to general readers. The order that has been followed is as far as possible that of the Old Testament history from the creation to the captivity.

Walton, Mrs. O. F. Poppy's presents. N. Y., Rob. Carter & Bros. [1887.] 3–136 p. S. cl., 40 c.

The story deals principally with the helpful ways of a little girl called Poppy, who lived in Gray Friars Court, London. When her twin brothers were born she called them presents. Finally an event happened which led to Poppy's removal from the dirty court, and the story leaves her enjoying pure country air with her presents.

Ward, May Alden. Dante: a sketch of his life and works. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1887. c. 303 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"The volume is not controversial, nor is it exhaustive. There is no parade of authorities nor any attempt to pose judicially. But a penetrating and appreciative spirit pervades it throughout and admirably adapts it to the needs of those who would introduce themselves to the study of the great poet with the aid of a competent guide. At the same time the volume, not being in any sense constructed as a text-book, and requiring for its comprehension no preliminary acquaintance with the poet's works, may be read with pleasure and profit apart from any bearing upon the further study of Dante."—Commercial Advertiser. Contains a bibliography of works on Dante in English, Italian, German, and French.

"The heroine is a young girl—scarcely more than a child—who is discovered in an obscure corner of London amid some Oriental surroundings which excite the curiosity of a couple of coltish army officers. They, for the sake of a joke, sent to the house on a pretended errand of importance one of their comrades who has a reputation for being a steady-goer, and the trick succeds so well, that the soldier falls madly in love with the girl, and, to rescue her from what he believes to be perilous surroundings, he marries her on the shortest of short acquaintance, and under circumstances which would certainly have awakened his suspicions had he not been infatuated. The marriage brings a train of the most serious misfortunes with it, and one of the author's efforts has been to show the ennobling and humanizing effects of them on the heroine."—*Phila. Warfield, B: B., D.D. An introduction to the textual criticism of the New Testament. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 3–225 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Intended as a primary guide to students making their first acquaintance with the art of textual criticism as applied to the New Testament. The purpose of the book will be served, the author says, if it enables them to make a beginning, and to enter into the study of the text-books on the subject with ease and comfort to themselves. The four chapters into which it is divided treat of the matter, methods, praxis, and history of criticism.

One summer in the life of a little girl of ten, living at Cross Corners, a New England village, is the time covered by this story. Eunice is the daughter of a widow, Mrs. Keith, who has a hard struggle to earn bread for both by working at shoe-binding. A rich family who help the Keiths in their misfortunes, and a barefooted boy "Davy," who wants to be a minister, are about the only characters. Mrs. Keith is an encyclopædia of Bible texts, having one to point a lesson on every occasion. Eunice and Davy have also a wonderful acquaintance with the Testaments, illustrating all their talks with quotations.

"Has an excellent plot, conceived and developed with much power, characters well drawn and cleverly contrasted, and a steadily cumulative interest. The play is constructed on the Elizabethan model, which the author follows with skill and marked success. Mr. Warner uses blank verse with flexible ease, and his efforts show throughout a careful study of the older dramatists whose cadences and vigorous diction he imitates with the most happy results. His drama may be justly and cordially praised for its literary merits as well as for a highly creditable achievement in a direction which unfortunately finds but little encouragement."—*Bost. In three parts, each divided into three cantos, this poem in blank verse sets forth "The idea of the infinite," "The idea of God," and "The elements of personality."

The northern shore of Long Island is the scene. The characters are an unsuccessful, optimistic experimenter in chemistry; his young, beautiful, enthusiastic daughter; the rich young man of the place, who builds a factory for the sake of practising his theories of the peaceful union of labor and capital; the clergyman, the woman he loves, who has a secret in her life, and her devoted attendant, the woman-preacher, Hannah. A very pretty, peaceful love story gives all these a chance to act their respective characteristic parts.

Washburn, C. A. From poverty to competence; graduated taxation. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. 163 p. D. pap., 25 c.

The leading argument is based on the theory that, as all mankind must live on the fruits of the earth, it is but right and just that all taxes should be collected from the land in proportion to the area or productive capacity of that portion held by each individual; that the tax on the first few acres, or enough for every family to have its house and garden, should be very light, enough to distinguish the landowner from the tenant and to serve as a poll tax and qualification to vote, without regard to the sex of the owner. As the acreage is increased the rate of taxation is to be increased, so that it shall not be for the interest of any one to hold more land than can be profitably cultivated.

The thirteen verses of the thirteenth chapter of 1st Corinthians are used as headings for thirteen chapters of meditations upon their deepest meaning. Although a professed member of the P. E. Church the author recognizes the good and evil in all the organized Christian churches, and is fair in his estimate of the peculiar way in which they all fall short of working out the ideal meaning of "faith, hope, and charity."

Washburne, E. B. Recollections of a minister to France 1869-1877. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1887. c. '86, '87. 2 v., 8+331; 9+370 p. il. O. cl., $18.

The small portion of this important work which appeared in Scribner's Magazine only stimulated the appetite of readers for more. In these two handsome thick volumes, rich in portraits and illustrations, we have a thrilling story of the startling events which occurred in Paris during the eight years Mr. Washburne was the American minister. He witnessed the opening of the Franco-German war, the downfall of the empire, and the flight of Eugenie; was the only foreign minister permitted to remain in Paris during the siege, and to enter it during the Commune. The horrible scenes preceding the republic are described as only an eye-witness could describe them. The pen-pictures of the leaders are extremely graphic. The view one gets of social France in its homes and courts is unusually interesting, coming from so thorough an American as the writer.

An entertaining account of a hunting and fishing expedition through the lake lands of Canada; anecdotes of sport, experiences, and descriptions make the book a most delightful one to lovers of this kind of amusement. The author believes it will not only be enjoyed by sportsmen, but by the rising generation of boys, "who frequently find more pleasure in the perusal of books truthfully delineating the excitement of the chase than in reading those of fiction." Fully illustrated.

Wells, Kate Gannett. Miss Curtis: a sketch. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1888 [1887.] c. 3–271 p. D. cl., $1.25.

While devoting her story primarily to illustrating the odd, contradictory character of a maiden lady of Boston, "Miss Curtis," with wealth, position, and a queer pathetic story to excuse her eccentricities, the author of "About people," tells incidentally a pretty tale of which Olive Cadwallader is the heroine. The brief sketch of her young life and that of her brother "Owen" give an amusing insight into the peculiarities of the first circles of Boston. The account of Olive and Owen's childhood is unusually clever and entertaining.

Welsh, Alfred H. English masterpiece course. Chic., J: C. Buckbee & Co., 1887. c. 205 p. D. cl., 90 c.

This work provides, through reference-lists, for the study of all the representative English writers from Chaucer to Emerson, including the shaping influences of the periods in which each lived and wrote, his characteristics as a writer and as an individual, and one or more of his acknowledged masterpieces. The reference-lists are sufficiently extensive to insure the availability of the manual wherever there are colleges or public libraries.

Wenckebach, Carla, und Schrakamp, Josepha. Deutsche grammatik für amerikaner, nach einer neuen praktischen methode. 4th ed. N. Y., H: Holt & Co.; F. W. Christern; Bost., C: Schoenhof, [1887.] c. 8+291 p. D. cl., net, $1.

First issued in 1884. The authors precede in all cases the rules by preliminary examples which assist greatly in the final elucidation of the former. The book is divided into three parts, the first treating of the different parts of speech, giving all the rules; the second is devoted to the verbs; the third elucidates the principles of German syntax and construction. An appendix gives a complete list of the irregularities in the declension of nouns, and other peculiarities of the German language, and a brief statement of the law governing the new reformed method of spelling.

Werner, E., [pseud. for E. Bürstenbinder.] Saint Michael: a romance; from the German by Mrs. A. L. Wister. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1887. c. tr. '86. 3–411 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Saint Michael is the name of a lonely little Alpine parish, presided over by a saintly Catholic priest, who has taken charge of the education of Michael Steinrück, the grandson of the proud head of the house of Steinrück. His mother had married against the old Count's wishes, and he had sworn never to forgive her or her child. The priest's brother adopts the boy and lets him enter the army. As captain he meets his grandfather, who is his general. The events transpire at the time of the German war for unity. Michael's adopted brother is a genial artist, who does much to cheer up those with whom he comes in contact. The old general is finally won over by his young kinsman. Mrs. Wister's translation is smooth and spirited.

Westall, W: A fair crusader: a story of to-day. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 47 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 605.) pap., 20 c.

The scene is varied; opening in England, it changes to Scotland and Delhi, India; George Brandon, on revisiting England, is attracted very much with a young girl who belongs to the religious sect that called themselves "The new crusaders;" after a certain incident which occurs at a small village called Whiteshingles, Brandon loses sight of "the fair crusader," who reappears later, and is undoubtedly the heroine, for her earlier history and later romance make her the most noteworthy character in a strange story.

Westall, W: Her two millions; the story of a fortune. N. Y., Harper, [1887.] 88 p. Q. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., no. 609.) pap., 20 c.

Vera Hardy was the daughter of an Englishman who was fatally wounded in an Italian political fray; recognizing his danger he called Vera's nurse, and intrusted her with an immense fortune, charging her to see that the child is sent to England; Gabrielle's mode of fulfilling the trust involves the appropriating of two million pounds, a scheme to retain the heiress, and constant fear of discovery. This combined with the counter-plotting of English tricksters complicates the plot and makes the recovery of Vera's fortune extremely doubtful.

Westall, W: A queer race; the story of a strange people. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] 5+303 p. S. (Cassell's rainbow ser., v. 1, no. 7.) pap., 25 c.

Business transactions in London bring Mr. Earle, of the Oriental and Occidental Insurance Company, into contact with Tom Bolsoener, an ancient boatswain; then a sea voyage effects a still closer alliance, and Tom rides his hobby, which is a mad search for a treasure-laden Spanish galleon, purported to have been captured by H. M. S. Hecate in 1744, and since that time lost sight of; he substantiates this story by producing proofs that he had inherited from his father; these excite Earle's interest, but the terrible misfortunes that pursue the Diana quickly obliterates every feeling but despair; finally when Mr. Earle and Tom are the only survivors the Diana drifts to an unknown island south of the equator, inhabited by people with a peculiarity of complexion and habits; from this people Mr. Earle elicits some romantic and marvellous information concerning the Santa Anna.

This and the volume following contain the more important of the writings of the Rev. Dr. Whedon, which appeared originally in the Methodist Quarterly Review, and elsewhere. Being of permanent value, and generally inaccessible to the present generation and especially to the young ministers, students and thinkers of the Methodist church, the project of collecting the more important of them in a separate form has received wide approval. This volume contains the longer pieces, and of those only such as the author most esteemed. The companion volume, "Statements," comprises the briefer, but equally valuable discussions, systematized and appropriately arranged.

"Daffodils provides the title for a dainty volume of equally dainty poems by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney. The characteristics of the author's muse—simplicity, sincerity, and naturalness—are manifested at their fullest in the poetry of this book. Delicacy of fancy, sweetness of feeling, and grace of imagination are also to be found here in abundance. The sentiment is always tender o. uplifting, and both diction and versification are as flowing as they are unconventional. The book is beautifully printed on fine paper, and has a very pretty cover, the sides of daffodil-colored cloth, and the back of vellum and gold."—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

Founded upon Otto's widely-used "Conversation grammar," but text and exercises are entirely new. The author claims for his method of teaching the irregular verbs decided practical advantages which will lighten this heaviest burden of French grammar. He does not aim to teach pronunciation at all. Conversations have been carefully prepared, showing the peculiarities of idiomatic usage in both the French and English languages. A succinct view of the relations of French to Latin, introduces the second part. The great philologist of Yale University has made a useful book to assist well-instructed teachers.

Wildrick, Mrs. A zealot in tulle : a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1887. c. 309 p. D. cl., $1 ; pap., 50 c.
Florida seventy years ago is the scene of the early part of the story ; the main story takes place in the Florida of to-day. A treasure buried in an old fort by the Spaniards, at the time of their occupancy, is the fact around which the plot turns. The finder of this treasure keeps his discovery a secret, and his unexplained wealth is the cause of separating him from the woman he loves. Many episodes and incidents and many graphic characters add to the life of the book.

Wilhelmine, Margravine of Baireuth. Memoirs; tr. and ed. by H. R. H. Princess Christian. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] 3-454 p. por. S. cl., $1.75.
The writer of these memoirs was the eldest daughter of Frederick William I. of Prussia, and the sister of Frederick the Great. In a simple, natural way she tells the story of her own and her brother's life at the Russian court, while she was still unmarried and he was the Crown Prince, continuing her own story over some years of her married experience with the Margrave of Baireuth. The whole narrative is one chiefly of gossip and intrigue, deaths and marriages, with details of the most disgraceful family quarrels, in which kings, queens, princes, and princesses are the leading characters. The inside view it gives of the Prussian court, and of the character of Frederick I., makes the work a most valuable historical acquisition. Queen Victoria's daughter Helena, the wife of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, is the translator.

Wilkinson, W: Cleaver. Classic German course in English. N. Y., Chautauqua Press [Phillips & Hunt,] 1887. c. 327 p. D. (After-school ser.) cl., $1.
The object of the present volume is similar to that of the preceding volumes of the series. It aims to enable readers knowing English, but not German, to acquire, through the medium of the former language, a general acquaintance, with the chief classics of German literature. The book opens with a rapid summary sketch and characterization of German literature as a whole. This is followed by chapters on individual German authors no longer living that time has stamped as among the immortals. These are presented through translations, either of prose or verse, accompanied by comments—biographical, explanatory, and critical.

Williams, G: W. A history of the negro troops in the war of the rebellion, 1861–1865; preceded by a review of the military services of negroes in ancient and modern times. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 12+353 p. por. O. cl., $1.75.

The author writes of the military prowess of his own race. He was an officer of artillery in the Republican forces of the Mexican army, and an officer of the Sixth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. He participated in many of the battles he describes, including some of the most severe conflicts of negro troops with the enemy in Virginia. He has been intrusted with the journals and orderly-books of officers from the rank of lieutenant to that of major-general and has been personally acquainted with six major-generals who at one time commanded negro troops. The first chapter is devoted to a summary of the services of negro soldiers in ancient times, beginning with their record in ancient Egypt; then follows a summary of their record in modern times, and then the detailed record of their history in the war of the rebellion. Full index and list of authorities.

Miss Williams has already shown herself a writer of good and helpful words in her former books, "Dorothy Dorchester," "The Hastings," etc. She touches life from the practical side, seeking to teach religion, not in its theory of morals merely but as applied to daily conduct and habitual disposition. The present volume is planned to teach the meaning of St. Paul's wonderful thirteenth of Corinthians. The characters are well drawn and are not by any means too saintly for very actual life. The story is full of interest and the lessons are clearly taught. Incidentally many valuable suggestions concerning Christian work are given.

Wilson, Mrs. Augusta Evans. At the mercy of Tiberius: a novel. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1887. c. 616 p. D. cl., $2.

The author of "Beulah" and "St. Elmo" has always had a wide circle of readers, to whom anything from her pen was welcome. The present novel, in her well-known style, will no doubt find from them general acceptance. It is intense and somewhat sensational, and told in an unusually picturesque style. The heroine, a beautiful, refined girl from New York, who goes South on a business errand, becomes innocently entangled in a murder, through a net of circumstantial evidence, is convicted of the crime and sentenced to expiate it in state's prison. A death-bed promise leads her to willingly accept the character of martyr, but "Tiberius," at whose mercy she is from first to last, rescues her from herself. Strange premonitions and odd freaks of the lightning cast a lurid glare upon the story.

Wilson, Erasmus, ["Quiet observer," pseud.] Quiet observations on the ways of the world. N. Y., Cassell & Co., [1887.] c. 10+475 p. il. and por. D. cl., $1.50.

The first articles or essays, printed under the name of "Quiet observations," appeared in the Pittsburg Despatch, July 23, 1884, and were devoted to the characteristics of the followers of Mr. St. John, at that time the Prohibition candidate for the presidency. They met with great success, and the clear-sighted, witty editor was induced to "write up" all the little foibles of humanity brought to his notice. These articles, covering a period of two years, have now been gathered into a volume, that will help many to "see ourselves as others see us." The tone is kindly, but the wit is incisive.

Wilson, G. H., comp. The musical year-book of the United States: a record of the music performed in the country; with the Boston season in detail. Bost., G. H. Wilson, 1887. c. 36+56 p. S. pap., $1.

"The fourth volume of Mr. George H. Wilson's valuable—and one is tempted to say invaluable—'Musical year-book' appears for the season of 1886–7. The 'Boston musical year-book' is merged in this. This book is a record of the music performed in the United States during the past year, and it not only conveys an idea of the present condition of this art, the trend of development in different parts, but gives also an adequate basis from which one may prophesy something of the future. Mr. Wilson chronicles the performances of opera, orchestral and choral music in New York, with the names of the works, and notes of the leading performers, and goes through all the leading cities in a similar way. The record of the Boston season also embraces all complimentary, miscellaneous, and music-school concerts. The casts in opera are given, and the book preserves, in a convenient and timely manner, the important record of the musical year."—Boston Traveller.

Wilson, H: R. The Russian refugee: a tale of the Blue Ridge. N. Y., T: R. Knox & Co., 1887. c. 8+610 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A long story with a mystery which centres in an old Russian refugee who lives in a cave or cavern in the Blue Ridge Mountains. The daughter of an American, a Miss Hastings, falls down a steep declivity whilst gathering ferns, and is found by the Russian and taken to his hiding-place. The reader is thus introduced to its inmates, and all its interesting surroundings. The Hastings and the Russian and his family find their lives connected from henceforth, many strange and thrilling events issuing. Nihilism and theosophy are in turn the subject of discussion and the motive of the story.

"Notwithstanding the great number of books on China, there is at this time room for another, which should briefly tell what China and the Chinese were before foreign influences had materially changed them, what foreigners have done for or forced them to do, and what remains for foreigners to do, with the prospect of their doing it. In other words, it should make progress in China its burden and text, and in the narrative which follows I have kept that text constantly in mind, and aimed to give the reader the materials for forming an intelligent opinion in reference to it."—From the Preface.

Winslow, Margaret E. The West Beach boys: a seaside story. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 344 p. il. S. cl., $1.15.
Aiming to correct a view she imagines a current one among boys, the author writes a story which should convince her young readers that a religious boy is not of necessity a stupid or tiresome one; this fact is made plainest in Ernest Leroy, although each of the boys summering at West Beach contributed his part to an enjoyable book for little people.

Winsor, Justin, ed. Was Shakespeare Shapleigh? a correspondence in two entanglements. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1887. c. 3-76 p. S. pap., 75 c.
This is a curious addition to Shakespeare literature. It is a careful and ingenious discussion of certain coincidences, which might indicate that possibly Shakespeare was confounded with a Mr. Shapleigh. It is, as its subtitle indicates, an entanglement; and Shakespeare students may take delight in testing their critical skill on it.

"Driver Dallas" resembles the preceding heroes in John Strange Winter's stories in being military; he belongs to the "Royal Horse," but effects an exchange with a member of the "Scarlet Lancers," and goes with that regiment to Egypt; after rather exciting times at the Soudan an event happens which makes him leave hastily for England, where fresh misunderstandings await him; Dallas' spirits are at the lowest ebb when the unexpected again happens, and transforms him into a happy man

"Bootle's Baby," Mignon, reappears aged eleven and spends three months "in quarters" while her parents go to the United States. Captain Lucy has been kind to a little girl and the child is so overcome with gratitude that she follows him all over to "curtsey" to him, until he becomes the langhing-stock of the officers. This child's jealousy of Mignon leads to "Mignon's secret." "Wanted—a wife" tells of the persecution of the veterinary surgeon by the colonel of his regiment, because he refuses to tell a lie.

Sixteen short stories, introducing most of the characters the author's busy pen has made so familiar. Love and war divide the interest in about equal ratio. The author's gifts of humor and pathos are shown to great advantage. "Bootles," Lucy, Laurie, Dickson, and many other favorites play important parts.

Winter, Mrs., and Boy, Mrs., [pseud.] The lost wedding-ring. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1887. c. 4+171 p. S. cl., 75 c.

This is half fiction and half fact; not a story exactly, but a fictitious dialogue in which the causes of post-matrimonial unhappiness are discussed by two bright women —ostensibly by two, the little work being in reality the product of one hand only. It is animated in style, and sound and sensible in many of its theories and suggestions. It is said to be written by the wife of one of the leading citizens of Newport, who has hitherto written very little, and that little only for the young.

The author looks upon the reformation of Luther and Calvin as an ecclesiastical revolution, and upon the reformation in England as an ecclesiastical restoration, whose result was a pruning of religious novelties and a return to primitive and Catholic doctrine. He claims the English church of to-day is the same church first planted in England by apostolic missionaries as the British church. It is a clear and concise history of the events of the reign of Henry VIII., told from the standpoint of a "High Churchman." The historical matter quite outbalances the part devoted to the book of common prayer.

The author explains that "a knight of the cross" "is a youth who is a vassal, or servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is bound to be loyal to his heavenly Prince, and to faithfully obey all his commands." It is not a story-book. It touches many points in the lives of boys and girls, and explains many principles which go to make up pure and strong characters.

The light of natural law is applied to the live, social, and economic topics which are now attracting so much attention. "It aims to expose the abuses and evils which masquerade under the banner of labor, and the bad results of class prejudice and antagonism. Labor combinations, and their effect on the laborer; socialistic tendencies; excess of economic and railroad legislation; the distribution of wealth; principles governing corporations and railroads, and also many other prominent issues, are fully and thoroughly examined, in their connection with unvarying natural laws and principles. It is shown clearly that the business world is permeated by natural law, and that success in any department can only be gained by conformity to it."

He places the hero of his story—Bennie Stout—in positions to exemplify this fact, and to show how a boy of good principle and a strong will can not only resist temptation himself, but can even exert an influence over his elders.

The main purpose of this little book is to show, from observed fact and necessary reason, the existence and reality of spiritual intelligence apart from matter. On the same basis the author examines the functions and scope of spirit, and the relations of the present life to the life beyond, having ascertained the reality of spirit to a future life before indulging in speculations about them. The speculations are curious, many of them ingenious and interesting, and certainly sufficiently bold and advanced to satisfy our "advanced thinkers" in this line of occult science. The book is in the line of "Psychic Studies," although more thoroughly speculative, while that rests on a basis of ascertained facts, in whole or in part.

Woolley, Celia Parker. Love and theology: a novel. Bost., Ticknor & Co., 1887. c. 439 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Arthur Forbes, after leaving college, where he has studied for the Congregational ministry, finds that he cannot preach the doctrines of that sect, but longs to preach liberal Christianity. He is engaged to Rachel Armstrong, daughter of a typical New England deacon. She breaks the engagement, and Arthur goes out West, where he takes charge of a church started by Judge Hunt, a fine character. Arthur's sister is the typical unmarried woman of New England, with "advanced" views. An Episcopal clergyman, a Methodist minister, and advocates of various shades of creed are drawn with fairness and decided talent. The "love" portions of the tale end satisfactorily, but it is in the "theology" that the interest centres. There is a scene in the graveyard at Florence where Theodore Parker is buried in which an excellent description is given of the belief and methods of this earnest reformer.

Wright, C: A corporal's story; experiences in the ranks of Co. C, 81st Ohio Vols., 1861–64. Phil., Ja. Beale, 719 Sansom St., 1887. 130 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Wright, Julia McNair. The heir of Athole; a story. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1887.] c. 320 p. 1 il. S. cl., $1.15.
The book has a purpose—to call attention to the problem of the tramp class. Philip's young life that runs alongside of Barry's has its own interest. But Barry the tramp is more the hero than Philip the heir of Athole. The author has given close study to the class she paints so graphically. Barry is not an antic play of fancy. He represents the intense heathenism that marches side by side with the enlightenment of the nineteenth century. Barry arrives at manhood so thoroughly let alone by both Church and State that his soul possesses as little as is possible besides its original innate ideas, while his native disposition is harmless. Here he comes in contact with the Bible and with religion, and we see the development of his social-life.

Wright, Julia McNair. In black and gold: a story of twin dragons. Bost., Congregational S. S. & Pub. House, [1887.] c. 400 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
The vices of drinking and gaming are likened by the author to the "twin dragons" of Virgil; although intemperance is named in the story as one of the motors for gambling, the latter vice is given prominence because Julia McNair Wright deems that there has been too little said on the subject. A tenement of Boston is the scene of the story, which paints vividly some distressing events in the life of a noted gamester, and the brave endeavors of a child to combat her troubles successfully; also her vain efforts to reform her father, and her attempt to provide her brother with a musical education. Doro's odd ways, quaint sayings, and original mode of gaining a livelihood add much to the book.

Wright, Julia McNair. A made man; a sequel to "The story of Rasmus, or, the making of a man." N. Y., The National Temp Soc. and Pub. House, 1887. c. 2–308 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
The Story of Rasmus was noticed October 9, 1886. In this sequel Rasmus has found his brother Robin well cared for, has himself become manager of the farm of a rich broker, and now plans to have a home and do what he can to make little street-Arabs respectable members of society. A dwarf, Starry Spheres, teaches many valuable lessons. As in all the author's works, "prohibition" is taught on every page.

Wright, Julia McNair. Mother Goose for temperance nurseries; il. by C. S. King. N. Y., National Temp. Soc. and Pub. House, 1887. c. 68 p. il. sq. D. pap., 25 c.

Yan Phou Lee. When I was a boy in China. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1887.] c. 4+111 p. por. D. cl., 60 c.

Yan Phou Lee, is a young Chinese who came to this country several years ago for the purpose of educating himself. After preliminary study of the language under private teachers he entered Yale College, and made rapid progress with his studies, taking high rank for scholarship. He describes in an entertaining manner the peculiarities of child-life in China, the methods of education, the relations existing between parents and children, juvenile amusements, and a variety of other things concerning which the reader will be curious. Although written for the reading of young people, the volume will have deep interest for readers of all ages.

Yonge, Charlotte M. Under the storm; or, Steadfast's charge. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1887. 3+287 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A story about the quiet folk in cottages and farmhouses in the middle of the 17th century, during the wars of the Cavaliers and Roundheads. Steadfast is a little boy, to whom is confided the secret hiding-place of the sacred vessels of the church. His father is shot down by the soldiers and their cottage burnt, and the care of the family falls upon Steadfast. He knows also that his father has money hidden in the cave with the silver chalices, and removing his little sisters and brother to a hut near the cave, with the few cows and sheep left them, he not only nobly fulfils his trust in guarding the treasures, but succeeds in providing for the children. The story ends with Steadfast's marriage and the restoration of Charles II.

Yonge, Charlotte M. Under the storm; or, Steadfast's charge. N. Y., G: Munro, [1887.] 197 p. D. (Seaside lib., pocket ed., no. 1024.) pap., 20 c.

Young, G: A. Whatever is, was. N. Y. Legget Bros., 1887. c. 14+481 p. O. cl., $2.50.

The author aims to expose the inconsistencies of the great leaders of modern thought, and Herbert Spencer, Haeckel, Darwin, J. Stuart Mill, etc., in their theories of the creation. He has put his work in the shape of a series of lectures and informal discussions between a number of philosophers whom he names "Jubal," "Credo," "Yag," "Preacher Congo," and "Mr. Bob Bangyoursoul." "Prof. Credo" presumably expresses the views really held by the author, which are in accord with what is generally accepted as Christian philosophy. Ridicule is his favorite weapon. He shows wide reading and his attacks on materialism are backed by innumerable quotations.

Zogbaum, Rufus Fairchild. Horse, foot, and dragoons: sketches of army life at home and abroad; il. by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1888 [1887.] c. 5–176 p. O. cl., $2.

Episodes in the careers of the horse, foot, and dragoons of France, Great Britain, Germany, and the United States are brightly told and explained by means of upwards of seventy-five illustrations by the artist-author. Every country is introduced by a national song with music. The cover design is a drum resting against stacked rifles.

Zola, Émile. Christine, the model; or, studies of love. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1886.] c. tr. 17–458 p. sq. S. cl., $1.25; pap., 75 c.

Artist life in Paris is the theme and the characters are mainly Bohemian painters, journalists, and literary men, together with the women who have joined their fortunes to theirs. Claude Lantier, son of Gervaise and Lantier of "L'Assommoir" and brother of "Nana," is the hero. He and Christine pervade the book. Claude is a wild enthusiast with an ill-balanced mind. He has decided ability as an artist, but his monomania for founding a new realistic school of painting and producing a masterwork prevents him from attaining success. Biting poverty is finally his lot, and Christine devotedly shares his misery, tortured by jealousy of the women on his canvas, for whom he forsakes her and to whom he gives his passionate adoration. Under the name of Sandoz, Zola personally figures largely in the novel, and the statements made with reference to his life, literary aims, and methods of labor are said to be autobiographical.

Zola, Emile. Renée, (La curée); from the French by J: Stirling. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1887.] c. tr. 23–298 p. sq. S. pap., 75 c.

A study of life in Paris during the second Napoleonic Empire. Renée is the young and beautiful wife of a great contractor and speculator. He by intrigue and bribery discovers the secrets of the government regarding property it proposes buying to lay out the new boulevards, and in a short time amasses a colossal fortune through his speculations. His gorgeous house, his extravagant dinners, the vices and follies of his son Maxime and his wife Renée, and the final degeneration and destruction of the whole family are described in Zola's most graphic style.

CHARLES LAMB'S LETTERS. With Introduction and Notes. By ALFRED AINGER, editor of "Lamb's Collected Works," with a steel portrait, hitherto unpublished. 2 vols., crown 8vo, red smooth cloth, gilt top, $3.00.

The Letters of Charles Lamb are in themselves an autobiography. There is hardly an incident in Lamb's life that the Letters do not deal with, and they are the more interesting because of the circle to which they were addressed. Coleridge, Southey, Wordsworth, Manning, Leigh Hunt, and Hazlitt, not to mention Bernard Barton, Godwin, Barry Cornwall, and Thomas Hood, were all in it, and to each Lamb wrote in a different strain, thus revealing to us points in the character of his friends, as well as much of his own nature.

NEW BOOKS IN 1887.

HALE'S LIGHTS OF TWO CENTURIES. Edited by the Rev. E. E. Hale. With fifty portraits. Large 12mo, $1.75.

"The author's aim was to present, in compact form and chronological sequence, biographical and critical estimates of the fifty men of genius, including prose-writers, poets, painters, sculptors, composers, and inventors, who may, in his judgment, most fairly be described as the master minds or 'master spirits' of the last two centuries." —N. Y. Sun.

DR. PENTECOST'S BIBLE STUDIES. By the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D.D. 344 pages, 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

This will be found to be an invaluable help to the study of the Sunday-School Lessons for 1888, besides having a permanent value to all who possess it.

STEELE'S POPULAR CHEMISTRY. By J. Dorman Steele, Ph.D., author of "Fourteen Weeks in the Sciences." Illustrated. 327 pages, cloth, 12mo. Price for examination, $1.00.

Enlarging somewhat upon the former treatise, with new features and illustrations. Unusual prominence given to that which concerns every-day life.

STEELE'S POPULAR ZOOLOGY. By J. Dorman Steele, Ph.D. Edited by Prof. J. W. P. Jenks, of Brown University. 319 pages, cloth, 8vo. Price for examination, $1.20.

Proceeds from the lowest form of life by natural development to man. Characteristic features are incidental anecdotes, curious facts, biography of animals showing how they act, think, and are inter-related; the system of Analysis by paragraph titles and Table of Representative Forms, the gradual introduction of scientific terms; treatment of Comparative Anatomy. Directions for Collecting Specimens. Broad pages in the new Barnes' type with superb illustrations, which rival any so-called "picture-book."

HAILMANN'S PRIMARY METHODS. By W. N. Hailmann, Supt. of Public Schools, Laporte, Ind. 166 pp., 12mo, 75 cents.

MR. INCOUL'S MISADVENTURE. By EDGAR SALTUS, author of "Balzac: A Study," "The Anatomy of Negation," "The Philosophy of Disenchantment," etc.

This successful novel went to a second edition almost immediately, and after six months' publication is increasing in its sales.

THE BOOK-LOVER'S ENCHIRIDION; or, Thoughts on the Solace and Companionship of Books. Selected from writers of every age, from Solomon and Cicero to Carlyle, Emerson, and Ruskin. By ALEXANDER IRELAND. 12mo, 512 pp., cloth, gilt tops, uncut edges, $1.50.

This, the fourth edition bound in this country from English sheets and with English publisher's imprint, contains almost double the matter of any previous edition sold in America, the third edition having been sold exclusively in England.

SOCIETY VERSE BY AMERICAN WRITERS. Selected by ERNEST DE LANCEY PIERSON. 12mo, cloth, gilt tops, uncut edges, $1.25.

This book, daintily printed by the De Vinne Press, is virtually the first representative collection of Vers de Société by American writers ever published.

THE POETS AND POETRY OF AMERICA. A Satire by LAVANTE, reprinted from the original published in Philadelphia in 1847, with an Introductory Argument by GEOFFREY QUARLES, to show that it was written by Edgar Allan Poe. 16mo, folded paper cover, uncut, 50 cents.

SEA-SPRAY; or, Facts and Fancies of a Yachtsman. By S. G. W. BENJAMIN. 12mo, paper covers, 50 cents.

This book is a collection of vivid narratives of personal experience, useful descriptive papers relating to yachts, and entertaining sea stories.

AND OTHER PROBLEMS, ETHICAL AND RELIGIOUS.

By REV. GEORGE BATCHELOR. These Essays relate to the many new questions of social and religious organization which have been forced upon the modern mind by scientific discovery and economical progress. They do not attempt to offer a panacea for the many evils of social life, but simply to describe and discuss some of the causes of social unrest and religious disintegration. They are hopeful, positive, and constructive. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.
